Spanish Fliers' Own Story of Flight, Rescue

Today

The Spaniards Are Safe.
Tied in 294.
Brains and Railroads.
About Sugar.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THAT the four brave Spanish fliers are safe, rescued off the Azores, is the best news of today.

Maj. Ramon Franco and his plucky comrades, given up for lost nearly a week ago, were picked up 100 miles southeast of the Island of Santa Maria by the British airship carrier Eagle.

THE four men, quite calm, took their adventure as a matter of course. All were well, and their great two-motored plane was salvaged, slightly damaged.

MADRID is delirious with joy. Asked what they mean to do, the four Spaniards replied:

"Start again for America."

They are on their way to Gibraltar as you read this.

UNDAUNTED, Ramon Franco reminds you of the old Spanish governor replying to suggestions, objections and dangers with a brief, aqui commando yo.

SOME news of first importance relates that in the national open golf championship Bobby Jones and Espinosa tied with a score of 294 for 72 holes. They will play off the match today.

That is intensely important to millions.

THE learned professor B. F. G., fond of statistics, says that in a 72-hole golf match you actually play golf about seven minutes, if you play properly and don't stand and wiggle your club too long.

The rest of the time you take a good walk and, if wise, review your own shortcomings. "That," says he, "is what makes golf a good game. It gives you time to think."

THE American Railway Association, mechanics division, reports that railway profits are increased by the use of brains, as well as by increasing population and prosperity.

Freight train speed in 1928 was 25 per cent greater than in 1920, which means adding 25 per cent to the efficiency of engines.

FREIGHT volume is increased 21 per cent since 1920, yet fewer locomotives are needed and consumption of fuel has decreased 12 per cent.

Among other things, do not sell American railroad stocks short. You might lose on that also.

MR. LOVE, representing beet-sugar producers, says President Hoover is in favor of a high sugar tariff. The President knows about sugar and what happens in war when you can't get it, and perhaps he is not in favor of discouraging Cuba.

He knows that high sugar tariff means enormous profits for sugar growers in the Phillippines and the Hawaiian islands. Sugar from these countries pays no tariff.

THE good missionaries in Hawaii, not letting their right hand know what the left was doing, gathered in all the sugar properties of Hawaii while they were saving the natives, now largely extinct. Raw Hawaiian sugar is taken to the United States and turned, each year, into 700,000 tons of refined sugar which doesn't pay any tariff. This amount, of course, will increase gigantically under a higher tariff.

THE high tariff will crush Cuban sugar industry, without helping the beet sugar gentlemen so much as they hope.

If war came we should be compelled to look to Cuba for our sugar, because bringing it from Hawaii and the Philippines would be too far and dangerous.

It is dangerous to plan the ruin of Cuban sugar production at our very doors.

To be elected President by a plurality of 20,000,000, with 120,000,000 people enthusiastically expecting great things, and then do nothing but talk about bootleggers and their murders, prohibition enforcement and its killings must be tiresome to a great engineer. He did not run for the office of "bootleg manager."

PROHIBITION officials had printed many pamphlets, planned the distribution of them in public schools, and a great prohibition campaign in all the public schools.

President Hoover has squelched the publications and the school campaign.

WASHINGTON reports that when you go to Russia, taking a letter of introduction from Senator Borah, you find everything wide open, the Soviet union delighted to see you.

THIS doesn't mean, as some one suggests, that Senator Borah is in sympathy with Russians that shot the Czar. It means that Borah has common sense, knows enough not to tell a firmly established government what it must do. He is exactly the right man to be chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

NO STRINGS are attached to Borah, pulled by silly boy bankers of Wall street that lent money to Russia, when an incubator baby might have known better.

GERMANY lifts the ban, the former Kaiser may live in his native land on one of his numerous estates, if he chooses.

But he probably won't go. Holland is calm, safe. Germany might be "different."

And the familiar drive in Unter den Linden, through the Brandenburger Gate, would be soured by the thought of the old imperial

STRONG WIND DROVE PLANE PAST AZORES

Drifted 7 Days on Sea After Petrol Supply Was Exhausted; All Found Well

Universal Service.

LONDON, June 29.—A harrowing account of their experiences in being buffeted about by high winds and choppy seas for seven days on the Atlantic, with the dread spectre of impending doom always in the foreground, was radioed to the British Admiralty offices to day by Maj. Ramon Franco, commander of the Numancia, which was rescued off the Azores by the British aircraft carrier Eagle at dawn today.

HOMEWARD BOUND

Maj. Franco and his three companions, Capts. Gallarza and Ruiz deAlda and Sergt Mechanic Madariaga are now safe aboard the Eagle on the way to Gibraltar. Their plane was also salvaged. Maj. Franco's message read:

"We were forced to land at dawn on the 22nd (Saturday) somewhere southwest of the Azores ,after losing our way during the night."

(This bore out the report from the S. S. Greldon, British merchant steamer, that the motors of the Numancia were heard about 100 miles south of the Azores early Saturday morning.)

FORCED TO LAND

"We took off again," continued the message, "and were forced to land by lack of petrol at a spot we estimated to be about 40 miles from Fayal." (Fayal is the westernmost island of the Azores, and Horta is the principal city there).

"The flight had been uneventful until we reached Cape St. Vincent at 9 o'clock Friday night, when we were

Hawks' Hop Eclipse To Army's Flight

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—Plans of the Army Air Corps for a 36-hour flight from the East Coast to the West Coast and return have been abandoned in view of the successful flight of Capt. Frank M. Hawks, from New York to Los Angeles and back.

In announcing cancellation of the flight, which was to have been made July 2 by Capt. Ross Hoyt, the Army congratulated Hawks for demonstrating not only "supreme courage and masterly skill, but wonderful physical endurance and accurate navigation ability."

City to Open Pools, Showers Wednesday

Fourteen city swimming pools will open Wednesday and 45 showers will be put into use by city firemen. Fifty-four playground centers will open also under the direction of the Bureau of Recreation for the summer programs.

Lowman, Hoover Deny Dry Chief Will Quit Post

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 29.

THE White House authorized a flat denial today of a story carried out of Washington by a news service that Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Seymour Lowman, in charge of prohibition, had been requested to resign by President Hoover.

The President told a questioner that he "hadn't even thought of it."

Lowman also denied the story. "My resignation has not been requested; I have not resigned; and I do not contemplate resigning," Lowman said.

Officials characterized the story as speculative rumors arising out of the recent flurry over prohibition killings and the plan to introduce prohibition propaganda in the public schools.

CAPONE TRIAL RULED LEGAL

PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—(INS.)—Judge John Walsh refused to grant a writ of error for "Scarface Al" Capone today. The court ruled no errors had been made in his arrest, trial and sentence to one year in jail for carrying concealed deadly weapons.

The only recourse left the Chicago racketeer is an appeal to the State Supreme Court. His counsel, Congressman M. Golder, is expected to file the appeal at an early date.

The ruling was handed down after Judge Walsh, the jurist who sentenced Capone, had listened to arguments by Golder and the assistant district attorneys who opposed them. Capone was not in court. A packed courtroom heard the arguments.

3 Passengers Hurt In Taxi Collision

Three men were injured, one seriously, when two taxicabs collided at Sennott street and Oakland avenue Saturday night. Both drivers were arrested and later released on bond. The injured were passengers in one cab. Michael Conway, 25, of 2312 Sidney street, South Side, suffered a possible fracture of the spine; James Garvey, 80, of 2302 Carson street, South Side, fractured ribs, and Robert Cullen, 27, of 1829 Sarah street, lacerations on the body.

Deaf Mute Held In Wife's Death

YORK SPRINGS, Pa., June 29.—(INS.)—Clarence Weiss, of Harrisburg, a deaf mute, was brought to Gettysburg and held by police today in connection with the mysterious death of the nude and disfigured woman whose body, identified by Weiss as his deaf mute wife, was found on the bank of Bermudian Creek here yesterday.

Two Are Killed As Train Hits Auto

SHARON, Pa., June 29.—James McGavin, aged 26, was killed instantly and Miss Dolly Infield, aged 23, local school teacher of Jackson Center, was fatally hurt when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by a Sharpsville-New Wilmington train at a crossing on the Mercer road late this evening.

The accident is the third at this crossing in the past year. Only one passenger train a day operates over this line.

Boy Hops Ice Truck, Dies Under Wheels

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., June 29.—Robert, 5, son of Dorsel Higgins, was crushed to death today when one wheel of the W. I. Anderson Ice Company's truck passed over his head after he fell while hopping the machine.

REPAY $500,000 GARBAGE CASH, MALONE INSISTS

Council Head Demands Company Stockholders Return Money Paid as Dividend

Controller Henry O. Evans was advised Saturday by President of Council James F. Malone to demand that stockholders of the American Reduction Company return $500,000 paid in dividends last week after Evans had formally notified Council that the company had improperly charged $1,000,000 for removing garbage and rubbish during the years 1921 to 1928 under a cost-plus contract.

Evans appeared before Council in special session Saturday and obtained unanimous approval for a $5,000 appropriation to continue an audit of the company's books, begun about a month ago.

Evans indicated that legal proceedings to recover the city's claims would begin early this week.

WILL GET FUNDS

Evans had asked for $10,000, but it was found that only $5,000 was available now. Evans agreed that the $5,000 would be enough for present needs and was assured that he would be provided with all the funds he required.

The audit will require a minimum of two months and might run five months, Evans said.

Malone explained that the present owners were negotiating to sell the company and that the recent dividend payments should be returned to the available cash of the concern to meet payments due the city.

Reports were current last week after Evans had disputed the company's accounts that the concern had been sold to John Gillespie, of Detroit. Gillespie has admitted signing an agreement to buy the company and stated that the entire stock consisted of 5,000 shares.

All the stock was owned by the George Flinn estate and records are not available of previous stock dividend payments.

SALE NOT COMPLETED

Evans declared he was aware of the proposed sale of the company, but that the transfer had not been consummated. Malone said he understood the sale was to be completed July 16.

Besides seeking a return of the $500,000 dividend payments, Malone

Two Film Players Injured in Crash

SANTA MONICA, Cal., June 29.—(INS.)—Ann Carter, picture actress; Jewel Richford, another screen player, and two men escorts were injured near here today when their automobile crashed into an embankment and overturned on the coast highway.

Plane Forced Down, Fire Destroys Mail

TULSA, Okla., June 29.—(AP.)—A National Air Transport air mail plane flying from Ponca City to Tulsa was destroyed by fire early today after a forced landing had been made by Pilot Earl Rockwood, about 20 miles northeast of here. Rockwood was only slightly injured. The mail was lost.

Ysaye Recovering After Amputation

BRUSSELS, June 29.—(AP.)—Reassuring news came today from the bedside of Eugene Ysaye, famous Belgian violinist, whose leg was recently amputated after treatment for diabetes. Mme. Ysaye said that her distinguished husband was making excellent progress.

Tooth Knocked Out, Girl Sues For $20,000

FOR the loss of one upper tooth, three broken lower teeth and the dislocation of her right jaw, when she was struck by an automobile, Maria Pedulia, 1902 Federal street, has brought suit against John C. Park for $20,000 damages.

Miss Pedulia, a minor and daughter of Carlo Pedulia, who joins in the action filed in Common Pleas Court, alleges she was crossing Mercy street at Federal street extension, May 10, when the Park machine struck her and knocked her down. Her counsel is David S. Keilly.

What Is the Administration At Washington Going To Do About THIS?

What has become of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law and the other measures to protect the public from oppressive monopolies?

The great interstate public service corporations of the country have become more and more defiant of the provisions of these anti-monopoly measures, more and more defiant of the Government, more and more defiant of the citizenship.

The Radio Corporation of America, which already mainly monopolizes the radio field, has now gone into the moving picture field in an attempt to monopolize that interstate industry.

And the Radio Corporation, through Mr. Leon J. Rubinstein, its representative, in the effort to monopolize these vital avenues for the information and entertainment of the public, declares insolently:

"WE ARE GOING AHEAD TO BUY AND BUILD THEATERS, AND WHAT COMPETITION WE CAN'T SWALLOW INTO OUR ORGANIZATION WE WILL DYNAMITE OUT OF THE FIELD."

Mr. Hiram Brown, chairman of the board of the Radio Corporation of America, said further, according to the Los Angeles Times:

"BOTH THE FOX AND PARAMOUNT MOVING PICTURE ORGANIZATIONS REFUSED TO SELL TO US. IT HAS BEEN REPORTED THAT WE SOUGHT AFFILIATION WITH THESE COMPANIES. THIS IS NOT TRUE. WE SOUGHT TO BUY THEM OUT ENTIRELY. RADIO IS TOO BIG TO BE IN THE MOVING PICTURE FIELD WITHOUT BEING A DOMINATING FACTOR."

Is Radio too big, Mr. Hiram Brown, to obey the laws of the land?

Is it too big to respect the Congress and the courts, and the purposes and processes of this American Government, under whose protection the Radio Corporation has swollen to such bigness and to such insolence?

Is it too big to consider the welfare of the public whose patronage and patience have given this Radio Corporation the great wealth and the great power which it boasts and abuses?

If the Radio Corporation of America is as big as it says it is, as indifferent to law and government as it thinks it is, and as contemptuous of public opinion and public interest as it seems to be, then it is time for the citizens of this country and their representatives in government to reduce the size of this bully and braggart, especially about the head, and to restrain the destructive operations of this menacing monopoly.

The tendency towards monopolization of the moving picture industry has been proceeding for some time.

Paramount has bought chain after chain of theaters.

Warner Brothers has bought the First National Company and the Vitagraph Company.

Fox has lately bought the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Company.

And the Radio Corporation has entered the moving picture field by securing control of the Keith Corporation and Pathe.

The battle is now on between these gigantic spiders of monopoly to see which will eat up the others.

The Radio Corporation boldly announces its purpose and policy when Mr. Rubinstein, its representative, states that "WHAT WE CAN'T SWALLOW WE WILL DYNAMITE OUT OF THE FIELD."

But the American people do not like DYNAMITERS, Mr. Rubinstein.

The American people are ready to restrain dynamiters, whether these be among the ranks of the I. W. W., or in the more exclusive class of big and brutal business.

One way the American public has of restraining dynamiters is to send them to jail; and remember that there IS a jail penalty attached to the Sherman law; and remember, too, that the American public has lately demonstrated that it is POSSIBLE to send a million dollars to jail.

It might even be possible to send a billion dollars to jail.

One thing is certain, Mr. Rubinstein and Mr. Hiram Brown, the American people do not like Bolshevism in business, Nihilism in industry. THEY DO NOT LIKE DYNAMITERS.

They do not believe in "DYNAMITING COMPETITION OUT OF THE FIELD."

They do not believe in force and violence as substitutes for right and reason.

They will not approve of your declared purpose to rule or ruin.

They admire the enterprise and genuine genius of the legitimate leaders in finance and business.

But they will not tolerate the piratical policies of the Captain Kidds of industry.

They will not permit the illegal acts of the outlaws of business, the highwaymen of high finance.

Time was when the railroads took the insolent and truculent attitude which the Radio Corporation and the telephone trust and the power trust take today.

Then it was that Mr. Vanderbilt said, "THE PUBLIC BE DAMNED;" and Mr. Huntington said that the freight rates would be "ALL THAT THE TRAFFIC WOULD BEAR."

But the public declined to be damned, and obstinately refused to pay all that the traffic would bear.

So the Interstate Commerce Commission was formed to regulate the railroads and protect the public from either being damned or robbed.

Now the citizenship of the nation needs another interstate commission to regulate the Radio Corporation, the telephone trust, the power trust, and other interstate outlaws.

This time the American public needs to be protected first from being damned, and then robbed, and finally DYNAMITED.

Fortunately Senator Couzens has a bill before the Senate to create just such a commission, and until that bill is passed the Government at Washington might try ENFORCING the laws which already exist.

However, the public has learned—and so have the trusts—that not much is to be expected in the way of public protection from a reactionary Republican government.

Such a government will enforce measures to shoot citizens down on suspicion, and to put citizens in jail for five years for misdemeanors, but not to restrain law-breaking trusts, which happen also to be campaign contributors.

So probably the people will have to put their faith in the Progressive-Democratic Alliance, WHICH WILL ELECT THE NEXT PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, AND CONTROL THE NEXT NATIONAL GOVERNMENT.

MALONE ONLY ANNOUNCED OPPONENT

Mackrell, Magee, Martin, Drew, Lang, Oliver Touted As Possible Candidates

Mellon's Position Unknown As Factional Fight Pends; Kline Claims Armstrong

Mayor Charles H. Kline announced late Saturday that he will seek re-election.

His announcement, expected for some time, indicates a hot battle for the mayoralty nomination at the September primary.

President of Council James F. Malone formally entered the race several weeks ago. Friends of Judge Richard W. Martin expect him to toss his hat into the ring as an independent candidate.

Many others have been mentioned as possible candidates. Among them are former Mayor William A. Magee, Judge James B. Drew, Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell, A. K. Oliver and Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang.

THOUSANDS URGE ACTION

The Mayor's statement follows:

"I am a candidate to succeed myself as mayor of the City of Pittsburgh and my name will positively appear on the ballot for this office in the September primaries. I am led to this decision because of the thousands of friends who have supported me during my present term and I do not believe I would be true to them or to myself if I declined to enter the field.

"At the proper time and place I shall enunciate the principles upon which I propose to wage my campaign. In the meantime I want to thank the countless numbers in all walks of life who have voluntarily tendered me their support and to assure them that I start with every confidence of victory."

MELLON SILENT

Former Republican State Chairman W. L. Mellon, who was instrumental in persuading Kline to seek the mayoralty four years ago, has not yet revealed his attitude. He is reported as being anxious to avoid

Lawrenceville Man, Blind, Loses Sister Guardian

A new sadness has entered the life of Charles M. Gallaher, 62, blind, of 333 Fisk street.

His sister, Lena, 64, lifelong companion and protector, lies dead in the humble home in which she for so many years had brightened his sightless hours.

On Wednesday the blind man told Deputy Coroner John Danner, he had conversed with his sister. She was feeling ill. The next day he heard her breathing in labored fashion.

On Friday the sound of her breathing ceased. He passed his fingers over her face, but brought no response. He listened for her heart beat. It was stilled.

Feeling his way out of the house the blind man notified neighbors, then returned home. Today, in silent grief, he sits with his unseeing eyes turned toward a casket.

Lena Gallaher, unmarried, had devoted her life to her brother, neighbors said. A modest pension received by her as a retired postal employe enabled them to live.

Postal employes, interested in the aged man's fate, were preparing to see that he was properly cared for, it was reported Saturday.

Plane Ready to Start Service to Downtown Airport

RIVER LANDING WHARF O. K. BY CITY AWAITED

6-Passenger Amphibian Plane Groomed by Pittsburgh Firm for Inaugural Flight.

Prepared to fly to Pittsburgh as soon as City Council approves the proposed downtown airport on the north bank of the Monongahela River, a six-plane cabin amphibian plane will inaugurate passenger air service into the Golden Triangle, it was learned Saturday.

Pittsburgh Aviation Industries, Inc., affiliated with the Aviation Corporation of America, one of the largest operating aeronautical concerns in the United States, will operate the plane, the first of a proposed fleet, for inter-city travel that eventually will link with other transcontinental air lines carrying passengers and mail.

A public hearing on Pittsburgh Aviation Industries' application for permission to use the city wharf below the Wabash Railroad bridge across the Monongahela River will be held Monday.

SIX-PASSENGER PLANE

The ship, which, it is understood, has been purchased by Pittsburgh Aviation Industries, is a Loening cabin amphibian, powered with a 525-horsepower Wright cyclone motor. It has accommodations for six passengers, two pilots and baggage. Detroit and Cleveland, at the present time, are the only cities linked with daily scheduled amphibian service.

Thompson Aeronautical Corporation operated amphibian planes between these two lake cities, carrying passengers, mail and express y, landing at will either on d or on the water, the planes ing to the terminals on land by r own power.

ittsburgh, with its three rivers rding abundant landing facili- is particularly fortunate, ac- ding to persons interested in advancement of aeronautics s. Within the past week river , business interests and numer- other persons with a thought he future of Pittsburgh in avi- n, have urged Council's favor- action on the application for ermit to use the Monongahela arf.

The planes could land either he Ohio River below the Point ge, or the upper stretches of the Monongahela and Alle- ny Rivers, it is pointed out, and to the wharf terminal.

ittsburghers who would use the airways would benefit particularly, inasmuch as the long automobile end of their journey to the business section of the city would be shortened considerably. Pittsburgh's present airports all are located on the outskirts, a fact necessitating a long ride into the city, requiring from 30 minutes to an hour by automobile.

OPPONENTS' STAND

Pittsburgh Aviation Industries' airport is located almost 30 miles from the downtown section on the Pittsburgh-Butler road. Bettis, Rodgers and Mayer fields are nearer, but none of them less than 25 or 30 minutes from the city.

Opponents of the river landing privilege have protested the wharf plan as dangerous to river craft as well as the air passengers themselves. There is actually less danger in landing on the water than on land, Aviation Industries engineers declare.

MAHONING SETS STEEL RECORD

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 29.—Mid-West Iron and Steel Industry brought to a close today the most active first half in the annals of the industry in Mahoning and Shenango Valleys, in tonnage production and in earnings for the independents.

June proved a record month for the sixth month of the year, in steel ingot and strip output.

Truscon Steel Company, leading fabricating interest in this area, reports that June was the biggest month in its history, with shipments setting new records and production 10 per cent above normal activity.

Because of the fourth holiday, production of ingots and finishing mills declines for the first week in June. Some interests will stop their rolling mills Wednesday night, for remainder of the week. In most cases, steel plants will stop for Thursday only.

Sheet mill schedules vary, but for the most part such mills will suspend Wednesday afternoon. Independent tin mills will be idle for the week.

Both Youngstown Sheet and Tube and Republic Steel average 85 per cent and Carnegie Steel Company 88 per cent.

Into the Elmhurst Inn, Sewickley residential hotel, there strode Saturday an uninvited guest, a mask covering his face, a pistol in his right hand.

Business-like he approached the room clerk, Pierre Andree.

"Open that safe," the uninvited guest ordered.

"I can't," Andree answered. "I don't know the combination."

The none-too-social guest ruminated. A half-loaf, he remembered, was better than none.

He saw a watch in Pierre's vest pocket; he took it. He saw the cash register; he emptied it, getting $50. He saw the telephone wires; he snapped them in two.

Church Should Heed Bishop's Advice and Shun All Politics

For his foresight and his courage in warning the Methodist Church not to get into politics Bishop Collins Denny deserves the whole-hearted commendation of his Methodist brethren and of his fellow Americans of all denominations.

Under the American system of government church and state are separate. And this separation conforms to the mandate of the founder of Christianity who said:

"Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's and to God the things that are God's."

In opposing the resolution of a district Methodist conference pledging to President Hoover the hearty co-operation of the Methodist Church in his program for prohibition enforcement, Bishop Denny said:

"I DO NOT THINK IT IS WITHIN THE SPHERE OF THE CHURCH TO DO SUCH THINGS. I FEAR IT MEANS THE ULTIMATE DIVISION OF THE METHODIST CHURCH, FOR MANY WILL REFUSE TO BE DRAGGED AS A CHURCH INTO POLITICS."

Nothing is worse for the nation than for the churches to be dragged into politics; and nothing is worse for the churches.

It is to be hoped that all churches will heed Bishop Denny's advice and KEEP OUT OF POLITICS.

Let them attend to their religious duties. There is plenty for them to do.

Let them preach MORALITY.

Let them preach TEMPERANCE; temperance and moderation in all things.

And let them so keep THEMSELVES free from partisanship and fanaticism.

Cool and calm and unbiased consideration of the prohibition question would make many of them realize that PROHIBITION HAS FAILED AS A TEMPERANCE MEASURE; that lawlessness and violence on the part of enforcement officers, and the murder of innocent fathers and mothers of families will not make prohibition a temperance measure.

The churches should lead the way in righteousness and reason, not in force and violence.

If the churches go into politics and become violent partisans they will lose their influence; and that is a sad thing to contemplate.

Because the world needs the influence of the churches when it is exercised with justice and with reason, with moderation and with TEMPERANCE.

GARBAGE CASH RETURN ASKED

directed Dr. C. B. Maits, director of the health department, to keep in close contact with Controller Evans with a view of taking over the company's plant, if necessary, to insure the fullest protection to public health by continuing regular service in the disposal of garbage and rubbish.

The controller informed council that he had declined to approve payment of the company's bill for May amounting to $143,000.

Evans made his disclosures of the disputed accounts last Thursday and explained to council that he had a tentative agreement with the company to submit the disputed items to arbitration. Evans said he had proposed either Judge Ambrose B. Reid or Judge Elder W. Marshall as arbitrator, the decision to be final and conclusive.

COMPANY ASKS SUIT

Council concurred in that arrangement, but the company issued a letter to newspapers stating that the publicity given out by Evans forced the company to insist on a law suit. Evans replied that he was satisfied to go to court.

Evans has contended that the company had charged to the cost of disposing of city garbage and rubbish the following items:

Donations, $12,000; advertising, $11,000; radio set for W. F. Hill, president of the company, $135; initiation fees and incidental expense in connection with Hill's membership in the Duquesne Club, $568; salary of the late George H. Flinn for four years during Hill's incumbency as head of the company, $93,000; plant replacements, $276,456; rent, $148,999; factory incidental experiment, $52,691; investigations, $27,127; equipment, $44,143; and other miscellaneous items.

The company has returned $960,000 to the city during the eight years of the cost-plus contract, but Evans said the sum should have been twice that amount.

BIG YEARLY COST

Garbage and rubbish removal has cost the taxpayers $9,600,000 during the eight years of the cost-plus system. Annual appropriations ranged from $1,157,000 to $1,158,000.

Disclosures of Controller Evans' contentions have been followed by the resignation of W. E. Breitenstein, an employe of the controller's office for 20 years. During the last eight years his duties included making an audit of the American Reduction Company's books to determine the amount of rebates due the city each year under the cost-plus contract.

WOMAN GIVEN 6-TO-30 YEARS FOR BURGLARY

Plea She Merely Watched Husband From Parked Car Fails to Stay Sentence.

International News Service.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 29.—Judge David Jenkins, in Common Pleas Court, today sentenced Mrs. Ruth M. Livermore, convicted of burglary, to not less than six nor more than 30 years' imprisonment.

She was found guilty by a jury of burglarizing the home of John N. Mitchell here April 16, 1928. Mrs. Livermore had protested her innocence, claiming that she accompanied her husband to the Mitchell home, but sat outside in a car while he entered the residence.

Mrs. Livermore was taken to a Pittsburgh orphanage at the age of 2. She later was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Swisher, of Enon Valley, Pa.

BECOMES TEACHER

When Ruth was 14 her home with the Swishers was broken up. Swisher's body was found one morning in the barn, dangling from a beam. Determined to have an education, the girl finally qualified for a teacher's certificate and taught at Hillsville, Pa., for eight months.

Desire for additional education sent her to New Castle, Pa., where she found employment and where, later, she met Lester Livermore, who was to become her common-law husband. Livermore was a taxicab driver.

Her case attracted nationwide attention because many persons accepted as true her story that she pleaded guilty to burglary in October, 1928, only because she had been told that by saving the county the cost of a trial she would escape with a light sentence.

Because the burglary was committed after night the maximum penalty was life imprisonment and that was the sentence imposed by Common Pleas Judge George Gessner in October.

Livermore also pleaded guilty and received a similar sentence in the state penitentiary.

It was then that Attorney Ben Sacharow, of Cleveland, entered the case in the girl's behalf. His motion for a trial by jury was overruled in Mahoning County Common Pleas Court, but the Seventh Ohio District Appellate Court reversed the lower court and ordered the trial.

SOLD LOOT HERE

Mrs. Livermore asserted she sat in a parked car while her husband broke into the Mitchell residence and obtained loot valued in excess of $7,000. They then drove to Pittsburgh, she testified, where they disposed of some of the loot.

Indictments face the Livermores in Pittsburgh, but, according to the girl's counsel, authorities there had consented to defer prosecution if the former school teacher were freed here.

When the jury returned a verdict of guilty, with mercy recommended, late yesterday after deliberating for 23 hours, she burst into tears and was led from the courtroom by the sheriff's wife.

Exiled Sandino Still Is a Rebel

VERA CRUZ, June 29.—(AP.)—Accompanied by 25 armed men, Augustino Sandino, former Nicaraguan insurgent leader, was here today en route to exile at Merida, Yucatan. He arrived yesterday from Guatemala, having been given the government's permission to reside in Mexico.

MEXICO CITY, June 29.—(AP.)—Dispatches to Mexico City newspapers from Vera Cruz said Augustino Sandino, upon his arrival from Guatemala yesterday, addressing a large crowd in the street from the balcony window of his hotel, told them he had left Gen. Estrada in charge of his men in Nicaragua and that they would continue to fight while he himself sought recognition for their cause in other countries.

Action on French Debt Is in Sight

PARIS, June 29.—(AP.)—Early ratification of the French debt settlements with both the United States and Great Britain now is considered a certainty since Ambassador Claudel at Washington reported that there was no chance of postponing the maturity date of the debt for American war stocks.

M. Claudel's report of his conversation with Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, in the course of which Mr. Stimson made plain that the American government could not accede to the postponement request of the Chamber of Deputies, cleared the atmosphere in Paris.

EDITH MASON SEEKS DIVORCE

CHICAGO, June 29. — (AP.) — A supressed divorce bill filed by Edith Mason, prima donna, of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, against her husband, Giorgio Polacco, music director of the company, was made public officially today, after news of the action became known to local newspapers.

Both hold contracts with the Chicago Opera Company for next season.

Miss Mason charged the conductor with cruelty, set forth that he once threatened to kill her with a pistol, that he upbraided her often and sometimes backstage just before she was to sing a difficult role and that he once told her American wives and cattle were somewhat the same.

MARRIED IN 1919

The couple was married June 29, 1919. They have one 4-year-old daughter. Both were expected by friends to seek her custody.

Miss Mason, who is remaining in seclusion at Highland Park, Ill., near Chicago, is 36 years old. Her father was a St. Louis grain operator. Polacco is 54 years old. He now is on the high seas enroute home from Italy.

Miss Mason said in the bill that she suffered a nervous breakdown in Ferbuary because of continued harranguing by Polacco. Also, she alleged, Polacco had to be restrained from striking her.

Polacco rose to fame at 22 when he became director of the famous orchestra at the Lyric International in Milan, Italy. He met Miss Mason while directing the Metropolitan Opera Company, of New York, of which she was a member.

Five More Boys In Edison Contest

ORANGE, N. J., June 29.—(INS.)—With the entrance of five more youths into the contest being conducted by Thomas A. Edison to select the most promising American boy, the total of states represented in the competition reached a total of 28 today.

Washington, the first Pacific Coast state to be entered, is represented by Wilbur R. Huston, of Fort Madison, it was announced at Edison's home today. Other new entrants are Rhode Island, represented by Norman Farrington, of Pawtuckett; Florida, represented by James Schackleford, Gainesville, Charles Witcom, of Umatilla, alternate; Vermont, represented by Harold William Davis, of Rutland; John Todd Cowels, of Burlington, alternate, and North Carolina, represented by D. Allen Harrell, of Scotland Neck.

5 Killed in German Airplane Explosion

LINDAU, Germany, June 29.—(AP.)—Five passengers were killed and two seriously injured today when a new airplane, the D-1620, exploded and fell into Lake Constance.

The machine was about to alight on the lake when a sharp explosion took place. The plane sank.

There were seven people aboard the machine, five passengers, a pilot and a navigation officer.

Boats saved Johann Firley, of Friedberg, and Hermann Wuester, of Barmen. They suffered broken ribs and other injuries.

23 HURT IN BUS UPSET; SHERIFF GRILLS DRIVERS

Many Pittsburghers Included In Casualty List; 6 Taken To Youngstown Hospital.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 29.—(AP.)—Two drivers of a bus which overturned six miles south of here today, injuring 22 of 27 passengers, were to be questioned tonight by Deputy Sheriff L. C. Parker, of Mahoning County.

The drivers are Jack Irvine, Pittsburgh manager of the Nevin bus line, who was at the wheel of the bus when it crashed, and Eugene Pasquala. Both men were bruised severely.

Only six persons remained tonight in the hospital to which the injured were taken. They were Pasquala and Samuel Schuman, New York, whose spine was fractured. Pasquala said an automobile ahead of the bus failed to turn out to let the larger machine pass and suddenly slowed down. Irvine threw on the emergency brake, Pasquala said, and the wheels locked, causing the bus to skid into a stone culvert. The big vehicle was whirled around and thrown into a ditch on its side. Ambulances and a police emergency car from Youngstown brought the injured to a hospital here.

SECOND BUS WRECKED.

F. E. Molton, division supervisor of the bus line, said the wreck was accidental and his company would not act against the drivers.

A few hours after the wreck, another bus bound from Youngstown to Salem went into a ditch, three miles southwest of Canfield. Seven passengers were shaken up but continued their trip on another bus.

Thirteen persons from the Pittsburgh district were among the injured.

IN HOSPITAL

The six still in the Youngstown Hospital are:

EUGENE PASQUALA, 30, of 1314 Middle street, Sharpsburg, possible fractured spine.
SAM SCHUMAN, 70, of New York City, possible fractured spine.
GUS GLANCE, of Cleveland, fractured ribs.
CLIFF MEYERS, of Cleveland, possible fractured spine.

PITTSBURGHERS

Passengers who were injured, but not taken to the hospital include nine Pittsburghers. A partial list follows:

JAMES KATZ, 19, 134 Herron avenue, Pittsburgh.
F. LORAINE, 25, 6802 Wade Park avenue, Cleveland.

forced to gain height owing to excessive air disturbances.

"Between Cape St. Vincent and the Azores lay a thick layer of clouds, above which we had to fly. About half way to our goal another thick cloud layer formed above us, and we flew virtually blind through a white blanket.

PASSED BY AZORES

"We circled in an attempt to near the Azores until dawn, when we took our longitude and latitude by shooting the sun. Then we discovered we were southwest of the Azores.

"The clouds continued to hamper our visibility, and we decided to land and economize fuel and examine the situation more exactly.

"After checking our position, we took off again, heading for Fayal. Owing to a strong head wind, we ran out of petrol about 40 miles from Fayal, where we were forced to land in the ocean.

DRIFTED SOUTHWARD

"A northeasterly wind driftedd us south, and on the 23rd we were about 100 miles from Fayal. During the night the wind shifted to the southwest, reaching gale force, and drifting us in the direction of Santa Maria. (Santa Maria is the southeasternmost island of the Azores group). The Numancia withstood the terrible buffeting superbly.

"From the 24th to the 27th we were buffeted by winds of varying force, and on the morning of the 27th the wind again reached the force of a gale, whipping the sea into a fury.

"The situation became extremely dangerous, but again the Numancia saved us.

"At dawn on the 29th the Eagle found us in the vicinity of Santa Maria. The behavior of our aircraft and its engines was magnificent throughout."

NEWS THRILLS SPAIN

MADRID, June 29.—The Spanish nation is on its knees today as every hamlet, even into the Pyrenees, is singing the praises of the British nation and its aircraft carrier Eagle, which just as the search was to be abandoned, found Major Ramon Franco and his crew of three safe aboard their seaplane Numancia, adrift for a week in the Atlantic.

The trans-Atlantic plane was picked up after being battered about on a choppy sea about 150 miles south of the Azores. The plane was little damaged from its seven days of tossing, while the crew were happy and in good health.

Major Franco, immediately after the Eagle had flashed the news of success to the waiting Spanish nation, then radioed the Madrid government station:

"We are perfectly well. Regards."

The Eagle, which had scoured the region between the Portuguese coast and the Azores, turned southeastward toward the Madeira Islands last night, hoping to find some trace of the plane near the spot at which wreckage was reported to have been sighted. Two planes which had taken off from the big aircraft carrier located the missing seaplane, and returned to the mother snip with the information.

The Eagle is now proceeding to Gibraltar, where it is expected to dock Tuesday, as it is making only 15 knots an hour. The carrier has aboard both the crew and the airplane.

The other members of the crew are Captains Ruiz de Alda and Gallarz, and Sergeant Mechanic Madariaga. They took off in the Numancia from Los Alcanzares airdrome, near Cartagena, last Friday at 5 p. m. They were last definitely reported by the S. S. Greldon, British merchantman, which radioed during the search it had discerned the Numancia's motors humming in the night at almost the spot at which the missing aviators were picked up.

MADRID REJOICES

Madrid went wild when the news which place the British consul had first informed, and which had informed the Spanish consul. The news first reached here at 11:01 a. m. (6:01 N. Y. time).

The receipt of the news at the Spanish air ministry provoked a spontaneous outburst of wild, unruly enthusiasm, and crowds gathered in the streets, jamming traffic at the Plaza del Sol, the main corner, and preventing any semblance of ordinary conduct. Parades started spontaneously, and all made for the British embassy, where the crowds cried their thanks to the British government.

Huge throngs hung wildly about the offices of the Spanish Aero Club, waiting for more details of the rescue. The impression made by the news of the fliers' rescue was nation-wide, and even the royal family was interested. The queen said:

"I am most ] py."

And King Alfonso, according to dispatches from London, where he is now visiting, after being informed of the rescue shortly after noon, was said by friends to be "intensely delighted."

PLAN BIG WELCOME

Great preparations are now under way at Gibraltar and neighboring towns to welcome the fliers who had yesterday been given up as lost.

Spain will do itself grandly in welcoming home the men they believed swallowed by the depths of the Atlantic.

Capt. Francisco Iglesias and Capt. Ignacio Jimenez headed one of the huge processions to the British embassy, expressing their gratitude and requesting the British ambassador, Sir George Graham, to convey their greetings to the officers and men aboard the Eagle.

Iglesias and Jimenez were also hoisted on the shoulders of strong men in the exuberant throngs, and were carried careening about the streets to accompanying shouts of "viva Franco! viva Los Ingleses!" (Long live Franco! Hurrah for the English).

THANKS BRITISH

It was then officially announced that a message signed by Primo de Rivera and bearing the compliments of the Spanish government had been sent to the British government, expressing great appreciation for co-operation in the search for the aviators and their rescue. It was also relayed here that King Alfonso will personally extend his thanks to King George at Windsor Castle.

The Spanish government itself, moving to mark the celebration of the rescue of their national heroes, published a proclamation that amnesty had been resolved for the non-commissioned officers of the First Artillery Regiment, who had been ordered deported to Morocco in connection with the recent Ciudad Real Revolt.

The message which was first sparked off the radio room of the Eagle to the British Admiralty in London and the British consul in Gibraltar read:

"Found Numancia near Azores, 36.28 north latitude, 26.14 west longitude. Crew all well, little damage to plane. Both taken aboard, proceeding Gibraltar 15 knots."

The message did not indicate the time the plane was sighted or rescued, but it was taken to mean shortly after 9 o'clock.

LAST SEVEN DAYS

Since their departure eight days ago, the airmen have been unreported for seven. The chief cause of delay in sending out searching parties was an early report of their safe landing on the island of San Miguel in the Azores. After the islands themselves had been covered by parties, and the coasts by Portuguese warships, the search became an extended one, but was four days late in starting. Airplanes and ships of four nations took part in what seemed to be a vain attempt to locate the missing fliers.

The search for the missing fliers and their ultimate rescue is only paralleled by the rescue of Gen. Nobile's dirigible, Italia, expedition at the North Pole, and the search and finding of the plane of Commander J. S. Rogers of the United States Navy who went down and was lost for eight days east of Hawaii several years ago.

General Hindenburg running a German republic.

THE Rev. Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, British, justly criticizes modern biographers for seeking the ugly things in life.

"Two prisoners looked out
From behind their bars.
One saw the mud, the other saw the stars."

Many biographers see only the mud. One much advertised biographer reminds you of an individual who should write about Jean Jacques Rousseau, mentioning only unpleasant details from his "confessions," ignoring "Emile" and "The Social Contract."

BISHOP JAMES CANNON, of the Southern Methodist Church, is criticized unjustly, because of investments or speculations, through Kable & Co., alleged bucketshop, now bankrupt.

The bishop, who has the right of every American to invest in American securities, did not know that the firm was a bucketshop.

As to his making a profit of $11,356 on an investment of $2,300, nothing unusual about that.

To quote Samuel Johnson's saying about the writing of Ossian's poems: "Many men, many women and many children could have done it."

THOMAS F. RYAN once mentioned the names of the 10 smartst young rich men in the United States, predicting their glorious financial future.

"Yes, John, but give Thomas F. Ryan a $2 bill and in four years he would have all the money away from those 10 smart young men."

Eleven thousand three hundred and eighty-six dollars is not much profit on $2,500 in these days. The difficulty is to keep it once you get it.

SCENTS ILLEGAL COMBINATION FOR MONOPOLY

Demands Attorney General Launch Sweeping Inquiry Of $500,000,000 Concern

Universal Service.

ALBANY, June 29.—Gov. Roosevelt today call upon Attorney General Hamilton Ward to direct a sweeping investigation of the $500,000,000 merger of upstate power interests to determine if it is a monopoly in violation of the general business and stock corporation law.

In a letter to the attorney general the Governor wrote:

"The present proposed merger, as well as the immediately previous consolidations, may be such a monopoly as is forbidden by the provision of the general business law and stock corporation law."

Warning the attorney general launching the investigation, the Governor called for a preliminary report within two weeks.

Attorney General Ward was in Buffalo today, but is expected to return to the Capitol next week.

"MERGER VITAL CONCERN"

The Governor told Ward the power merger was a matter of vital concern to every resident of the state.

He added:

"The monthly electric light bills of millions of people may perhaps be affected ultimately by the results of this combination."

Roosevelt asserted the attorney general has authority to restrain the merger if the investigation should disclose it is a monopoly.

Under the merger the Buffalo Niagara and Eastern Power Corporation, the Northeastern Power Corporation and the Mohawk Hudson Power Corporation consolidated into the Niagara Hudson Power Corporation, a holding company.

In other words, this is a merger of the J. P. Morgan power interests, the Carlisle power interests of Northern New York and the Schoellkopf power interests of Buffalo.

SECRET PROBE

H. Edmund Machold, who recently resigned as chairman of the Republican State Committee, is believed to have played an important role in the merger. For years Machold has been the right-hand man of the Carlisle interests.

Early this week the Governor ordered a secret probe of the power merger. He refused to reveal the names of the men who made the secret inquiry for him or the nature of the report.

The Governor's letter to Attorney General Ward follows:

"Dear Sir:

"You have doubtless noticed announcements of the contemplated merger of the Northeastern Power Corporation, the Buffalo, Niagara and Eastern Power Corporation and the Mohawk and Hudson Power Corporation by the Niagara Hudson Power Corporation, a holding company. This formal merger uniting previous mergers may possibly be supplemented by agreements with so called "friendly companies" in territory other than that embraced by the present activities of these various corporations.

"There appeared on the record in the State of New York last December 31st, 118 separate corporations, furnishing electricity for power and light; but I am informed that during the past few years the overwhelming majority of these companies have come under the control, by various kinds of legal procedure, of a very large holding company covering practically the entire state. Three smaller companies serving the communities along the Hudson river and New York City, and one company on the St. Lawrence, owned by the Aluminum Company of America while not in actual combinations, seem to fall into the category of 'friendly companies.'

SCENTS "OCTOPUS"

"The possibility presents itself that this rapid consolidation and centralization of business enterprises may be extended so as to create the color or the fact of a single-headed monopoly in the production, transmission and distribution of electrical energy. The present proposed merger, as well as the immediately previous consolidations may be such a monopoly as is forbidden by the provisions of the general business law and the stock corporation law.

"This is a matter of vital concern, not only to the commercial and manufacturing interests of the state, but also to every householder or resident of the state who uses electric light or power in his home. The monthly electric light bills of millions of people may perhaps be affected ultimately by the results of this combination.

"It involves not only possible increase in rates, but also the possible prevention of decreases in present rates, which might be practicable except for the existence of these recent mergers. This is particularly important in view of the limitations placed on the Public Service Commission concerning its control and supervision over holding companies. There is not only the question of price of electricity and unreasonable and unwarranted profits, but also the question as to the possible artificial restriction of the supply of electrical energy.

"It must also be borne in mind the state of New York, which is the owner of considerable developed and undeveloped waterpower, may, when the question of transmitting this power arises, be compelled to deal with a practical monopoly on terms likely to be dictated by that monopoly."

FIRE TEST WETS FOLKS DOWNTOWN

39 FLOORS UP! The "rain" downtown Saturday, if you were showered and saw only a cloudless sky and shining sun, was manufactured by these fire laddies on top of the Grant Building. They were, by the way, testing the water pressure.

RULES TUITION MUST BE PAID

A school district having no high school must pay for the tuition of a pupil who attends high school in a neighboring district even though he is backward in his studies, Judge James R. MacFarlane ruled in Common Pleas Court Saturday.

The decision was rendered in a suit brought by Bellevue school district against Emsworth School district for $48, claimed to be owing for tuition of Thomas Mooney.

Mooney lives in Emsworth, which has no high school. He accordingly attended Bellevue High School. He failed to complete the course in four years. The Emsworth school board, which paid his tuition fees, allowed him to attend for an additional semester at the Emsworth district's expense. As he still had not graduated, the board declined to make further payments. Mooney continued at the Bellevue High School for another semester, however, and succeeded in completing the course satisfactorily.

The Bellevue school district sued, at the rate of $12 a month, for the four months that Mooney went to school after the Emsworth board announced it would pay nothing further for his education.

Destruction of Wine Contested in Court

Penna Maggiore, of 1142 Penn avenue, answering a forfeiture libel filed by Prohibition Administrator John D. Pennington against six 50-gallon barrels, one 30-gallon barrel and two 10-gallon kegs of wine, seized in his home June 5, denied the wine was contraband and averred it was lawfully possessed.

Maggiore in his answer asks no disposition be made of the wine, pending the hearing on his petition in court that the wine be suppressed as evidence against him. Maggiere said he has no knowledge of the three one-gallon jugs of whisky and a quart bottle of wine named in the same forfeiture libel suit.

Man on Parole Faces New Charges

William J. Mangan, 29, of South Eleventh street, who made a futile effort Friday to escape from the custody of the United States marshal, will be taken before Judge Nelson McVicar on Tuesday for sentence on a charge of violating his parole.

Mangan was turned over to the federal authorities following his arrest for alleged theft of a radio. While detained in the marshal's office on the third floor, Federal Building, he fled, but was captured by Deputy Marshal Walter Meyers.

200-Foot Fall To Second Ave. Costs Man Life

AS L. Lefko and B. Vragel, with offices in the Fulton Building, were driving along Second avenue Saturday they saw a man tumble off the cliff 200 feet above.

He fell from crag to crag, finally ending, an inert heap, in the rear of 1039 Second avenue. Police had the man removed to Mercy Hospital, where he died in the afternoon of a fractured skull.

Nobody was able to say who he was, but there was an envelope in his pocket which had been mailed to Wood Hanand, 3 Beymiller street, Mansfield, O.

How he came to fall has not been determined. One suggestion is that he had been sleeping.

Mt. Oliver Plans Big Celebration July 16

A parachute jump from an airplane by Prof. Joe Crane, ex-army aviator, is one of the features of the Mt. Oliver-Knoxville Business Men's Association picnic to be held Tuesday, July 16, at Kennywood Park. The picnic will be preceded by an automobile parade through the Hill Top district Friday night.

L. R. Schmidt

L. R. Schmidt, president of the organization, has arranged an elaborate entertainment program and amusement tickets have been distributed to members to be sold at half price. Free transportation to and from the park has been arranged.

Those in charge of the outing are: Schmidt, W. P. Linn Noah, L. A. Sahner, Edward J. Henning, Frank Seemiller, Frank J. Hoffman and William J. Brennen.

Three are Identified In Two Holdups

Three men were identified Saturday, police say, as the bandits who on Wednesday held up the P. H. Butler store at 2018 East street and, on June 19, robbed Samuel Price, of 413 Tripoli street.

Clerk Myrtle Artzertage, 16, identified the three as the bandits, and Price said they were the trio who robbed him of $14.95 in Moravian street.

'RAIN' IS ONLY TEST OF PUMP

Pedestrians and occupants of office buildings in the vicinity of the new 39-story Grant Building were puzzled Saturday when, without a cloud in the sky and the sun shining brightly, they were showered with what was apparently a moderately heavy rainfall.

The "rain" was traced to the roof of the Grant Building where firemen were testing the capacity of a new pumper recently delivered to the city bureau of fire.

A 60-pound pressure was developed by the new pumper in the stand pipes which furnish fire protection to the building. This pressure was sufficient to throw the water a height of about 30 feet above the roof of the building and, according to the officials of the Bureau of Fire, who conducted the test, guarantees more pressure than is necessary to fight a fire in the top story of the building.

A similar test was conducted recently in the new Koppers Building and sufficient pressure was developed to throw water on the roof of the Philadelphia Building, almost a block away.

Bishop Mann's Home Entered, Ransacked

Forcing an entrance by cutting a glass panel from the front door, robbers ransacked the home of the Rt. Rev. Alexander Mann, bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese at 5565 Aylesboro avenue. The robbery was discovered Saturday but time of the entry could not be determined because Bishop Mann's family has been away from the city since June 22. Police called the Bishop's secretary, Mrs. W. G. Foster, of 116 Biddle street, Wilkinsburg, who could not determine if anything had been stolen.

Patrolman Arrested For Attacking Man

Patrolman Herman J. Steubenrach, one-time investigator for the Citizens League, surrendered to Woods Run police today to answer the charge of Ralph H. Dixon, of 200 Cutler street, who complained that Steubenrach beat him. The patrolman was allowed liberty on $30 bond.

SLAIN WIDOW'S DIARY TELLS OF RIVAL SUITORS

Day-by-Day Recital Details How Miner Won Girl From Former Coal Policeman.

Bitterness intermingled with sorrow over the untimely death of a "true daughter of the mines" pervaded the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred E. Henderson at Morgan today, where lies the bullet-riddled body of Henderson's step-daughter, Edith Michales Johnson, 17-year-old widow, slain by a rejected suitor who turned the weapon on himself and died 24 hours later.

Grief to this quiet little miner's family is doubly bitter, for it brought back to them unpleasant memories of coal and iron police and the bitter coal strike through which they and thousands of others struggled in the not distant past. John M. Farr, the slayer, was a coal and iron policeman.

DIARY TELLS OF LOVE

Here is the verse:

'Hearts never break,
Grief never kills;
Mine just aches
From loving you still."

Beneath the verse the young woman had signed her name. It was a cherished thought, but there were other notations, all of them of utmost importance to the young woman. One read:

"Started going with J. M. Farr June 2, 1926. Cokeburg Junction."

The next few pages contained little of interest until this entry:

"Frank E. Johnson and Edith E. Michaels married in Uniontown, Pa., Monday, June 11, 1928."

Her marital bliss was short-lived, for directly underneath this notation came another:

"F. E. Johnson killed in mine, Jones, Pa., July 27."

The young woman entered methodically everything of importance in her life. Following her husband's death were notes concerning workmen's compensation and other matters pertaining to her personal affairs.

MOTHER BLAMES FARR

Then came another important event.

Farr started to work in a town not far away. She kept account of his working hours and wages.

Mrs. Mary Henderson, the young woman's mother, said Farr came to her home about five days ago.

"Edith was a good girl," she said. "I did not want her to go out with Farr and I don't think she wanted to be with him. I am sure it was her decision not to marry him that prompted this terrible tragedy."

Motorist in Crash With Bicycle Sought

North Braddock police today are searching for the motorist who Saturday afternoon carried an injured boy into the Braddock Hospital and then left without making known his identity.

The boy, Paul Stason, 14, of 1803 Murdough avenue, North Braddock, was slightly injured when his bicycle ran against the side of a passing automobile in North Braddock yesterday.

Police Lay Suicide Attempt to Woman

Said to have attempted suicide in her confectionery store at 319 Sixth street, Braddock, Saturday afternoon, Mrs. Frances Stella, 55, was reported to be recovering in the Braddock General Hospital. Her condition is not serious. Police say they learned that the woman had attempted to end her life by drinking poison on a previous occasion.

MILL TOWN

THE river shimmered silently through the night,
The mills, on both banks, poured wastage
Into its jetty gloss.
Pig iron rivers flowed, red molt, into casts—
The noise of the mills went on Steadily.

UPON a hill
Long strings of cars pulled giant ladles
Of molten slag.
Men tipped the ladles over the rim
Of a culvert—to fill it in.
Hot gold rivers . . . coursing . . . creasing . . .
Rising billows of gold heat.

I STOOD upon a rickety old bridge—
The bridge and I were lost in mist.
The night itself, its lightenings and noises,
Were hidden with me.
On such a night
A car bearing its load
Of dusky people laughing,
Was plunged through the mist-hidden
Railing—upon the railroad tracks below . . .
I was lost in moods—in the mist.
Of silence and mist—
And the echo of tragedy . . . tiny . . .
From the finite infinite of the past.

GOD took great hilly handfuls
Of Western Pennsylvania
And dotted them with electric-lighted pin-heads . . .
Caused men to build boulevards
Along the hill crests, perchance
For poets to walk upon and to gaze into
The valleys and at the neighboring billows.

HAVE you ever noted the life
That swarms beneath an overturned log or stone?
Have you ever eaten at long wooden tables
With overalled men?
Or jostled through a crowd?
Little swarming people, busy living and going—
Touching one another . . .
Going off at tangents . . . Living
For their own hides, or for others.
Centrifugal force
That throws them into the common meeting place . . .
Centripetal force that sends them scurring
Back again
To their cubby holes . . .

—Eleanor Trott.

Braddock Girl, 12 Wounded by Stray Bullet, Walks Home

Although shot in the right hip while walking in Summit street, Braddock, Saturday, Annie Pieryznowski, 12, managed to walk to her home at 12 Summit street before she fainted. The girl, en route to a store, was struck by a stray bullet. She is in the Braddock General Hospital where her condition was reported as improved. The police of the borough are searching for the person who fired the shot.

Lang Submits City, County Pact for River Boulevard

Director Edward G. Lang, of the department of public works, has submitted to Council an ordinance authorizing an agreement between the city and the county for improvements to the Ohio River boulevard from Davis avenue to the Bellevue borough line.

Under the terms, the city is to pass legislation for street vacations, openings, widenings and the establishing of grades. The county is to reimburse the city for all costs and damages. The city will have to reconstruct sewers and water lines at a cost of $22,000.

Clark Will Try Out Another Traffic Plan

Safety Director James M. Clark has notified that during a 60-day trial period effective Monday, traffic will be permitted to move southbound only in Shingiss street from Forbes street to Locust street and to move northbound only on Boyd street from Forbes street to Locust street.

U. S. INDUSTRIAL COURT APPEALS TO STATE BAR

Association Names Lancaster Man President; Donovan Defends Anti-Trust Act.

By HOWARD J. CASSIDY.
Staff Correspondent.

BEDFORD SPRINGS, Pa., June 29.—Jurists and lawyers from the breadth of Pennsylvania dispersed to their homes today after the conclusion of the thirty-fifth annual conference of the Pennsylvania Bar Association impressed with the striking scheme advanced by Col. William Donovan, of Buffalo, former assistant attorney general, for the establishment of a Federal industrial court.

The conference, declared the greatest in the history of the State Bar Association, elected Bernard J. Myers, of Lancaster, former secretary of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, as president to succeed Pepper. Pittsburgh is considered as the meeting place for the conference next year, with Erie also a contender.

The Allegheny County Bar Association, with 50 other county bar associations, formally affiliated itself with the state association at the conference.

The Pennsylvanians learned in the law are generally convinced that Donovan has advanced a plan that will attract serious attention in Congress and by the present administration. They profess to see in the idea of the industrial court a remedy for the confusion attending business mergers because of the provisions of the Sherman anti-trust law.

PEPPER APPROVES PLAN

Donovan proposed establishment of a federal agency with power to inquire into, consider and determine in advance the legality of industrial consolidations or trade agreements affecting competition. Such a court, described by him as an industrial court, would prevent the enormous injury attending dissolution of a merged corporation after a successful attack against it under the Sherman act, he believed.

Former United States Senator George W. Pepper, retiring president of the association, commenting upon the plan, declared that such a federal agency must ultimately be established for the protection of business as well as the individual.

Pittsburgh jurists and lawyers found much merit in the proposal of Donovan. Judge Richard W. Martin expressed his approval of the plan and declared his belief that an industrial court would eventually be created by Congress to function substantially along the lines outlined by Donovan, who has occupied a singular position with regard to prosecutions under the Sherman act and gave evidence that he had made a deep study of the subject.

HOOVER FAVORITE

The regard in which Donovan is held by President Hoover, who considered him for a cabinet position, was the subject of speculation that the plan for an industrial court has been devised with the knowledge of the administration and will form the basis for legislation to be presented to Congress.

The Sherman act is sound in principle, Donovan declared, and monopolies designed to eliminate competition, destroy individual initiative or yield extortinate profits are to be condemned. On the other hand, he said, business mergers prompted by proper motives of industrial efficiency are to be encouraged.

He reviewed the history of the enforcement of the Sherman act, called attention to the uncertainty that sometimes prevailed in business circles as to whether or not a proposed course of procedure would be allowable under the law, and argued that some method should be devised to prevent the formation of unlawful trusts.

The 35 years of the existance of the Sherman act "ought to show," Donovan said, "that the effective approach for carrying it into effect is through some preventive method that would arrest the evil before it could work harm."

The constitutionality of an industrial court, created to function by advisory proceedings in aid of executive action, is established, he affirmed, by the Supreme Court's decision in the Bakelite case.

Defeat of Metro Charter Blamed on Scattered 'Yes'

With the official returning board figures revealing that the metropolitan charter plan was supported by a majority vote in two-thirds of Allegheny County municipalities, its defeat was credited to the failure of 11 municipalities failing to return a two-thirds majority in favor of the measure.

While the actual vote in the county gave a lead of 87,807 against 40,973 votes, only 50 municipalities gave it the necessary two-thirds vote. Sixty-two municipalities were required to received two-thirds of their votes in favor of the measure for its passage. The failure of this needed return was as follows:

| | Carried | Lost |
|---|---|---|
| Cities | 1 | 3 |
| Boroughs | 33 | 32 |
| Townships | 15 | 38 |
| | 49 | 73 |

These results revealed a majority vote in two-thirds of the municipalities, but not the required number of votes to change the charter. The results of the municipalities that were carried by a majority vote were:

| | Carried | Lost |
|---|---|---|
| Townships | 29 | 22 |
| Boroughs | 52 | 14 |
| Cities | 1 | 3 |
| | 82 | 39 |

In this tabulation of the returning board it was shown that Sewickley Township was tied with a 21-21 vote, while O'Hara Township polled a 209-209 return.

According to Joseph T. Miller, chairman of the Metropolitan Plan Commission, a wrong impression has been conveyed that the county is actually against the charter. In citing an analysis of the returns, he said:

"The result of the election should not, in our opinion, be so interpreted as to create the idea that the sentiment in the whole district is against the federated city. Not only did the charter receive a heavy majority vote in Allegheny County as a whole, but it received a majority vote in two-thirds of the municipalities. This ought to be an indication of the popularity of the measure.

"The original intention of the framers of the constitutional amendment was the requirement for a majority vote in a majority of the municipalities, and that the change of a two-to-one vote from a majority vote was made without the approval of the proponents of the measure."

CONSECRATION OF ARCHBISHOP HELD IN ROME

Feast of Apostles Marks Church Holiday as Clergy And Laymen Participate.

ROME, June 29.—(AP.)—The feast of the apostles Peter and Paul, patrons of the city of Rome, was celebrated today by clergy and laity alike, much as it has been for the past 16 centuries.

Besides being a day for special observance by the church it was a public holiday as well. Banks were closed and few business houses remained open.

The consecration of Monsignor Borgongini Duca as titular archbishop of Heraclea by Cardinal Gasparri in the Hall of Benedictions at the Vatican was the most impressive ceremony of the day, taking on historical significance.

A throng filled the long narrow room looking out on St. Peter's square and saw the age-old rite performed, both consecrator and consecrated saying duplicate mass side by side, partaking of communion in common to the accompaniment of music of the Sistine Choir.

POTIFICAL MATINS

In the Vatican City the commemoration started with pontifical matins at 8:15 a. m. in St. Peter's, the immense edifice, capable of holding 70,000 worshippers, being crowded long before the set hour. Solemn pontifical mass followed at 10, with pontifical vespers in the evening. Cardinal Merry del Val, former papal secretary of state and now archpriest of the great Basilica, attended.

The memory of St. Paul was rekindled with solemn mass at the Basilica that bears his name, "St. Paul's without the walls." on the road leading toward Ostia, and with an imposing vesper service in the afternoon. Special services occurred also at the old Church of the Twelve Apostles, near the Roman Corso and the Piazza Venezia.

SERVICES SUNDAY

This evening the Basilica of St. Peter's and the colonnade will be brilliantly illuminated. Tomorrow, the day more particularly devoted to St. Paul, will witness the expositions of the chains, alleged to have been worn by the Apostle and martyr, in the Basilica dedicated to him. Sunday will also be marked by the solemn beautification, in St. Peter's, of blessed Francesco De Camporosso, Capuchin martyr.

Cardinal Pietro Gasparri, papal secretary of state, was busy today replying to congratulations on the recurrence of his patron saint's day. Many of these were by cable and wireless from foreign ministers and chiefs of state, notably from Latin America and the principal European capitals.

Sports Program Set For Catholic Outing

Sixteen sport events and an afternoon card party will be included on the joint picnic program of the Western Pennsylvania Courts, Catholic Daughters of America, and the Knights of Columbus at Kennywood Park July 9. Mrs. Lillian W. Hennegan is chairman of the card party. The executive committee includes J. Vincent Brogan, general chairman; Miss Margaret C. Duffy, vice chairman; Miss Mary B. Collins, John L. Skarry, Joseph Cawley, Miss Katherine M. Monahan, Leo A. McMullen, John M. F. Quinn, John M. Boissou, Miss Mary Lorine O'Hagan, Miss Nora B. King, Miss Stella Doherty, John J. Henrion and John P. Killeen.

Carnegie Tech Draws More Strict Rules

Stricter admission requirements are announced for the reorganized short courses in the college of industries next year at the Carnegie Institute of Technology. Students will be required to have had four years of high school work or equivalent training instead of merely two years in the past. The change is planned to make the courses of more comprehensive scope.

Syria Auto Outing To Start July 20

July 20 and 21 have been chosen for the fifth annual outing of the Syria Automobile Club, which will be held at Conneaut Lake. No caravan is planned for the trip. Edward Hardie, president of the club, has named John J. Mamaux as general chairman. Among the committee chairmen are Roy C. Huntsman and Harry Soost.

Final Organ Recital At Music Hall Today

The final free Sunday organ recital of the season at Carnegie Music Hall will be conducted this afternoon at 4 o'clock by Julian R. Williams in the absence of Charles Heinroth. The recitals will be resumed October 5.

NEW HOSPITAL FULFILLS HOPE OF MANY YEARS

Jewish Women Recall Plans First Laid in 1898 for Montefiore Present Layout

Dedication of the new Montefiore Hospital in Fifth avenue, Oakland, next Sunday, will be the fulfillment of a dream to a group of Jewish women who formed a Ladies' Hospital Aid Society in 1898.

Two women in particular, Mrs. Barnett Davis, of 5421 Albemarle avenue, and Mrs. Henry Finkelpearl, 5325 Forbes street, find the ultimate joy in the fulfillment of their organization's ambition as its two only presidents. The former served as head of the organization for 20 years, while the latter has held office for the past 10 years.

Inspecting the new buildings yesterday, these two workers revelled in the model structure that today is the growth of a society first without a hospital and then with its own building capable of caring for 62 patients. In this modern building more than 200 patients may receive treatment under the most modern conditions that science can provide.

TELLS OF START

Reciting the start of the society, Mrs. Davis said:

"When we first organized in 1898, the Ladies Hospital Aid Society cared for its patients in all the hospitals. We were not in financial position to found our own. We paid the bills for many people out of our funds. Then 27 years ago, we purchased a lot from the Passavant Hospital with the idea of building a hospital in Reed street. We soon found out this property was too small for such a structure. Knowing we did not have sufficient funds to obtain a bigger site, we interested the men in our ambition and purchased the property at 3000 Center avenue which is the hospital we will abandon with the opening of the new building.

"Our first thought in the Center avenue building was to provide for 35 beds, but we soon found these were inadequate. By adding a wing, enclosing porches and converting some of the corridors we were able to enlarge the capacity to 62 beds."

THREE BUILDINGS

The new structure about to be dedicated occupies three buildings that are linked together by various floor levels. The first building, facing Fifth avenue is termed the "Outgoing Patients Department." Its general use is as a dispensary. The second building, medical department, is built on a higher elevation, and includes living quarters for the doctors and internes, the X-ray department, pharmacy, laboratories and six operating rooms. The third building, still on a higher level, is the main structure and is devoted to bed patients with the two top floors given over entirely for children. The emergency room is located in the basement of this structure. A winding driveway links with all buildings.

Somerset Credit Bureau Formed

Formation of a credit bureau at Somerset, with William A. Bush, manager, has been announced to the Retail Credit Men's Association, of Pittsburgh.

The McKeesport Credit Men's Association reports a growing membership. It was addressed during the week at Clairton Park by Leon Michaels, of Pittsburgh, who spoke on "Credits and Collections." The Pitsburgh body added another score of members to the rolls last week, the membership now totaling 1,577.

Greensburg Legion To Have Drum Corps

GREENSBURG, Pa., June 29.—A drum and bugle corps of 40 pieces will be organized and equipped by the Robert G. Kotouch Post No. 318, American Legion, of Greensburg. Rehearsals are to be started immediately.

Councilman Will Run for Mayor

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., June 29.—Harry G. Brown today officially announced his candidacy for mayor. He is the first to announce for the office, although others are expected in the field. Brown is now a councilman.

Greensburg Women's Clubs Meet July 11

GREENSBURG, Pa., June 29.—The first institute of clubs of the Greensburg district will be held here July 11. The Southwest Greensburg Women's Club will be host. An all-day session featuring addresses and discussions is planned.

FOURTH OF JULY PROGRAMS IN CITY, COUNTY

Many Events Will Provide Holiday Entertainment Throughout Community.

Varied programs of sports, music and fireworks have been arranged for the observance of Fourth of July on Thursday throughout the city and county. Many committees have arranged special programs for the family picnickers.

Nineteen huge set pieces will feature the fireworks displays planned in both the North and South parks in the evening. Band concerts will be another feature at the county's playgrounds.

MANY PROGRAMS

Community affairs within the city limits include programs at McKinley Park, West End Park, Soho Swimming Pool and Playgrounds and the Stanton Heights community. Among the boroughs staging events will be an all-day program of sports, vaudeville and fireworks at Avalon.

The McKinley Park celebration is under the asupices of the Eighteenth Ward Board of Trade. Events are scheduled throughout the afternoon and night, with a parachute jump as part of the evening features. Vaudeville, two ball games, band concerts, cake walk, sport events and addresses are among the events. Speeches will be made by Congressman Harry A. Estep, Councilman Daniel Winters and George P. Kountz, president of the Allied Boards of Trade.

PARADE, MUSIC, GAMES

The Soho Community Association will open the day at 10:30 a. m. with a baseball game. A water carnival, under supervision of the city bureau of recreation, will be held between 1 and 4 p. m. Among speakers will be President of Council James F. Malone, Assistant United States Attorney Ralph H. Smith, Frank B. Stewart and Mrs. Daisy Lampkins, president of State Women's Club. Paul Jones will preside. A street dance will be the evening feature in Reed street.

West End Board of Trade has arranged athletic events, vaudeville and fireworks for West End Park. A two-hour exhibit will be the evening feature.

A parade, boys' band contests, picnic and parade are on the Stanton Heights community program which will feature a dance in the evening.

The Pennsylvania Training School at Morganza has prepared a holiday program with athletic events, drills and exercises as features of a day that includes band concerts and cheering contests. The Rev. Dr. C. Wallace Petty, of the First Baptist Church of Pittsburgh, will be the principal speaker of the day.

Pittsburgher Urged As U. S. Ambassador

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—The appointment of John Laughlin, of Pittsburgh, as ambassador to Italy was urged upon President Hoover today by Senator Reed of Pennsylvania.

The Senator said that the Pittsburgh man would be well qualified to carry on the work of Ambassador Fletcher, who has resigned.

The President also was asked by Mr. Reed to appoint John Thomas Taylor, legislative representative in Washington for the American Legion, as a member of the Civil Service Commission.

National Guardsmen In Airplane Missing

ALLENTOWN, Pa., June 29.—(AP.)—Anxiety is felt here tonight over the safety of Capt. George Hyland, who with Lieut. R. A. Bradford, of the One Hundred and Third Observation Squadron, Pennsylvania National Guard, took off from Philadelphia this afternoon for Allentown for maneuvers of the Two Hundred and Thirteenth Anti-Aircraft Artillery Regiment which began here tonight.

A plane piloted by Lieut. F. A. Johnson, with Lieut. C. A. Nassef as observer, arrived at 4:35 o'clock. Hyland and Bradford took off before Johnson and his colleague.

Hoover's Fishing Spoiled by Rains

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—President Hoover substituted a short automobile ride today in the nearby country for his customary week-end fishing. He had planned to fish near Madison, Va., but upon being informed that heavy rains had left the woods drenched and had badly harmed the seldom used road leading into the preserve, he called the trip off.

New Castle Man Collapses, Dies

NEW CASTLE, Pa., June 29.—Joseph Signotto, aged 40, collapsed at his work at the Lake Erie Limestone Company plant at Hillsville today and died shortly afterward. Coroner J. P. Caldwell found that heart trouble was the cause of death.

Springdale Team Declared Victor in First Aid Contest

An elimination meet for first aid teams from the various departments of the West Penn Power System, held Saturday afternoon, resulted in the team of the Springdale mine of the company, being selected to represent the organization in the state wide competion of public utility company teams to be held at Bedford Springs, Pa., in September.

W. J. Sene of the United States Bureau of Mines was chief judge of the elimination, held after contests between 60 teams had been narrowed down to five winners. Teams from the Railways system, the Springdale Power station and the Irwin Commercial organization participated in the meet. H. F. Webb, safety director of the West Penn system was in charge.

Chases Away Blues Stunting in Plane

SPRINGFIELD, Mass.—During a rainstorm here, pedestrians walking gingerly over puddle-spotted streets were amazed to see an airplane stunting high overhead. A few minutes later, Pilot Harry Hermann, landing at the local airport, was asked why he had been going through aerial gymnastics in the rain.

"My wife's in the hospital with appendicitis and I was just trying to chase away the blues," he explained.

Bellevue Motorists Barely Miss Death on R. R. Track

OIL CITY, June 29.—(INS.)—R. E. Toogood, of Bellevue, Pittsburgh, and four friends today owed their lives to quick action in leaving his car when it was stalled on a grade crossing last night.

They attempted to free the car by pushing, but were unable to do so, Toogood said. The party was en route to Niagara Falls.

Toogood, who resides at 119 Cedar avenue, Bellevue, returned home after the accident. The party had intended a vacation trip, leaving Pittsburgh Friday evening. He could not explain the cause of the accident, stating it all happened so quickly. Due to the slippery condition of the roadway, it is his belief the car skidded.

In the party, beside Mr. Toogood, were his father, Joseph Toogood, of the Bellevue address; two cousins, Robert Toogood, of Brightridge street, North Side; Charles Toogood, of Wexford, and John A. Smith, Brightridge street.

DRY VIOLATION MAIN CONCERN IN CRIME QUIZ

Commission Finds Public Behind All Other Laws, Split on Liquor Question.

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH.
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Despite the fact that the President's commission on law enforcement and observation has declared prohibition violations will be given no more attention than other phases of crime, it became apparent today that the solution of that part of the lawlessness problem is giving the commission its greatest concern.

The commission has found that public opinion almost universally backs other law enforcement activities, such as efforts to prevent murder, robbery, and the drug traffic—but than on the question of violating the statutes relating to prohibition there is a division of opinion.

DRY EXPERT SOUGHT

At the outset the commission is looking for "an expert who knows something about prohibition" and can help prepare recommendations on how the law is being observed and how it can be enforced.

In an effort to obtain such an individual many officials have been interviewed.

Those who appeared before the commission whose partial or full responsibility lies in enforcement of the law included Secretary Mellon, Attorney General Mitchell, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Seymour Lowman and Commissioner James M. Doran.

"PURE BUNK"

The rapidly-shifting events in the prohibition drama of the last few week, including the public furore over killings by dry agents, the impending trials of customs agents involved in shootings, the demand for disarming dry forces, the efforts of high officials to prevent casualties, the mobilization of government forces on the Canadian border, the proposed educational campaign in the schools and its prompt veto by President Hoover, and other details of enforcement have gone or will go before the commission.

Experts are to be appointed also for other phases of crime investigation, but just how many has not been said.

These experts will be charged with compiling all possible information on the many law violations and with the preparation of accurate statistics as to observation and violation.

Ross Township Man Found Shot to Death

The body of Paul Schroeder, 74, of Transval avenue, Ross Township, was found in the woods at the rear of his home Saturday by a neighbor, James Mills. Five bullet wounds were found in his skull and a corresponding number of empty shells in a revolver clutched in his right hand.

WILLEBRANDT QUITS OFFICE AMID SILENCE

Retirement in Contrast to Entry Into Public Life Back to Private Practice

By EDWARD L. RODDAN,
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, perhaps the most colorful feminine figure ever in American political life, today ended her career as an official of Uncle Sam and a crusader in the cause of prohibition.

When she closed her desk at noon, Mrs. Willebrandt had completed nearly eight continuous years of service as assistant attorney general in charge of cases under prohibition laws, tax laws and the Bureau of Federal Prisons. She resigned the post voluntarily.

On Monday, Mrs. Willebrandt will return to the private practice of law. She will open here a branch of her Los Angeles office, the firm name of which is Willebrandt and Horowitz. One of her principal connections will be that of counsel for the General Aviation Corporation, which it is said will net her a retainer of about $30,000 a year.

RETIREMENT QUIET

In marked contrast to the almost constant hubbub which marked her tenure of office, the retirement of Mrs. Willebrandt to private life passed almost unnoticed today. There was no comment at the department nor was there the usual press statement to give notice of her leaving.

Mrs. Willebrandt herself declined to see reporters and busied herself straightening out the affairs of the office, in preparation for the coming of her successor, as yet unnamed by President Hoover.

Eight years ago in September, 1921, Mrs Willebrandt came to Washington an unknown figure in national affairs to take over the then obscure post of assistant attorney general, to which she had been appointed by President Harding. She had been admitted to the bar only six years before.

OFFICE ENLARGED

The office to which she was assigned had a personnel of three attorneys and one stenographer. When she left today, it had a personnel of over 100, including eight or 10 special attorneys whose chief duties consist of going about the country to assist federal attorneys in the prosecution.

This amazing growth in the size and importance of the office, of course, was due solely to the increasing burdens placed upon the department by prohibition.

She was the idol of the drys and the constant target of those seeking modification of the prohibition laws. The spectacular raids which she ordered upon the night clubs of New York were the subject of praise and censure throughout the nation. The climax of her career came during the presidential campaign last November when she stumped the country for President Hoover on the dry issue.

Her activities so aroused the liberals in the party that they demanded her immediate dismissal.

COUNCIL SPURS COMMISSION

Council has asked Mayor Charles H. Kline to instruct the Art Commission to submit a requested recommendation on the removal of the soldiers' monument from Monument Hill to West Park, near North avenue and Buena Vista street.

Council passed an ordinance last Thursday authorizing Director Edward G. Lang, of the Department of Public Works, to move the monument and appropriated $33,000 for the job.

Lang advised Council on Saturday that he could not proceed with the removal as he had not received the approval of the Art Commission despite the fact that Council had appropriated $400 for the commission's use in making a study and recommendation of the proposal.

Some of the members questioned the commission's authority in the matter, and on motion of P. J. McArdle the City Law Department was asked to give an opinion as to whether the Art Commission could flaunt Council's decision for the removal.

RUM SEIZED IN EAST END RAIDS

Residential sections of the East End were invaded Saturday afternoon by government prohibition agents and constables. They reported seizing complete moonshine whisky distilleries on the third floors of houses at 1510 Shady avenue and 5521 Margaretta street.

In the latter place, the raiders reported confiscating a 125-gallon still, 35 gallons of moonshine whisky, 20 52-gallon barrels of mash, 300 pounds of corn sugar and 15 empty five gallon cans. John Wall, 55, arrested in connection with the raid, was released under $1,000 bond pending a hearing.

The Shady avenue house raid netted a 100-gallon still, 20 gallons of moonshine whisky, 800 pounds of corn sugar, 20 pounds of yeast, 19 empty five-gallon cans and 10 100-gallon vats of mash, according to the raiders. Joseph Karsh, 38, arrested, was placed in Central police station in default of bond.

The prohibition agents also reported seizing 50 pint bottles of home brew beer in a house in the rear of 7223 Tioga street, and a gallon of moonshine whisky in a building at 122 Brown avenue, Turtle Creek.

Clarksburg Revives 10 O'Clock Curfew

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., June 29.—Curfew blew here at 10 o'clock tonight for the first time in many years, the result of a recent order of the city council. S. E. Barnett, police chief, said the revived curfew ordinance would be strictly enforced, and all youngsters unaccompanied by a parent or guardian must be off the streets by 10 every night.

5 Hurt In Crash Going to Ball Game

READING, Pa., June 29.—(AP.)—Five Lebanon men were injured this morning when the automobile in which they were riding to a baseball game in Philadelphia crashed into a pole on the Philadelphia highway near Reading. The injured are Raymond Marks, 25, of 549 New street, a possible fracture of the left leg; John Henry, 17, lacerations; Allen Harvey, 23, abrasions; Fred Schaeffer, 22, abrasions; Elmer Aberl, 22, contusions and lacerations.

Arrest Deferred In Death of Man Found in Auto

AMBLER, Pa., June 29.—(INS.)—"I refuse to be stampeded into making an arrest until sufficient evidence has been accumulated to warrant a conviction," District Attorney Frank A. Renninger, of Montgomery County, declared today in discussing the death of William Norman Heim, found in his wrecked auto near Fort Washington a week ago.

"There will be no arrest today because of the terrible condition of that body when found and the unusual amount of hysteria which seems to prevail, particularly in the vicinity of Ambler." Renninger said, in explaining his stand.

Investigators in the case have been in communication with a woman at Pottstown whose identity is withheld, but who has furnished clues that are expected to aid in solving the mystery.

State police and county detectives conferred until long after midnight last night.

SCOOTERS WIN QUICK ACCLAIM

"Whoopee" scooters are no longer a dream for many boys and girls of Pittsburgh.

They were new to the city only two weeks ago; now they are as commonplace as almost any other toy commonly accepted by the youngsters.

Wherever there are children; wherever games are in progress; wherever paths or sidewalks are found—there "Whoopee" scooters are making their bow.

And what a bow it is! Races, games, errands, all are facilitated by this speedster the Sun-Telegraph is giving to Pittsburgh's youth.

One six-week subscription to the Sun-Telegraph will deliver this little vehicle to your door. A "Whoopee" scooter is good for long, hard wear—it's a pile of fun on two wheels!

Ptomaine Poisoning Attacks Explorers

WESTON, W. Va., June 29.—(AP.)—James Ferry, Weston, member of the West Virginia University geological expedition into the mountains of Webster County, returned home today in an ambulance and reported 20 members of the 24 in the expedition had fallen victims of ptomaine poisoning. He said the expedition, which was to have continued for three months, was broken up by the illnesses. Impure food supplies were believed to have caused the attacks.

Wheeling Laundry Driver Ambushed

WHEELING, W. Va., June 29.—(AP.)—Stanley Orim, 25, driver for a laundry, was wounded in the arm and side today by bullets fired from bushes while driving along the Weirton-Follansbee road. Orim could ascribe no motive for the attack.

4-Cent Gasoline Tax Effective At Midnight

PENNSYLVANIA motorists will pay 1 cent more for gasoline starting Sunday midnight, when the 4-cent tax levied at the last session of the Legislature will become effective.

A 3-cent tax has been in effect, and under the new schedule the actual cost to gasoline buyers will be 1 cent more.

TOWN CLEARS STORM DEBRIS

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 29.—Work of clearing up the $25,000 damage caused by a cyclone that hurt a 3-month-old infant and menaced two girls and a boy was being rushed today in the little village of Farmington, nestled in the mountains, 12 miles from Uniontown, on the National pike.

The storm, which hit about 8:15 o'clock yesterday morning, first swept the roof off the one-story frame general store of Mrs. F. C. Rush on the pike at the Elliottsville road. The swirling pool of wind then tore the roof from the two-story service station and home of Roy Cable. The home of G. C. Coleman, housing the Bell Telephone exchange, on the same side of the road, was struck next, the front porch roof being swept away while a portion of the roof was damaged.

Crossing the road at this point, the cyclone struck the home of Wilma Rishel, in which Mr. and Mrs. Ray Wolf resided on the second floor, demolishing the front porch and bulging the sidewalls. An unoccupied one-story frame bungalow a short distance to the east was slightly damaged. A small frame stable in the path of the swirling wind was demolished.

Margaret Rishel, infant daughter of Mrs. Margaret Rishel, was showered by window glass as she slept, suffering cuts on the face. Mrs. Rishel, who was in the kitchen with her 3-year-old son, Austin, was compelled to force the door leading into the babe's room. It was held tight by the warped walls.

Graf Zepp's Motor Failure Cause Told

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, June 29.—(AP.)—The breaking of the Graf Zeppelin's crankshafts on her last attempt to fly to the United States is now definitely attributed to overstrained clutches and couplings. A new style of clutch is being installed with new motors.

Greenville Mother Fears Son Is Slain

GREENVILLE, Pa., June 29.—Fear that Harold L. Clark, 21, missing since Friday, has met with foul play or taken his own life is expressed by his mother. Clark's auto was found abandoned in Sharon. The young man was his mother's only support.

Metal Miners Face Wage Cut

SALT LAKE CITY, June 29.—(AP.)—Notices of a wage reduction of 25 cents a day effective July 1, have been posted at various silver-lead properties in Utah. The decrease offsets the increase granted this year when metal prices advanced, but affects only miners, the smelter workers still holding to the increased scale.

Steal Roses From Mercer Garden

MERCER, Pa., June 29.—Thieves stole three rose bushes from the garden at the home of Mrs. Belle N. Emery. The bushes were removed carefully and the holes refilled with earth.

This is the second time thieves have visited Mrs. Emery's flower gardens. On the first visit they stole a number of her choicest tulips.

U.S. Army Officer Sent to German Camp

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—For the first time since the World War the American army has assigned a cavalry officer to study at a German military school.

Capt. Ray T. Maddocks, of Fort Riley, Kan., has been ordered to report to the German cavalry school at Hanover, for a course of instruction beginning October 1.

W. Va. Compensation Act Constitutional

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 29.—(AP.)—The constitutionality of the Workmen's Compensation Law of 1929 was upheld today by Circuit Court Judge Arthur P. Hudson in the quo warranto proceedings instituted by C. L. Heaberlin, ousted compensation commissioner, against Lee Ott, who was named as Heaberlin's successor by Governor Conley.

SUN-TELEGRAPH PICNIC TO DRAW GREAT THRONG

8,000 Pittsburgh Children Will Get Free Tickets For Kennywood Outing.

The Sun-Telegraph picnic at Kennywood Park is fast drawing near.

Every morning boys and girls in all Pittsburgh are awakening to the knowledge that this great event is one day nearer than it was when they went to sleep the night before.

THOUSANDS TO ATTEND

Thousands of children are preparing to enjoy themselves in this celebration of a day devoted to the happiness of the younger generation.

One of the greatest events of the year the Kennywood picnic will live up to all the expectations of prospective guests.

Free tickets are being distributed with amazing rapidity.

The Whip, a choice of any ride in Kennywood, the Bug House, the Old Mill, the Ferris Wheel, the Merry-go-round and four other big Kennywood amusements are on the strip of 10 free tickets which the Sun-Telegraph is distributing to 8,000 Pittsburgh youngsters.

HOW TO GET TICKETS

To obtain a strip of these tickets, write to the Sun-Telegraph Kennywood Park picnic editor, stating that you are under 16 years of age and enclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Only 8,000 of these strips are to be distributed, in order that every guest of the Sun-Telegraph may enjoy all the rides provided on the ticket. Write today and be sure of obtaining your pass.

PITTSBURGH MAN HIGHLY PRAISES MODERN KONJOLA

New Medicine Scores Another Fine Victory; Stomach Trouble Yields to Its Powers.

Is it not reasonable to believe that what Konjola has done for thousands upon thousands of others it can also do for you? Is not the most talked-of medicine in America, the medicine with more than a million friends, worthy of a trial? That is all Konjola asks, a chance to prove that it is a medicine of merit, a medicine worthy of all the wonderful praise that it is getting. Claims and promises are not made for it. Its remarkable record of accomplishments speaks for itself. All who suffer from ailments of the stomach, kidneys, liver or bowels, or from rheumatism, neuritis or nervousness, should call on the Konjola Man, who is personally explaining all about Konjola at the Dow Drug Store (formerly McCulloch's), Penn Avenue and Sixth Street, this city. Get facts, proof of what Konjola has already done. See for yourself what a wonderful record it has made. Consider for a minute the wonderful results that Mr. R. Colletta, 3319 Monroe Street, this city, got from it. Mr. Colletta recently called on the Konjola Man and made the following statement:

"Konjola proved to me that it is a real medicine, and that it is worthy of all the wonderful praise it is getting. For years I was a victim of a stubborn case of stomach trouble. Intense suffering followed every meal. Food refused to digest, but soured in my stomach, and gas formed. I bloated terribly, and there was always a bad taste in my mouth, and my tongue was coated. The gas never even gave me any peace at night, and I was not able to sleep well. I was subject to dizzy spells, and spots appeared before my eyes. I tried medicine after medicine in my search for relief, but always met with disappointment. I had about given up hope of ever finding relief.

"Then a friend told me of Konjola, and urged me to try it. I figured I really owed this much to myself, so I did. Well, the surprise I got! Here at last I found a real medicine, a medicine that gives results. In a remarkably short time every trace of stomach trouble had disappeared. I have an excellent appetite, my food digests as it should, and I am never bothered in the least by gas. I am not bothered by bloating, the bad taste is gone, and my tongue is no longer coated. Dizzy spells are things of the past, and the spots never appear before my eyes. I rest well at night, and get up in the morning ready for whatever the day has in store for me. Konjola amazed me at the speed and thoroughness with which it worked. I can readily understand now why it is the medicine with more than a million friends!"

Konjola works quickly, quietly, thoroughly. It only asks the chance to prove that it is a medicine of merit.

The Konjola Man is at the Dow Drug Store (formerly McCulloch's), Penn Avenue and Sixth Street, Pittsburgh, where he is meeting the public daily, introducing and explaining the merits of this modern medicine.

WEST VIRGINIA FACES 10-CENT BOOST IN GAS

Temporary Advance Approved By Public Service Board Pending Hearing on Appeal

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 29.—(AP.)—A temporary schedule of rates allowing an increase of 10 cents per 1,000 cubic feet will go into effect Monday in the dozen counties of Southern West Virginia served by the United Fuel Gas Company.

The Public Service Commission by a two to one vote late yesterday granted the temporary rates to be effective until completion of the pending rate case, but suspended until October 29 the schedule of rates the company filed with the commission to be effective July 1. In the schedule suspended, rates ranging from 20 to 23 cents in the various communities would have been increased to 35, 48 and in some instances 40 cents per thousand cubic feet.

OPPOSES INCREASE

I. Wade Coffman, chairman of the commission, and James J. Divine approved the temporary increase. Commissioner C. E. Nethkin dissented in the order insofar as it authorized an advance in the existing rates.

The temporary rate for industrial consumers was fixed at 22½ cents per thousand cubic feet with the result that the increase varies in different communities.

The increase of 10 cents in the domestic rate applies to consumers of the company in Kanawha, Cabell, Mingo, Boone, Putnam, Calhoun, Gilmer, Jackson, Lincoln, Logan, Roane and Wayne counties.

FIFTY-CENT MAXIMUM

The order provided that in no case shall the rates exceed 50 cents a thousand cubic feet. The minimum charge also was increased from 50 to 75 cents per month.

Testimony of the company has been completed in the rate case, but evidence of protestants remains to be heard. The protestants include the cities of Charleston, Huntington and Williamson and the Huntington Manufacturers' Club.

KLINE SEEKING SECOND TERM

a factional fight, but, with both Kline and Malone avowed candidates, a scrap seems inevitable. If the fight develops, it is likely to extend from the mayoralty down along the line of councilmanic and county candidates.

Whether Mellon and other Republican organization leaders intend to remain neutral and permit the opposing aspirants to fight it out apparently has not yet been decided. They may discuss the matter at a conference this week.

Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, who is close to Mellon politically, is in Mt. Clemens, but expects to return Monday. Mellon plans to leave Tuesday or Wednesday for Canada to remain a week or 10 days. It is possible the two and others will meet here Tuesday.

Friends of Mayor Kline claim the support of Armstrong. They point out that George J. Schad, chairman of the county tax board, Justus Schroedel, superintendent of buildings, and Robert Murray, chief clerk of the Board of Viewers, all Armstrong appointees, signed the petition of North Side leaders that asked the Mayor to seek re-election.

Senator M. G. Leslie is understood to be vigorously opposed to supporting the Mayor for another term. His first choice is reported to be Mackrell, but the latter repeatedly has declared he has no intention of entering the race. Leslie, openly at least, has maintained silence.

Friends of Malone, who for many years has been associated with the group headed by Leslie, expect to have the support of the senator and also of Mackrell.

Judge Martin's close associates are looking for substantial aid from Magee's following, although they look for their candidate to make a special appeal to the independent element. Weeks ago a committee of independents headed by the Rev. Dr. A. R. Robinson, asked Martin to run. He has not yet answered, but is expected to very soon.

NORTH SIDERS WAX POETIC IN KLINE'S BEHALF

Politicians Roar Forth Praise Of Mayor in Flowery And Redundant Outburst.

During the week the Republican chairmen of the seven North Side wards handed the Mayor Charles H. Kline a testimonial asking him to seek a re-election and pledging their support.

Experts agree this paen of praise, because of the grandeur of its poetic language and the nobility of the sentiments expressed, never has been excelled in the literature of politics—or in any other literature, for that matter, unless that of St. Valentine's day.

The name of the author, has not been revealed. The "masterpiece." follows:

THE PENALTY OF LEADERSHIP

"In every field of human endeavor, he that is first must perpetually live in the white light of publicity. Whether the leadership be vested in a man or in a manufactured product, emulation and envy are ever at work. In art, in literature, in music, in industry, the reward and the punishment are always the same. The reward is wide-spread recognition; the punishment, fierce denial and detraction. When a man's work becomes a standard for the whole world, it also becomes a target for the shafts of the envious few.

"If his work is merely mediocre, he will be left severely alone—if he achieve a masterpiece, it will set a million tongues a-wagging. Jealousy does not protrude its forked tongue at the artist who produces a commonplace painting. Whatsoever you write, or paint, or play, or sing, or build, no one will strive to surpass or to slander you, unless your work be stamped with the seal of genius. Long, long after a great work or a good work has been done, those who are disappointed or envious continue to cry out that it cannot be done.

"Spiteful little voices in the domain of art were raised against our own Whistler as a montebank, long after the big world had acclaimed him its greatest artistic genius.

"Multitudes flocked to Bayreuth to worship at the musical shrine of Wagner, while the little group of those whom he had dethroned and displeased argued angrily that he was no musician at all.

"The little world continued to protest that Fulton could never build a steamboat, while the big world flocked to the riverbanks to see his boats steam by.

"The leader is assailed because he is a leader and the effort to equal him is merely added proof of that leadership. Failing to equal or to excell, the follower seeks to depreciate and to destroy—but only confirms ance more the superiority of that which he strives to supplant.

"There is nothing new in this.

"It is as old as the world and as old as the human passions—envy, fear, greed, ambition and the desire to surpass. And it all avails nothing.

"If the leader truly leads, he remains—the leader. Master poet, master painter, master workman, each in his turn is assailed, and each holds his laurels through the ages. That which is good or great makes itself known, no matter how loud the clamor of denial. That which deserves to live—lives.

"Therefore, we, the undersigned, desire to make record of our loyalty to and our admiration for the Honorable Charles H. Kline, Mayor of the City of Pittsburgh.

"We call upon you to become a candidate for re-election and solemnly pledge that we are prepared to go forth to battle in your behalf, with brave hearts, calm minds and undaunted spirits."

Those who signed the above are William A. Herd, chairman of the Twenty-first Ward; John P. O'Donnell, Twenty-second Ward; Robert Murray, Twenty-third Ward; Justus Schroedel, Twenty-fourth; Senator Morris Einstein, Twenty-fifth; Magistrate Edward M. ## Grade Pupils Rated Better Than Rural WAYNESBURG, PA., June 29.—The proportion of rural school graduates who fail in city high schools is three-to-one in comparison with the number of failures among students who come to high schools from graded schools, it was stated here today by Dr. Lee L. Driver, of the rural service bureau of the state department of education, before the Greene county school directors convention.

If the rural students have the advantage of graded preparation for high school, however, they excel city students, Driver added.

Franklin Co. Ships 8,719 Machines

SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 29.—Shipment of 8,719 aircooled Franklin cars for the first six months of 1929 shows an increase of 108 per cent over shipments made in the same period of last year, when 3,711 cars were shipped. This marks the greatest six-month period in the entire history of the Franklin automobile, executives of the company stated here today. The best previous six months showed shipments of 7,064 cars.

June shipments alone totaled 1,405 cars as compared with 806 cars shipped in the same month of last year, an increase of 74 per cent for this June.

HIGHER INCOME TAX RECEIPTS CLEAR DEFICIT

U. S. Business Operations Show $200,000,000 Surplus; Stock Activity Cause

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—The government of the United States which started the 1929 fiscal year on last July 1 with an indicated deficit of $94,000,000 in its business operations closed the year tonight with a surplus of nearly $200,000,000 due to a starting increase in income tax receipts.

Income tax payments for the fiscal year up to the close of business on June 27, the latest Treasury figures available, had totaled $2,327,760,722 or $153,808,166 more than was collected in the entire 1928 fiscal year and a $158,522,567 increase over the same period of last year.

The exact figure on the government's financial transactions and the amount of the surplus for the fiscal year will not be known until tomorrow night when the Treasury will issue the totals for the 12-month period, but the figures of June 27 indicate that the prediction of Secretary Mellon of a government surplus of $160,000,000, or $170,000,000 will be slightly exceeded.

STRIKE HELD CAUSE

The surplus due almost entirely to the income tax receipts was attributed by Treasury officials to the active trading during this year on the stock market which brought large profits to the holders of stock and more income to the government.

At the business meeting of the government last July Calvin Coolidge as president warned the department heads that the estimates at that time on government receipts for the year indicated a deficit of $94,000,000 and asked their co-operation in practicing the strictest economy.

Government expenditures were increased during this fiscal year at the rate of about $10,000,000 a month due to expansion in activities and to salary increases granted employes. The increase up to June 27 had totaled $160,421,345, the total expenditures to that date having amounted to $3,781,437,834, while those for the similar period of the previous year aggregated $3,621,016,589.

CUSTOMS TAXES INCREASE

At the close of business on June 27 the government receipts had totaled $4,019,669,731 for the 1929 fiscal year, leaving a surplus of $238,231,897. But out of this surplus the government planned to pay the retroactive mail rate increase granted the railroads by the Interstate Commerce Commission, which amounted to approximately $50,000,000, which would leave $188,000,000 surplus with two days' receipts to be collected.

An increase in customs taxes also aided in establishing a surplus for the year. The total of these collections for the present year to June 27 had aggregated $597,659,081 as compared with $568,986,188 for the entire 1928 year.

Miscellaneous internal revenue taxes showed a decrease as the total collected on Thursday was $603,671,075 as compared with $621,986,188 for 1928.

After Coolige's announcement of the indicated deficit last July, the next Treasury estimate which he transmitted with his budget estimate to Congress last December said that a surplus of approximately $36,000,000 for the present fiscal year was indicated. Then the retroactive mail rate increase wiped out the surplus and a deficit of $10,000,000 was again estimated by Treasury officials last February.

MARCH TAX CRITERION

But when the income tax payments on last March 15 totaled $601,000,000, exceeding those of the previous year by $86,000,000, the government was assured of ending the 1929 fiscal year with a comfortable balance.

The payments due June 15 of the 1928 income tax for the second quarter also have shown an increase, the collections totaling $552,305,408 according to the latest figures, as compared with $452,287,231 for the same number of days in last June. This $100,000,000 increase exceeded Treasury estimates made at the time of the March payments, for generally the second quarter's payments result in a drop of approximately $60,000,000 from those of the first quarter.

But with the satisfactory conclusion of the government financial operations for the 1929 year the prospects for the 1930 fiscal year are not so bright. The Treasury in 1930 must find funds for carrying on the naval cruiser construction program, $150,000,000 for the farm board and other expanded activities including flood control. President Hoover already has indicated to the budget bureau that it is his wish that the expenditures for the 1931 fiscal year be kept within the bounds of the appropriations for 1930 which on March 4 had totaled $3,736,745,469 and did not include the Farm Board appropriation.

2 Swimmers Drown At Washington, Pa.

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 29.—Two drownings occurred near here during the past 48 hours in pools formed in surface coal mining excavations. The victims were Kenneth Pyle, 16, of near Burgettstown, and Esau McCaskey, Negro, 19, of near Hickory. Pyle slipped and struck his head while diving from a bank about 10 feet high. McCaskey leaped into the water intending to use an inner tube for support. He missed the tube and drowned before aid reached him.

Gettysburg Tragedy Held Murder, Suicide

GETTYSBURG, Pa., June 29.—(AP.)—Satisfied that the double tragedy was murder and suicide, Coroner Miller, of Adams County, today said he had decided an inquest would be unnecessary into the deaths of Genevieve Mummert, 15, and her 21-year-old sweetheart, Leon Arentz, both of Two Taverns, near here. The double tragedy was discovered Thursday night when the girl's brother and another youth found Arentz dead and the girl dying from bullet wounds.

Clarke Brothers May Meet Debts Of Defunct Bank

NEW YORK, June 29.—(AP.)—Clarke Brothers, bankers, posted a sign on the door of their offices in Nassau street today announcing they had applied to the federal courts for the appointment of a receiver. The notice stated that the firm's obligations may be met in full if judicious handling of the concern's assets is permitted by the creditors.

Joseph A. Broderick, state superintendent of banks, said the Clarke bank does not come under the supervision of the department.

A voluntary petition in bankruptcy later was filed. In an affidavit signed by James Rae Clarke it was stated "We have assets exceeding $5,000,000 if liquidated in the ordinary course of business." The Irving Trust Company was named as receiver.

FLAG CONTEST WINNERS SAIL

SAN FRANCISCO, June 29.—(US.)—For three days the feted idols of San Francisco, four champions of America's Flag contest sailed into the west tonight and became envoys of the nation's youth to a score of countries in far corners of the globe.

Japan and China, and the islands en route, India and Northern Africa and the capitals of Europe—there they will represent the new generation during the three months of their world-girdling term of "office."

San Francisco gave them a colorful and stirring "bon voyage" these four who were victorious over a quarter million of their fellows in a nation-wide flag contest.

Laden with flowers, books, boat letters from newly-made friends, and escorted by regional winners in the flag contest, they boarded the 'round-the-world liner President Monroe at 3 p. m. today—Alma Groves, Mary McGonigal, Robert Sullivan and Merle Clark. With them, their chaperone, Mrs. Edwin Gregory, and Floyd Williamson, representative of the Hearst newspapers, sponsors of the contest.

There was a brief hour for the last farewells, while Phil Sapiro's municipal band stationed itself on the dock and played appropriate airs. Then, motion picture cameras grinding, the President Monroe, bearing the envoys of American youth, slipped out into the stream.

LETTERS GONE, CARRIER HELD

Joseph Mohawk, 19, of Slickville, Pa., a mail messenger, was held for court Saturday by the United States Commissioner for alleged theft of five registered letters, two of which were said to have contained $250.

Mohawk, who carried mail between the Slickville postoffice and the railroad station, was alleged to have stolen the letters from the mail pouches on June 13 and 17. He was arrested by Postoffice Inspectors E. J. Gallagher and M. V. Brown.

He was committed to jail in default of $3,000 bond.

15 Gassed, Fear New 'Clinic Fumes' Case

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 29.—(AP.)—Fifteen employes of a paint company here today were affected by fumes from burning nitro-cellulose, and a chemist for the company expressed fear that the gases were the same as those which caused 123 deaths in the Cleveland clinic disaster.

None of the employes, all men, was unconscious, but all were placed under close observation by physicians.

Those affected by the fumes were fighting a small fire at the plant of the Jones-Dabney Company. The flames in some manner reached stored cellulose.

$15,448 Contracts Awarded By City

Director Edward G. Lang, of the department of public works, has announced awards of contracts totaling $15,448.40.

Awards, successful bidders and prices were:

CRACK-UP— Critically injured in this plane crash, Viola Gentry in a hospital moans for Ulbrich, in the third day of an endurance flight with Mr. and Mrs. Martin Jensen, who conspired to keep from him the extent of her injuries. The plane, also seeking the endurance record, killed Miss Gentry's pilot, a Pennsylvanian.

FIVE ARE NAMED ON FARM BOARD

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—Two more branches of agriculture, dairying and fruit growing, were given recognition by President Hoover today in selecting the personnel of the newly-created Federal Farm Board.

Places on the board, to which will be entrusted the task of carrying out the provisions of the administration farm relief law, were offered to W. S. Moscrip, secretary-treasurer of the Twin City Milk Producers' Association of St. Paul, Minn., and Charles C. Teague, of the California Citrus League. A definite arrangement with them has not been reached as yet, however, and President Hoover is awaiting their decisions as to whether they will be able to serve.

THREE ARE NAMED

As the situation now stands, three of the eight appointments have been definitely made and accepted, three other places offered and two are yet to be filled. James C. Stone, of Kentucky, representing tobacco; C. B. Denman, of Missouri, representing live stock, and Carl Williams, of Oklahoma, who is presumed to represent cotton, have accepted membership. In addition to the two offers made known today, the President has tendered a place on the board to Alexander H. Legge, of Chicago, president of the International Harvester Company, as the representative of general business interests.

Two appointments remain to be filled. The wheat-growing industry has yet to be given representation, and following his announced intention it is expected that the chief executive will select a man, experienced in the field of finance and banking, for the eighth appointment.

Detective Held For Slugging In Synagogue

COUNTY Detective Thomas Galaig was held for court on a charge of assault and battery at a hearing Saturday before Justice of the Peace E. B. Bishop, of Mt. Lebanon.

The charge was preferred by Jacob Mogerman, who testified at the hearing that Galaig attacked him June 19 in a synagogue in Miller street and hit him with a blackjack. Bond was set at $1,000.

4,036 Promoted By City Schools

The names of 4,036 pupils of the higher grades of public schools were announced in the promotion lists made public Saturday at the office of Dr. William M. Davidson, superintendent of schools. Of the pupils included in the promotion lists, 1,501 were moved from the 8-A grades to high school and 2,535 were transfered from grade school to junior high schools, junior-senior high schools or vocational schools. Those transferred from the sixth to the seventh grades also were included in the promotion list.

N. Castle Commerce Body Picks Directors

NEW CASTLE, Pa., June 29.—The six retiring directors of the New Castle Chamber of Commerce were re-elected by ballot of the entire membership, it was announced today by James Cole, secretary. These men are Judge James A. Chambers, W. J. Offutt, J. K. Love, A. C. Hoyt, T. H. Hartman and T. W. Dickey. At the meeting of the board of directors to be held July 11 officers for the ensuing year will be selected.

JENSEN'S PLANE FORCED TO LAND

ROOSEVELT FIELD, New York, June 29.—(AP.)—Martin Jensen landed his plane, the Three Musketeers, at 6:37 p. m. (Eastern daylight time) tonight, abandoning an attempt to set a new endurance refueling flight, because of lack of fuel.

Jensen, haggard and with a three-days' beard, was almost hysterical with disappointment as the plane landed.

"Why didn't we get gasoline?" he cried. "There was no co-operation. How could we do anything in the air with no co-operation on the ground?"

A short time before landing he had dropped a note asking for more gas, but the fuel did not reach him in time to enable him to continue the flight.

NEARLY 71 HOURS

Jenwen, was accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Marguerite Jensen, and William Ulbrich on the endurance attempt. All three seemed in fairly good physical condition despite the fact that if the flight had continued 24 minutes longer they would have been in the air 71 hours.

Meanwhile, in a hospital not far from Roosevelt Field Miss Viola Gentry was fighting for her life after a crash yesterday in which Jack Ashcraft, her co-pilot, was killed when their plane, on another endurance flight, ran out of fuel and hit a tree. Miss Gentry's condition was extremely critical. She is suffering from a fractured skull, three fractures of the arms, and possible internal injuries.

KEPT IN IGNORANCE

There was one person, however, who did not know her true condition. He was William Ulbrich, and from whom Miss Gentry called hysterically after she was injured.

A conspiracy of kindness between a ground crew and the Jensens kept Ulbrich from getting the full story over a radio telephone with which the plane is equipped.

"CLEVELAND" STILL UP

CLEVELAND, O., June 29.—(AP.)—The monoplane City of Cleveland with a big 13 painted on its blue fuselage, cruised above the Cleveland airport tonight as pilots Roy L. Mitchell and Byrom K. Newcomb ended the first day of the monotonous grind which they hope will bring them a new endurance flight record for planes refueled in the air.

"MINNEAPOLIS" FAILS

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 29.—(AP.)—Miss Minneapolis, piloted by Thorwald (Thunder) Johnson and Owen Haughland, failed today in the attempt to break the world's endurance flight record after 150 hours' continuous flying. The record is 172 hours 32 minutes 1 second.

Motor trouble forced the little Cessna monoplane to land in a wheat field one mile south of Langdon, which is 15 miles south of the Twin Cities, at 11:15 a. m.

The plane was in the air 150¼ hours, having taken off at Wold-Chamberlin Field here at 5 a. m. last Sunday. This time was 22¼ hours less than the record.

HAWKS SAYS HE FLEW U. S. TO BOOST AVIATION

Trans-Continent Hop Still Stunt, He Admits; Wanted To Prove Safety in Flying

After staying awake more than 45 hours, in which he set a transcontinental round trip record flying from New York to Los Angeles and return in 36 hours, 46 minutes and 38 seconds of actual flying time, Capt. Frank M. Hawks today had a well-deserved day of rest. He slept more than 10 hours.

By CAPT. FRANK M. HAWKS

NEW YORK, June 29.—The question asked of me on all sides, now that my flight is over, is: "Why did you do it?"

I want it understood I did it primarily for sport and incidentally to establish added public confidence in aviation. Trans-continental flying is the most practical functon of the airplanes we have available today. I thought the best way to demonstrate this was to make a complete round-trip between the east and west coasts.

The 3,100 miles between our Atlantic and Pacific shores is not such a great distance after all. Somehow, this point is brought out more vividly by immediately retracing one's course to the starting point.

"SEAFLYING IN INFANCY."

The planes we have today are not adequate for practical trans-oceanic flying. I say this with full appreciation of the courage of Lindbergh and those who have followed his trail. Long-distance flying still is in the experimental stage.

Each such attempt should contribute something to the art of flying. If something goes wrong, there should be some scientific record by which further attempts will profit.

Forced landings at sea mean tragedy and no scientific contribution. On the other hand, we can profit by learning the reasons for forced landings in trans-continental flights.

I do not think a trans-continental flight need be a nonstop affair. This, too, still is impractical, and must be classed as a "stunt." With air-rail routes already in operation, the day is not distant when all-air trips will be the rule, with five or six stops between coasts. This would mean an addition of only three hours at most and still would keep the trans-continental time within 24 hours.

Frankly, the only reason I made nonstop flights was to draw closer attention to the feasibility of flying across the continent, with stops or without.

HAD GOOD WEATHER

My trips from and to New York were made under perfect conditions. There was no untoward event in either direction. The wind was against me for most of the trip west. Coming back I had a 50-50 break, starting with a tail wind, then running into head winds and finishing with quartering winds.

The air was clear except at the end of each trip. I ran into fog only near Los Angeles and again coming back over Pennsylvania. Fortunately, it was not a solid fog and I made my way through with ease. My radio helped immeasurably. I was able to pick up weather reports constantly all the way across in both directions and these reports were of much greater value than the usual ground signals which can give no information as to varying conditions further on.

SLEEP A BIG PROBLEM

My only difficulty was having to stay awake 45 hours in a stretch. By the time I reached Roosevelt Field I was so fatigued I seemed to have lost control of my senses. Between the fog and the low lights, when I flew over the field I did not see the fence into which I crashed later.

I was directed into a rather short runway and was rolling at a fast speed when I suddenly saw the obstruction ahead. I jammed on the brakes just in time and skidded into the fence. The undercarriage and nose were partly damaged, but there was nothing serious about that.

After all, any landing you can walk away from is a good landing. As it was, it was the most serious accident I had ever had and the first one of any sort I have experienced in five years.

Roosevelt Field is fast being built into a first-class airport. I understand the runways are soon to be marked off with green lights at night and red lights are to be placed on all obstructions.

Loses $3,000 on Trick.

SHARON, Pa., June 29.—Mrs. Mike Gollias, 40, a midwife, lost her $3,000 savings when she fell victim to an old trick. Yesterday two unknown men promised her $30,000, if she placed the money in a mysterious box.

TOLEDO GANG MEMBER SLAIN

TOLEDO, O., June 29.—(INS.)—Gangland war flared up anew in Toledo today and Albert (Dago Holly) Parlow, 47, alleged racketter and hi-jacker and former aid of Earle (Ike) Bricker, Toledo beer baron, who was "put on the spot" less than a month ago, fell dead before a rival gangster's bullet.

The assassination of the well-known figure in the underworld here occurred at the Riverview Inn, in the famous Bay Shore district.

Indications showed that the murder was well planned. Parlow was shot through the back of the head while standing at a bar in the inn by a bullet which had torn through a window.

Lay Cornerstone At Sharpsville

SHARPSVILLE, Pa., June 29.—The cornerstone of the new Presbyterian Church will be laid at special service tomorrow afternoon. The Rev. Dr. George W. Shelton, of Pittsburgh, will deliver the principal address.

Westmoreland Scouts Open Camp Sunday

GREENSBURG, Pa., June 29.—Camp Wesco, the Westmoreland County Boy Scout, near Ligonier, will open Sunday for the 1929 season. More than 300 boys have registered so far to take the summer camping course this year.

PARENTS ALSO SEEK DEGREES

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 29.—(AP.)—Graduation at the same time of a father and son and a mother and three sons took place at two Arkansas institutions this year.

William S. Cazort, of El Dorado, Ark., and his son, William S. Cazort, Jr., were graduated together June 3 at Hendrix College, in Conway. This despite the fact that the elder Cazort took courses leading to the A. B. degree 25 years ago. He was prevented from taking his examinations in 1903 by illness, but qualified for his degree last term by writing a thesis under the old rules of the college. It was accepted as a substitute for oral examinations now in effect.

At College of the Ozarks, in Clarksville, Mrs. Lillie Ralston, of Clarksville, and her eldest sons, Roy and Willard, received their bachelor of arts degrees simultaneously this year. Clark, her youngest son, was graduated from the preparatory academy of the college.

Mrs. Ralston pursued her studies at the college along with her sons.

Stimson Buys Historic Home of Four Presidents

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—Secretary Stimson has purchased as his home "Woodley," a historic property overlooking Rock Creek Park, in which four Presidents have lived and historic conferences have been held.

The large southern colonial house, surrounded by spacious grounds, was the summer home of Presidents Van Buren, Tyler, Buchanan and Cleveland. It once was owned by Benjamin Stoddert, the first Secretary of the Navy.

George Washington was a frequent visitor to the spot and is said to have suggested it as the proper one for the capitol.

Col. E. M. House held at Woodley many of his important conferences with foreign diplomats prior to America's entry into the World War.

DUKE ALUMINUM SUIT APPEALED

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—George D. Haskell, of Springfield, Mass., today asked the Supreme Court to reconsider its refusal on June 3 to review two cases in which he sought a judgment for $45,000,000 against the estate of the late James B. Duke.

Haskell, in the suit, charged he was the victim of an alleged aluminum trust which had persuaded Duke to refuse to carry out an agreement to furnish financial assistance in establishing a new aluminum company. The trial court gave him a judgment for $8,000,000, which was set aside by the Circuit Court of Appeals.

One Killed, One Hurt As Truck Hits Auto

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., June 29.—When a truck loaded with tile swerved around a curve and crashed into their sedan today at Tennerton, two miles from Buckhannon, Albert Riffle, 50, of Carolina Mines, Marion County, was killed and his wife, Mrs. Sarah Riffle, was perhaps fatally injured. Charged with reckless driving, Miner Woods, 21, of Hacker Valley, driver of the truck, was jailed in default of bond.

DECLINE SEEN IN BUILDING

HARRISBURG, June 29.—(AP.)—Building operations in Pennsylvania declined more than 28 per cent in May over the same month a year ago. Reports from 42 cities and boroughs to the State Department of Labor and Industry show construction work costing $16,135,162 was started during the past month in contrast to the $22,430,099 in the same municipalities in May, 1928. The total for the first five months of 1929 from 40 municipalities dropped $6,779,736, or 7.4 per cent.

Only 14 of the 42 cities for which comparable statistics are available for May reported gains. The largest increase occurred in Reading with an advance of $562,214 measured at 141 per cent. Three other cities which reported increases in excess of $100,000 were Bethlehem, with $138,197; Coatesville, $102,400, and Washington, $119,900.

Philadelphia suffered the greatest loss, $4,690,315, and Pittsburgh was next with a drop of $834,166.

Twenty-five cities encountered losses during the five-month period. Pittsburgh and Harrisburg, however, were the only ones whose loss amounted to more than $1,000,000. Erie, with an increase of $2,617,825; Reading, with $2,267,426, and Philadelphia, with $1,525,180, led the 15 cities reporting gains.

MEXICAN VOWS U.S. TRAIN BAN

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—Senator Shortridge, of California, today urged President Hoover to have government officials use all their influence in preventing the carrying out of a reported intention of the Mexican governor of Lower California to prevent American railroads from entering his state after 6 p. m.

The senator informed Mr. Hoover that the Mexican governor had given notice of carrying out such an order as a measure of retaliation for the American rule which prohibits persons from crossing the border line into the United States at Tiajuana at 6 p. m. and at Calexico at 9 p. m.

In the opinion of Senator Shortridge, the American order should stand in spite of the Mexican threats of retaliation. Senator Shortridge said that he was hopeful the controversy would yield to negotiations.

State Puts Curb on Somerset Bus Line

HARRISBURG, June 29.—(AP.)—The Somerset Bus Company was ordered by the Public Service Commission today to cease its group and party service in Johnstown until it has obtained a franchise. A complaint filed by the Traction Bus Company, of Johnstown, charged that the former bus carrier was operating in violation of the public service company law.

The Johnstown baseball club, of the Middle Atlantic League, has been using the Somerset bus for transportation.

Va., arrested Thursday by United States secret service operatives in a rooming house on Wylie avenue, were ordered removed to the Federal District Court at Wheeling, W. Va., to answer a charge of forging a government Liberty bond and treasury certificates.

The government obligations involved were alleged to have been stolen from a boarder at the home of the defendants three months ago.

16 on Fishing Ship Perish in Storm

SAN PEDRO, Cal., June 29.—(INS.)—Reports that 16 fishermen lost their lives when the 110-foot fishing boat Southern Cross sank in a gale off Cape San Lucas at the southern extremity of Lower California, Mexico, were brought here today by M. W. Eley, publisher of a marine journal. Eley said the reports were current along the San Diego waterfront.

A second boat, the New Monterey, was driven into a west coast port when the storm struck a fishing fleet, according to reports.

Moore Resignation Rumor Is Revived

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—Reports that Alexander P. Moore was to retire as ambassador to Peru were revived today when it was learned that Mr. Moore is on his way to the United States. At the White House it was said, however, that Mr. Moore's return was occasioned by poor health. There was no comment as to a possible successor.

FOUR IDENTIFY POLISH JOHN

SOMERSET, Pa., June 29.—Three of the four men suspected of the holdup in the Central City National Bank, June 6, are now prisoners in the Somerset County Jail here. State police are continuing their search for the missing bandit, who escaped with $5,000 in cash.

John Lucian, alias Polish John, of Detroit, captured this week in Detroit, was identified by four persons at Central City last night, police say, as the driver of the bandits' automobile the day of the bank robbery. He was held for court without bail by a Central City magistrate on charges of robbery, assault and battery with intent to kill and breaking and entering to commit a felony.

Lucian was a member of Paul Jaworski's notorious "Flathead Mob."

Felix Fertak, alias Frank Krous, of Cleveland, O., and John Wozniak, of Detroit, captured and landed in jail shortly after the bank robbery, both displayed pleasure upon learning that Polish John was a fellow prisoner. They claim that Lucian spoiled their chances of escape after the Central City holdup by driving away and deserting them.

Education Delegates, Including Manley, Approved by Hoover

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—President Hoover has approved the appointment of delegates to represent the United States at the international conference on commercially education in Amsterdam, during the first week of September.

The delegation is composed of Dr. Louis K. Manley, dean of the school of business, University of Pittsburgh; Clay D. Slinker, director of the department of business in public schools of Des Moines, Ia.; Dr. W. J. Donald, director of the American Management Association, New York; John G. Kirk, director of commercial education, board of education, Philadelphia! Dr. Henry Rand Hatfield, of the department of economics and commerce of the University of California; Dr. Emory R. # LEATHER TARIFF PROTESTS AIRED

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—A series of complaints against the provisions of the House tariff bill placing duties on leather and shoes, now on the free list, were laid today before a Senate finance sub-committee by approximately a dozen witnesses.

Meanwhile, three other subcommittees which have either completed or started hearings on other sections of the bill were reviewing reams of evidence and testimony presented with a view to proposing chances in the bill when it comes before the full committee for consideration.

Chairman Smoot, whose subcommittee concluded hearings yesterday on the sugar tariff, continued his study of the sliding scale plan designed to stabilize domestic sugar prices by fluctuating the duties between prescribed limits as the price varied, but announced he would not call any witnesses on it unless a practical method were worked out.

Declaring that foreign manufacturers were making an "intensive drive" on the American market, Abraham Mittenthal, New York leather goods manufacturer, asked a raise in the House rate on these products from 35 and 50 per cent to 75 per cent.

URGES BRITAIN GIVE UP BASES

LONDON, June 29.—(AP.)—Relinquishing of Britain's naval bases in the West Indies is suggested by Charles Kingsley Webster, professor of international politics at the University of Wales, in a contribution to the current issue of The Nation.

Webster, who is the author of numerous political works, and once was assigned to the British general staff, argues that such a move would advance greatly a better Anglo-American understanding and that the present is particularly appropriate for action.

Changes in the governments of both countries have removed barriers which could have hindered before, he writes, and the tide is now moving in full blood in the right direction. The problem is a delicate and intricate one and he urges that to ease it the problem of sea law be eliminated from any discussions which the two nations may undertake.

Efforts, he says, should be entirely concentrated on "the main issue between the two nations, namely reduction of naval armaments in such a manner that parity will be preserved."

NEW AIRPLANE AREA FORECAST BY MAJ. YOUNG

Overnight Trips Predicted as Becoming Popular; Fear Being Rapidly Dispelled.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—The time is near, in the belief of Maj. Clarence M. Young, director of aeronautics of the Commerce Department, when overnight airplane trips will be taken generally with as much unconcern as now attends a night ride in a railroad coach.

"People were afraid of trains when they were first started," he points out, "but their fear gradually wore away when this method of transportation proved its efficiency.

"Likewise, they were afraid of automobiles when they were first getting a foothold, but the fear was dispelled as motor transportation proved a success.

"The same thing will prove true of airplanes. Many persons still are afraid to take a flight, but they will get over this as they realize that air transportation is safe and sane."

PREDICTS SAFETY

He is confident that flying will become just as safe as any other form of transportation, and that properly organized scheduled air transport services are no more hazardous at present than fast railroad service.

Commenting on aviation in connection with the third anniversary of the establishment of the commerce department's bureau of aeronautics, Monday, he observes that the United States is embarking upon the "greatest era of air transportation the world has seen."

"It is only during the last three years," he recalls, "that private capital has given comprehensive thought to aviation. It had been previously a difficult job getting money to expand aviation, but now about $500,000,000 has been made available and the full development of air transportation should result."

EXPANSION FORECAST

Before the end of this year he expects to see a great expansion of passenger transportation.

"Our transport planes are as good as the best to be found elsewhere," he holds. "During the past three years personnel has been trained, radio and weather service perfected and the general advance has been so rapid that the foundation has been laid for additional service that will equal or surpass any found elsewhere."

3 Crawford County Churches Combine

GREENVILLE, Pa., June 29.—The final obstacle to forming a union church in Spartansburg, Crawford County, was removed at the one hundred eighth session of the French Creek Baptist Association. The association granted permission to the congregation there to deed its property to a union church.

The new church would include Christian, Methodist and the Baptist churches.

Waynesburg Plans Old-Fashion Fourth

WAYNESBURG, Pa., June 29.—An old-fashioned Fourth of July celebration, in which the martial airs from 20 or more bugle and drums corps will blend with the spielers' symphonies from a mardi-gras midway, will be staged here July 4 under auspices of the James Farrell Post of the American Legion.

Panama Canal Sets High Tonnage Record

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—The cargo tonnage carried through Panama Canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific in May set a new record for all time with 920,360 long tons. The heaviest Pacific-bound tonnage in any previous month—875,641—was in October, 1928.

If the law is passed it is expected former Czar Ferdinand will be allowed to return to Bulgaria for a brief visit.

New Week of Car Pass Awards Inaugurated

Today's street car awards start a new week in the Sun-Telegraph-Pittsburgh Railways Company street car pass campaign.

Many Pittsburghers have been benefited by this campaign to reward holders of current street car passes and the work proceeds this week as usual. It has become a habit with a large number of Sun-Telegraph readers to watch this column every day.

Every day 25 pass holders are awarded passes good the following week; five are granted $2, and five others receive $5. Once a week one pass holder is eligible to collect the grand weekly award of $100; another owner of a current pass is eligible to collect the second grand weekly award of $50; and 10 passes bring their owners added $5 awards.

| | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 26,909 | 70,134 | 04,900 | 73,505 | 13,981 | 37,493 | 63,888 |
| 83,606 | 26,781 | 49,132 | 70,982 | 09,991 | 59,454 | 79,613 |
| 79,896 | 81,776 | 85,932 | 87,115 | | | |

Holders of these passes are eligible to receive $5 awards:

15,622 58,029 08,111 49,016 87,111

Two dollars will be granted to the following pass holders at the Sun-Telegraph:

This week's passes, to which the above awards have been made, are orange, of Series No. 27.

Employes of the Sun-Telegraph and Pittsburgh Railways Company are not eligible in this campaign.

Suit Charges Ford With Infringing on Oil Feeder Patent

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 29.—(AP.)—Charging the Ford Motor Company with infringement of his patent on an oil feeder, Albert E. Nichols filed suit in Federal Court here asking an accounting. The suit did not ask for a specific amount, but it was said that the damage sought might amount to $1,000,000.

The complaint set forth that the automobile manufacturer was at present using the feeder. An injunction preventing further use of the invention and a court assessment of damages after an accounting was asked.

An amount three times the actual damage "in view of the deliberate and willful infringement" was demanded.

Can of Tobacco Deflects Bullet, Saves Man's Life

Associated Press.

MARTINS FERRY, O., June 29. REES EVANS, 45, nightwatchman for the Scott Lumber Company, today owes his life to the fact that he carries a can of tobacco in his vest pocket. While making his rounds at 2:00 a. m. today, his gun was discharged accidentally. The bullet struck the tobacco box and was deflected from striking a vital organ by the fraction of an inch. Doctors said his condition was serious, but that he had a chance for recovery.

SCHOOL SEIZED BY STUDENTS

MEXICO CITY, June 29.—(AP.)—Students of another national school demanded resignation of the director and took over the building to enforce their demands.

A guard was placed at the doors of the National School of Music, Theatrical Arts and Dancing to keep out all except the strikers.

The strike of National University students has now continued almost two months. President Portes Gil has promised to free the institution from government control but the students have declared they will not return until the decree is signed.

2 Bandits Leave Holdup Victim In Birthday Suit

International News Service.

HIGHTSTOWN, N. J., June 29. TWO armed men robbed Edward J. Kuhn of $60 in his stand on the Windsor road at 2 a. m. today. Before escaping, the bandits forced Kuhn to strip off his clothes, which they scattered along the road as they departed.

Kuhn's home is 100 feet from the roadstand, and he sprinted along the highway in his birthday suit to the house, and telephoned for the state police.

Iron Worker Quits Farrell Plant; 56 Years in Service

SHARON, Pa., June 29.—P. J. (Paddy) McGrath, veteran iron worker, will retire Monday after spending 56 years in service. Mr. McGrath is now employed at the Farrell plant of the Carnegie Steel Company.

He was born in County Down, Ireland, and started pulling doors in West Cumberland Steel Company plant in England at the age of 11.

At the age of 17 he came to America and located in Homestead, Pa., where he unloaded ore at the old Carrie furnace. Later he worked in various departments of the plant. He left the company after the great strike of 1892 and went to St. Louis. Later he moved to New Mexico. He came here in 1897.

FINDS 'PADLOCK' ON HER DOOR

"Closed for violation of the national prohibition act by order of the United States Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania. All persons are forbidden to enter premises without order of the United States marshal."

Such a notice, Miss Adda Nauman said, in a petition filed Saturday in Federal Court, she found on her property in Ross Township when she took a prospective purchaser to the place to inspect it. She wants to know the reason for the government "padlock" on part of the three-story building and the placard with the above notice.

Miss Nauman, in her petition, said she had no knowledge of any court order directing the closing of the premises under the "padlock," and unless the padlock and notice are removed she will suffer great loss, as she has it listed for sale with various real estate concerns.

The property involved is known as "The Evergreen," Babcock boulevard and Evergreen road. The petitioner said it was bequeathed to her under the will of August Stitzer. Court records show that the dance floor and dining room of the building were padlocked under a court decree on June 5, in an injunction proceeding in which Harry Nauman was designated as the owner of the property and Ada M. Woods, the proprietor.

Judge Nelson McVicar granted a rule on the prohibition authorities and the United States Attorney, returnable July 5, to show cause why the padlock and notice should not be removed.

American Railway Division to Meet

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 29.—(AP.)—Atlantic City, N. J., was selected as next year's meeting place of the mechanical division of the American Railway Association at the closing session of the tenth annual convention here.

Seven members of the general committee to serve until June, 1921, were selected as follows:

F. H. Hardin, assistant to the president, New York Central Lines; O. S. Jackson, general superintendent of motive power and machinery, Union Pacific System; J. S. Lentz, consulting master car builder, Lehigh Valley Railroad; J. A. Power, superintendent of motive power and equipment, Southern Pacific Lines in Texas and Louisiana; A. G. Trumbull, chief mechanical engineer, Erie Railroad; S. Zwight, general mechanical superintendent, Northern Pacific Railway, and W. L. Bean, mechanical manager, New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad.

Mother Kisses Baby, Then Drowns Self

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., June 29.—After kissing her 2-month-old baby goodby, Mary Woody, 21, a pretty red-haired girl, belle of her neighborhood, walked out of her mountain home near Arlingdale, Nicholas County, Friday, and drowned herself in Gauley River, half a mile away. Her body, fully clothed, was found by her father, Edward Woody, farmer, and a brother. A disappointed love affair was alleged the cause.

Springdale Man Crushed by Trains

Confused as he was crossing tracks to catch a train, Jack Romano, 45, of Springdale, was crushed between two passenger trains at the Springdale Station of the Pennsylvania Railroad today. He died shortly after being admitted to Allegheny Valley Hospital at Tarentum, according to the coroner's report.

Dry Forces Renew Raids at Memphis

MEMPHIS, June 29.—(AP.)—Six squads of federal dry raiders, each accompanied by a city policeman, launched a second liquor crusade today and expected by nightfall to add 40 prisoners to the 82 arrested earlier in the week.

Ellwood City K. P. In Annual Memorial

ELLWOOD CITY, Pa., June 29.—The annual memorial services of Alma Lodge, Knights of Pythias, will be held in their hall here tomorrow. The Rev. Bert E. Williams, paster of the First Baptist Church, will give the address.

Ripley Is Back With More Amazing Facts

Famous Author of "Believe It or Not!" Visits Fountain of Blood and Other Central American Incredible Realities

When some white-haired "Believe It or Not" cartoonist steps to his sketching machine three centuries hence, perhaps one of the strangest pictures he will draw will be Robert L. Ripley, the original "Believe It or Not" man.

"Rip" has just returned to New York from two months' visit to Central America. According to his own estimate, he has now visited sixty-seven countries in search of "Believe It or Not" material.

Standing on the deck of the Orizaba, he was like the Ancient Mariner with his tale to tell. For Ripley is not one of those artists who looks upon his work as a means of livelihood. He is actually "bubbling over" with the impressions of his travels.

"Believe It or Not" is the most natural expression one may expect from the mouth of Ripley. It was certainly in his eyes as he told of the Fountain of Blood, the mountain which "drowned" a city, bamboos which grow one foot eight inches in a day, the use of rich mahogany wood for fences and railroad ties, and various other sights seen in El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala.

Twice in his trip, he resorted to the aeroplane to facilitate his progress through the country. In transportation, he said, Central America is sadly behind. He declared:

"When once Central America is knitted together with airways, it will be as popular to the tourist as Egypt. I have never seen two countries so alike. Their pyramids are practically the same and almost as old. But it will be some time before this likeness is recognized.

"The inhabitants are very primitive. The pilot in one of my flights was telling me that he always carries a shotgun and a blackjack to keep back the people at some of the places he lands. Many of them have never seen an automobile, never mind an aeroplane."

Quite accidentally, "Rip" said, he discovered the Guatemala Agua Mountain. After a volcanic eruption, the crater of this mountain filled up with rain water. One day, one of its sides collapsed with the pressure and precipitated the lake onto the city of Antigua. All of its citizens were drowned.

The Fountain of Blood was found by Ripley in Gracias, Honduras. It is a phenomenon of nature, he explained, and attracts deceivingly to its banks hundreds of buzzards, vampire bats, mosquitoes, and insects.

In Yucatan, while inspecting the Mayan ruins, he was stricken by an ailment in the ears. It was necessary for him to journey to Havana for an operation.

Back in New York, he will devote himself to work at his desk for a while, but next year will sail to West Africa. He will not be satisfied, he said yesterday, until he visits all the countries of the world.

On July 8th Ripley will entertain readers of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. He has also contracted to compile two more "Believe It or Not" books.

WRITE A SELLING AD TO BRING REPLIES

The suggestions offered below are made to help Sun-Telegraph advertisers get best results from their farm ads.

Describe what you have to sell so clearly and completely that your ad will receive prompt action.

Do not defeat a sale with meaningless abbreviations that readers do not understand. Good copy in The Sun-Tele will make the sale.

IN THE SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY of California general farming is a paying business, feeding millions of people in towns and cities. Alfalfa, combined with dairying, hogs and poultry, yields a good income. A small one-family farm, with little hired labor, insures success. You can work outdoors all the year. Newcomers welcome. The Santa Fe Railway has no land to sell, but offers a free service in helping you get right location. Write for illustrated San Joaquin Valley folder and get our farm paper—"The Earth"—free for six months. C. L. Seagraves, General Colonization Agent, Santa Fe Railway, 815 Railway Exchange, Chicago.

HIBERNIANS PICNIC AT KENNYWOOD

Frank Hurley James M. Kelly William Doyle

MERRY-GO-ROUND—Besides the many athletic events and other entertainment arranged by the committee, youngsters found diversion on the many amusements at the park. Helen Rowe, 2, of 23 Boggs avenue, found the merry-go-round to her liking.

2,500 ATTEND HIBERNIAN FETE

Sunshine and balmy breezes helped make the twenty-fifth annual Irish Day reunion of the Ancient Order of Hibernians of Allegheny county, a success at Kennywood Park Saturday. More than 2,500 Hibernians, friends and relatives attended the outing.

Programs of sports, card parties and various other entertainment in addition to the regular park amusements provided diversion for the picnickers, young and old. A number of the older men and women attending the outing were among those who attended the first reunion at Old Calhoun park in 1905. It was at this event that the idea of annual picnics was conceived.

BYRD LOCATES POLAR LANDS

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—A report from Commander Richard E. Byrd, made public by Secretary Adams, related that observers in the airplanes of his South Pole expedition had discovered approximately 20,000 square miles of hitherto unknown land in the Antarctic.

The flights, according to the report to the Secretary of the Navy, were made during the period preceding the winter-long polar night which now has forced suspension of exploration.

The major part of the report described the discovery and partial survey of the Rockefeller Mountain range which one of his airplane parties discovered in January, and was surveyed principally from the air in the two months following.

Byrd reported the landing on March 7 of L. M. Gould, geologist of the party, near one of the southern mountains of the range.

This, he said, was the first time that man had discovered a new land from the air and landed upon it for scientific investigations.

These mountains, he reported, "appear to be struggling to keep their heads above the snow" which covers all but the highest patches of rock bared by the wind.

Commander Byrd mentioned the sighting of other peaks, including one which resembled the Matterhorn, and very extensive snow-covered land areas, but because observations were uncertain and mirages frequent, he said he did not wish to report upon them until the next season's explorations had checked the first findings.

SUNDAY MOVIE OWNER SCORES

WILLIAMSON, W. Va., June 29.—(AP.)—A temporary injunction was served upon Prosecuting Attorney J. Walter Copley today restraining officers from interfering with the operation of a theater at Delbarton on Sunday.

The temporary writ was obtained yesterday from Circuit Court Judge I. C. Herndon upon petition of counsel for O. Hindy, owner of the theater, who claimed the right to operate the theater on Sunday under the practices of his religion.

Hindy, who is a Mohammedan, contends he observes his Sunday on Friday when his theater is closed.

Copley said he would probably take action in the case on his return from a vacation in a month.

He also said the injunction case might await disposition in the Circuit Court of a charge against Hindy of operating a theater on Sunday. He was held recently for grand jury action on that charge.

Wurlitzer Shows Rare Old Violins

More than 50 rare violins, valued at many thousands of dollars, are on exhibit at the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company, 719 Liberty avenue, a part of a collection assembled by Mr. Wurlitzer and J. C. Freeman, curator of the Wurlitzer collection. The two outstanding exhibits are a Stradivarius, known as the "Lipinsky," and a specimen of the work of Joseph Guarnerius, known as the "Spanish Joseph." These two exhibits are valued at $60,000 alone. Many old bow makers are presented in a collection of old sticks. The exhibit is being held in connection with the opening of the new Wurlitzer store.

4 Die In Store Fireworks Fire

ST. LOUIS, June 29.—(AP.)—At least four persons were burned to death in a fire which followed an explosion of fireworks this afternoon in Charlotte's 5-and-10 cent store here. Reports were that two other persons had perished.

Thirty minutes after the explosion the fire was under control and four charred bodies were removed. One was that of a boy about 16, two others of women and the fourth of a girl. The boy was identified as Tony Henderson.

FINANCIAL Local Securities MARKETS

LOCAL MARKET FOLLOWS LEAD OF NEW YORK

New Peaks Established on Active Trading Issues; Steel Foundry Spurts.

Noticeably improved sentiment on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange during the week just ended was in line with the changed attitude in the New York market, where prices for leading industrials soared to new high record levels. While the high-record crop in the local market was rather slim, the improvement noted in numerous sections of the list was quite substantial, and many of the active issues closed the period with gains of from 2 to 7 points. On the other hand, it was not entirely a one-way market, and there were a few stocks which dropped back a point or so. These recessions, however, were not the result, apparently, of direct operations for the decline, but were, rather, attributable to absence of buying interest in the particular stocks affected.

There were two or three colorful movements during the week. The most active trading took place in Lone Star Gas and Western Public Service, the latter a newly-formed mid-western gas utility, which jumped to a new high record above 32, but met enough selling there to halt the advance. Lone Star reached a new peak at 86.

Carnegie Metals bobbed into the limelight late in the week and adjusted its market position to a level three points above the previous week's low point. At the high of the movement, Carnegie was above $20 a share but late selling clipped the quotation and the stock closed at 19, comparing with the low of 16 recorded the week before. The buying movement in Carnegie was stimulated by reports that a survey ordered as a preliminary to reforming the Mexican mining laws is about completed. Carnegie has two mines in Northern Mexico.

Pittsburgh Steel Foundry was one of the strongest stocks in the market, rising six points on a turnover of less than 300 shares. The buying of this issue made its appearance on Friday and the demand continued through yesterday's short session. There was very little stock available, however, as only 125 shares came out yesterday and 145 the day before. This comprised the week's total turnover of 270 shares. The Street is expecting a dividend of $1 to be declared on Steel Foundry, although there have been no official intimations of such action. The company paid $1 in January, and business this year is running far ahead of 1928's first half.

EXCHANGE HERE BREAKS RECORD IN FIRST HALF

Values of Stocks Traded In 6 Months Just Ended Exceed Any Year's Amount

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

The first half of 1929 was a record breaking period for the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange. More shares were sold in the six months brought to a close with Saturday's trading than in any entire year since 1923.

Although a comparative compilation is not available, it is quite probable that this year has exceeded all corresponding periods in the exchange's history in the total value of securities changing hands. The high records in shares sold, attained in years gone by, were achieved when the bulk of trading was in penny mining stocks. Since that time these low priced issues have been removed from the list and the market this year has been in issues carrying a substantial price.

BUSINESS DOUBLES

In the first half of this year 2,396,081 shares changed hands. This was more than double the figure for the same months of 1928, when 1,044,579 shares were sold.

It compared with 2,013,205 shares in the entire year of 1928. Last year's total for the 12 months was beaten in the first five months of this year alone, when 2,143,518 shares were recorded.

If the latter half of this year duplicates the first half in volume, the total for the 12 months will come close to meeting even the high record achieved when the penny stocks had their peak.

A total of 4,792,162 shares, which would be twice the volume of the six months, would compare with 5,579,055 in 1919, the high for all time.

"UNLISTED" SALES HIGH

This year the volume of trading has been increased by permitting transactions in "unlisted" stocks. These are issues which have applied for regular listing, but whose applications have not received formal approval due to delays in meeting all of the requirements.

Some of the most active issues on the local board in recent months have been in the "unlisted" class. Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt was among these. On Saturday this stock was transferred to the regular list. Other active issues on the "unlisted" board have been Western Public Service and Lone Star, when issued.

Reflecting the increased volume of business and the improved future outlook for the local market, the value of memberships has made sensational advances. The market for memberships is now about six times the price in the latter part of 1928.

LETTERS FROM INVESTORS

Conducted by LEO HILLMANN.

ANOTHER STOCK

A. G.—I own $5,000 Morris Plan certificates and 40 shares Cities Service. I want to invest an additional $2,000 in a stock and shall appreciate suggestions.

Ans.—Ten shares Swift will cost less than $1,300 and bring an income of $80. The company is one of the two leading meat packers in the country and dividends have been paid without interruption for 43 years. The remaining $700 is not much for the bank, but you know how to save and soon can build up the surplus to $2,000. Hold Cities Service. The company's earnings have registered a steady increase. Morris Plan certificates are sound.

LOW YIELD

W. K.—I am a reader of your paper and want your opinion of a purchase of Standard Oil, of New Jersey?

Ans.—Standard Oil, of New Jersey, has been a consistent dividend payer over a long period. In 1922 a 400 per cent stock dividend was distributed. The company is a leading factor in the industry. At recent levels, however, the yield is 2 per cent. Does that please you? How many shares do you contemplate buying?

HOW MUCH?

J. O.—I have a considerable sum in savings banks, but own no securities. What is your opinion of a purchase of Republica Iron and Steel preferred, National Bellas Hess preferred, Radio Corporation of America preferred "A," United Corporation, St. Louis-San Francisco preferred, and Republic of Peru 6s, 1960?

Ans.—All the stocks you have selected pay dividends, with the exception of United Corporation of Delaware. The company, organized in January, has not yet announced a dividend policy for the common although the preferred will pay $3 a share annually. The foreign bond is all right. But your list is top-heavy. You might include more bonds. Furthermore, you greatly handicap us by neglecting to mention the exact amount. "A considerable sum" is too indefinite.

STOCK CALLED

M. E.—A few years ago I bought ten shares Victor Talking Machine prior preferred, which will be retired July 1. What do you think of ten shares American Sugar Refining preferred to replace it?

Ans.—We think well of your plan. American Sugar Refining is a dominant factor in the industry and dividends have been paid on the preferred since organization, in 1891. You will get $1,100 cash for Victor Talking Machine prior preferred, which will be more than enough for ten shares American Sugar Refining preferred. The income will be $70. Have you at least $1,000 in the bank?

ADVICE FOR FRIEND

C. G.—A few years ago, among other securities, I was advised to buy S. W. Straus bonds. A friend, a foreigner, has some money in the bank and I suggested that he buy them too; or, should he buy stocks?

Ans.—If this is the first time your friend has bought securities he would do well to buy bonds. S. W. Straus first mortgage 6s are sound. Explain to him the importance of leaving at least $1,000 cash in the bank. How much would remain after a reasonable purchase of the bonds? Maybe he could buy a few preferred of good grade, too.

FOUR STOCKS

G. L.—I own $1,500 S. W. Straus first mortgage 6s, $500 American Telephone and Telegraph 5s, 1960, ten shares each North American Edison preferred, American Telephone and Telegraph preferred, five each Jenkins Television and Eastern States Power preferred. I have $4,800 in a saving bank and want to invest about $4,000 in stocks. Please give suggestions.

Ans.—Buy ten shares each Glidden Company prior preferred, Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea preferred, Utilities Power and Light preferred and Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific 7 per cent preferred. Here you have an investment of less than $4,300 and an annual income of $280. The rest, over $500, gives you a good start toward an additional surplus. You have been conservative in most of your purchases. The bonds are sound and you can count on regular dividends from three stocks. Jenkins Television common pays nothing. It is a speculation.

INVESTORS' INFORMATION SERVICE

The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph will be glad to answer for its readers inquiries about investments in stocks and bonds. It will give the best available information from the most authoritative sources. This service is entirely without charge, and all letters will be held in strictest confidence. Every inquiry must contain name and address of the writer and a 2-cent stamp for reply. If the inquiry is of general interest it will be answered in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. The Sun-Telegraph can not undertake to answer inquiries over the telephone.

SEEKS OPINION

R. F.—I own outright 300 shares Public Service of New Jersey, 100 Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron, 70 United Corporation, 50 Freeport Texas, Marland Oil and 30 General Motors. What is your opinion of them?

Ans.—Dividends on Public Service of New Jersey and General Motors are well-covered by earnings. Freeport Texas can boast of no enviable record. Following a six-year suspension, an initial quarterly dividend of 50 cents was distributed February, 1927, since which time the amount has varied. You get no income from Marland Oil, United Corporation and Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron. They are speculations, but we would not care to venture a guess on future prices.

EARNINGS AMPLE

M. S.—I have noticed your advice to others. Please give information on Gillette Safety Razor and your opinion of a purchase of the stock.

Ans.—Gillette Safety Razor is a leading maker of safety razors, blades, knives, etc. Capitalization is 2,100,000 shares, no par. There is no funded debt. Earnings of $7.74 a share in 1928 compared with $7.29 in 1927 and $6.65 in 1926; in the first quarter of current year they were $2.16 a share, contrasted with $2.22 for similar period in 1928. Dividends, with liberal extras, have been paid since 1917. At recent levels the yield is 4½ per cent. Is that enough? How much of your accumulated surplus will you expend?

WANTS MORE BONDS

Miss P. G.—I am a business woman and own $1,000 Chicago Evening American 6s, 1939. I have $5,000 in a savings bank with which I want to buy more bonds. Please advise.

Ans.—Don't reduce your surplus below $1,000. Buy $2,000 each New York Title and Mortgage 5½s and Suffolk Title and Mortgage 5½s. The income of $220 will be an increase of $60 above savings bank interest. Your bond is sound. When your surplus reaches $2,000 again, you ought to think of buying a few preferred stocks. Consult us then.

NOT ENOUGH

E. A.—Recently, I have become a reader of your paper and have noticed your column. How can I get a better income on $600 now in a savings bank?

Ans.—You could do it in many practical ways, but the difference would be small. Don't be impatient. Try to build up the bank account until you have $2,000. Then you can buy a sound security and still have enough left for emergencies. Write to us again.

TO INCREASE INCOME

W. A.—I am a working man with three dependents. I own no securities. My life's savings of $5,000 are in a bank at 4½ per cent. Please give suggestions for increasing the income.

Ans.—Don't you think you ought to buy bonds? Leave $1,000 in the savings bank for an emergency fund. Buy $2,000 each S. W. Straus first mortgage 6s and Title Guarantee and Trust 5½s. Annual income is $230, an increase of $50 above savings bank interest. When your surplus reaches $2,000 again a preferred stock of good grade would fit in well.

STOCKS FOR INCOME

M. G.—I am a wage-earner, steadily employed. I have $2,800 in a savings bank, with which I want to buy stocks. Please advise.

Ans.—Had you not specified stocks, we might have suggested bonds. Are you quite sure you can get along with a surplus of about $800? Then, get ten shares each West Penn Electric 6 per cent preferred and St. Louis-San Francisco preferred. The cost will be less than $2,000; income $120.

PROPER CHOICE

W. S.—I am a mechanic and have saved $2,500 which I want to invest. I am in no position to take chances with the money, as it has been hard for me to save. I have been told to buy Prudence Company bonds, but want your opinion, first.

Ans.—Prudence Company 5½s will afford the protection which you need for your savings. They are guaranteed as to principal and income. Invest $1,500. The income will be $82. With $1,000 cash in the bank you will have a good start toward an additional surplus.

COTTON CLOSES STEADY, LOWER

NEW YORK, June 29.—The cotton market was lower today under selling promoted by a favorable view of weather conditions in the South. The offerings were not heavy, but buying was comparatively limited, with October contracts selling off to 18.853, or 13 points net lower. They closed at 18.75, with other months also showing slight rallies on covering, and with the general market closing steady at net declines of 9 to 18 points.

The market opened steady at a decline of 4 to 11 points and worked gradually lower. July sold off to 18.06, or 22 points net lower, and about 47 points below the price of October. December worked off to 18.75, a net decline of 14 points, with the general list showing net losses of 13 to 22 points at the lowest.

Closing quotations were a few points up from the lowest on a little trade buying and covering.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the close of the week was estimated at 61,000 bales, against 78,000 last year.

Merger Rumors Denied By Insull

CHICAGO, June 29.—(AP.)—Officials of the Insull utilities group today denied reports that a merger with the North American Utilities Company was in prospect.

Talk in Wall street said representatives of the two utilities companies had been in conferences looking toward a possible combination, but officials of the Insull properties here said there was "nothing to it." Strength had been given to the merger report recently due to the advance in stock of the two companies, and the fact that each had its own field and apparently had been on friendly terms in their development.

WHEAT RALLIES AFTER SLUMP

CHICAGO, June 29.—(AP.)—Fast rising prices in the grain markets today encountered a flood of profit-taking that sent values reeling backward at times and partly obliterated gains. An outstanding feature, however, which did much to hoist prices and to absorb profit-taking was an authoritative unofficial forecast that owing to adverse crop conditions North America will produce 225,000,000 bushels less wheat than last year. Incidentally, corn and rye today each established a new high-price record for the season.

Closing quotations on wheat were greatly unsettled at 1¼c to 2¼c above yesterday's finish. Corn closed unchanged to ⅝@¾c up, oats at ⅜c decline to ½c advance and provisions varying from a 2c setback to a rise of 15c.

Liverpool quotations far higher than expected led quickly to a general buying stampede at the start today in the wheat market here.

Reports poured in telling of dubious spring wheat prospects both in the American Northwest and in Canada and of unsatisfactory returns from the domestic winter wheat harvest southwest.

Adding impetus to buying were messages telling of the first appearance of black rust in the spring wheat belt this season.

Counting in favor of higher prices was 900,000 bushels export business today in wheat from North America. On the other hand, harvesting southwest appeared to be making swift progress, and primary receipts of wheat both for today and for the week were nearly double those of a year ago.

Corn prices were irregular. Oats were affected by liquidating sales of July contracts.

Industrial Stocks Reach New High Record Average

By BROADAN WALL
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 29.—New high record average price territory was reached by industrial stocks as the half year closed with a rather quiet but strong half session today. Coppers and store stocks were the features but the utilities continued to forge ahead despite profit-taking, while other groups enjoyed good support. Abraham and Strauss gained 13½, Macy 12⅞, Dominion Stores 8⅞, Anaconda 5, Greene Cananea 6¼, American Telephone 7¾, Public Service of N. J. 2¾ and American Water Works 3½. Steel gained over a point, but the standard industrials generally held to narrow price ranges. Rails and oils were quiet but fairly steady. Foreign exchange was extremely dull with important currencies holding unchanged. Cotton continued to slip under influence of bearish weather advices while wheat and other grains added a little to their recovery.

Merger influence is at work in the store stocks. There are whispers of a big deal pending in local department store circles and similar reports are heard concerning companies operating in other cities. The Dominion Stores, known as the "A. and P. of Canada," is reported dickering for control of another chain of stores which will make it the largest organization of its kind outside the United States.

Management of Hahn is declared to have concluded concentration of operations of the combined stores and from now on there should be steady gain in net income as a result of economies effected.

There has been quiet picking up of Eastman Kodak in recent sessions due to expectation that directors will recommend a split up on a four for one basis within the next fortnight. Talk of a split up of Allis Chalmers continues, but those who should know do not expect such action until later in the year. General American Tank continued prominent as a result of the group operations carried on by those who made the recent play in Continental Can. Special analysis which they had prepared points out that General American has prospects of earning $10 this year so that quarterly dividend in stock and cash should be maintained. Spang Chalfant is effected by similar group work coincident with estimate that earnings for the second quarter were higher than the $1.08 a share earned in the first three months.

Anaconda's recovery was helped by brokerage advice that the worst of the distress stock had been cleaned up and that those left by the late lamented pool were in a position to hold on for a better average level. Material reduction in Consolidated Gas, floating supply has resulted, it is learned, from the operations of an investment trust that has received little recognition in the market to date.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, June 29.—(AP.)—Wild bidding up of public utilities to new high prices today for the second successive trading session established a sales record on the curb exchanges. Sales totaled 1,564,600, a record for a Saturday. The previous short session record of 1,464,000 was made on December 8 last.

There was little evidence of the usual week-end profit-taking, as practically the entire list shared in the advance. The air securities were the only stocks as a group inclined to heaviness, but their losses were mostly small. Prospects of easier money conditions encouraged traders.

Ten power stocks established record prices, gains at the close in this group ranged up to 9¾ points. Electric Bond and Share shot up to 131⅞ for a gain of 7⅞ and closed at that figure. American Superpower new ran up 3¼ to close at a record price of 57⅞. This stock sold as low as 25⅞ this year. Extreme gains of 9¾ points were made by American Gas and Electric and Power Company of Canada, the former establishing a new peak at 221.

New highs were touched by Allied Power and Light, Central States Electric Warrants, Cities Service, Commonwealth Edison, International Utilities "A," Middle West Utilities and Sierra Pacific Electric. Commonwealth and Southern opened with a block of 85,000 shares at 28, unchanged from last night's closing, and finished at that price. In two previous sessions this stock opened with blocks of 100,000. Today's turn over totaled 315,500.

Checker Cab continued to reflect the operations of pool, bounding up 2¾ points to close at 78½, the high price of the day. Checker a few days back was selling under 64.

Crocker Wheeler again scaled a new peak, rising 5 points to 335. This company, maker of electric machinery, is expected to benefit by the electrification of industry. A payment recently was made on the preferred dividend arrears. A split up of the present stock is looked for after the preferred dividends are cleaned up.

The oils were irregular, due to profit-taking in Cosen, which this week established a new high. Indiana Pipe Line made a new high at 99⅞ on an advance of 2⅞.

Newmont in the mining shares picked up 1½.

Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded (00 omitted in sales column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales column of bond list):

Dry Goods Market.

NEW YORK, June 29.—Cotton goods were somewhat quieter for the day with the markets closing firmer. Print cloth and sheetmills will curtail their output next week to about 85 per cent of capacity, many of the mills remaining closed until July 8. Burlaps were quiet. Silk goods for fall are beginning to sell more freely. Business done on carpets and rugs during the week was the best reported for some seasons past.

New York Bond Market

NEW YORK, June 29.—(AP.)—Buying of convertibles, which has been at record levels all this week, maintained its spectacular pace in today's bond market and four issues sold at new high prices as the stocks for which they are enchangeable climbed.

International Telephone 4½s led the advance, closing 8 points higher at 157. American Telephone 4½s finished at 147½ for a net gain of 4½: Atchison 4½s rose 3½ to 130½, and Missouri Pacific 5½s touched 114½, a peak, closing a point below that figure for no change from Friday's final.

Other unusually active issues in this group were Allegheny Corporation 5s, up 1¼, and American International 5½s, up 1¼. New Haven convertible 6s and Baltimore and Ohio 4½s improved fractionally in sympathy with the general trend of the rail stocks.

Standard railroad bonds displayed the best tone of the week and moderate gains were recorded in numerous debenture and mortgage issues, particularly in the low coupon classification, which has been selling at about a 5 per cent level. Canadian Pacific debenture 4s gained 1⅛; Missouri Pacific general 4s, ½; Nickel Plate 6s, ⅜; New Haven refunding 4½s, ⅜; Pennsylvania general 4½s and gold 4¾s, ¼ and ½, respectively, and Atchison adjustment 4s, 1⅛. The rises were made on a considerably broader market.

Utilities and industrials fell behind the rails, although inquiry for New York Telephone 6s, Utah Light and Traction 5s, Utica Gas and Electric 5s and Louisville Gas and Electric 5s brought higher prices.

Foreign bonds and United States government securities traded listlessly and price changes were unimportant on light turnovers.

Sales for the two-hour session exceeded $9,000,000, par value, the best Saturday total in many months, but the volume was largely accounted for by the convertibles.

Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange Saturday were as follows, 000 omitted in sales column (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

ALLIED LINES ANNOUNCE TWO NEW VESSELS

Motorliners Will Be Placed In Cunard, N. Y. K. Service; Combine Aids Companies.

The constrsction of two new motorships, to supplement the palatial Asama Maru which will be put into commission next October by the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, the Japanese Steamship Company, is announced by the Cunard Line. The two companies have just formed an alliance whereby each concern acts as general passenger agent for the other. This combine links two steamship organizations and offers a service for bookings to all parts of the world.

BOAST 157 LINERS

The new combination makes these two companies a factor in independent world travel, placing no less than 157 passenger liners at the disposal of the world tourist.

The Asama Maru is being placed in the fortnightly Oriental-California service of the N-Y-K, which operates in the Pacific and touches the ports of Hongkong, Shanghai, Nagasaki, Kobe, Yokohama, Honolulu, San Francisco and Los Angeles. This new boat has a displacement of 22,000 tons, is 584 feet long, has a beam of 72 feet and is driven by quadruple screw Diesel engines.

The other new motorships, which will be commissioned next year, are the Tatsuta Maru and the Chichibu Maru and are to be sister craft of the Asama Maru. At present the Taiyo Maru is the largest steamer operated across the Pacific. "Maru" is Japanese for steamship.

HAVE EXPANSION POLICY

The N-Y-K poliy of expansion, following its alliance with the Cunard Line, includes the construction of three new motor-ships for its service between the Orient and Seattle. Eleven steamers are used by this company in the Japan-Europe trade, and a monthly service is rendered by three boats between Japan and the Australian ports.

Three ships are maintained in the Japan Bombay monthly service, while four steamers are engaged in the South American West Coast run, and five to the South American East Coast, via South Africa.

Pittsburghers Sail For Havre Tonight

Fifteen Pittsburgh business and professional men will be aboard the French liner France when she sails from New York for Havre tonight. Havey J. ## Hearst Paris Bureau Proves Popularity As 'Info' Dispenser

Celebrities as well as "just plain folks" find their way to the Hearst Newspapers Information Bureau, Paris, every day. This week there was "Dante," well-known American illusionist, who is making a big hit on the new bill at the Empire Vaudeville.

"This bureau makes just as big a hit with me," he said, after obtaining the addresses of some American chiropractors in Paris—information he had been looking for all over the city. "My collar bone needs attention and the concierge at my hotel said he'd never heard of such a thing and tried to make me believe they didn't exist. I was sure the Hearst Bureau would be able to tell me."

"Jackson," famous bicycle rider, who has just finished a season at the Moulin Rouge, came in to see about his passage back to the States.

The Zitenfeld Twins, channel swimmers, and their mother were in to read the accounts of their stunts in the New York Journal.

Tim Tull, of "Jarnegafi" fame, wanted to know where to find the flea market and Napoleon's tomb.

George H. Love, of Pittsburgh, was among the recent visitors to the bureau.

MAKE EFFORT FOR AIRPORT

BANFF, Alta., June 29.—Tourists attracted to this mountain resort may some day arrive in air liners as well as aboard the trans-Canada, and air mail and express may be dropped off here, if the air-minded citizens of the town have any weight with the authorities in the matter.

The Banff Aero Club, backed by various community organizations, is endeavoring to have Banff made the western terminus for the air mail and express service and is examining local fields in an effort to establish a suitable air port. Tours by air liners are already in operation, and it is predicted that visitors to Banff will soon arrive by air and that patients wishing treatment by the radium hot springs will be hurried here by plane.

DICKENS FETE OPENS JULY 15

Dickens dovotees, with whom America abounds, will have an opportunity to spend a delightful week at Portsmouth, England, the birthplace of the British novelist, this summer, when the town honors its great man with a festival, to take place July 15-20.

The Dickens festival will open with a lively procession of Dickens characters, in costume, to the house where the author was born. For the next four days there will be a pageant in the Southsea Castle grounds, and a special company will present a play made from Nicholas Nickleby. The climax will be a Dickens ball of the evening of July 19.

Oliver Twist, Sam Weller, Mr. Pickwick and Mr. Micawber—just to mention a few immortals who inhabited the Dickens scene, are vivid in the minds of lovers of his works, and these impressions will be enhanced by a visit to the country where he lived and worked.

Jersey Shore Resort Ready to Entertain Crowds on Holiday

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 29.—Prepared for a record holiday throng of visitors from all parts of the East, this North Jersey shore resort today was putting the finishing touches on the beachfront where additional facilities for the entertainment of visitors have been installed during the winter.

Fourth of July dances will be held at many of the country clubs near here and special holiday golf tournaments will also be staged. The golf season is well underway, the first feature having been staged at Deal where the Intercollegiates were held this year.

Hotels reported today that holiday reservations are well in advance of last year and with the Fourth of July falling on a Thursday it is believed many will remain for the entire week-end.

Full Passenger List, Boast of Grace Ship

The Grace liner Santa Elisa sailed Thursday, with a full passenger list, for Peru and Chile via the Panama Canal. Lieut. George R. Johnson, in charge of aerial photography for the Peruvian Air Service, was among the passengers.

CAPE MAY HAS BUSY SEASON

CAPE MAY, N. J., June 29.—One of the largest crowds in the history of this resort is expected to spend the week-end here. With sweltering weather in the large cities and perfect conditions for outdoor sports, the tourists began to flock into the colony as early as Thursday.

All of the big hotels are now open and heavy bookings reported by the managers, while the realtors announce that there are few cottages left for the late comers.

The Seniors Golf Tournament was held at the Cape May Golf Club today, with many players representing some of the best golf clubs of Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey participating.

One of the coming events of the early season is the out-board motorboat races, which will begin July 6. Chairman Morton R. Alexander reports many entries from clubs in the east.

Lloyd Vessel Sails With Capacity List

For the second time this month, the Lloyd liner Berlin sailed from New York, Thursday, for England, France and Germany with a capacity list of travelers. Her previous sailing was on June 4.

THE FOURTH OF JULY PICNIC

ROYAL summer with its pomp of greenery and sun holds many happy days. In the afternoon while woodland and field lie bathed in golden calm, there's a shady spot on the porch made cooler with "Canada Dry." When the dewy grass glistens in the early light, there's a place in your car on that all-day picnic for plenty of "Canada Dry." And beneath the deep summer stars, for a dance, for a game of bridge in the cool of the evening, there's the sparkle and gaiety and real refreshment of "Canada Dry."

Truly, a marvelous beverage to drink all the summer through! In the heat of the day it's as cooling as sweet summer rain after drought . . . refreshing as the breeze which blows before a thunder shower . . . sparkling as the play of light on blue water . . . mellow as a lazy canoe ride through calm inlets . . . and as gay and carefree and joyous as many a bright vacation!

Drink "Canada Dry" this summer! It is a better, purer, finer beverage. It is made from high-quality Jamaica ginger and other absolutely pure ingredients. It is blended and balanced with skill. The proportions are exactly determined. Hourly check-ups prevent variation from those proportions. Daily tests are made under laboratory methods to assure purity. A secret process of carbonation enables "Canada Dry" to retain its delightful and uniform sparkle long after the bottle is opened. And the final result . . . mild, mellow, delicious, with a subtle ginger taste, is what you know as "Canada Dry"—the Champagne of Ginger Ales.

Serve "Canada Dry" on every occasion this summer. Its vigor brings zest to meals. Its marvelous flavor gives distinction to any dinner table. And like the aristocrat it is, it makes its quality quietly felt, adding new joy, new gaiety to this season. Stock up the refrigerator with "Canada Dry." Buy a generous supply of Hostess Packages to take in the car on picnics. Send some to your summer camp. Offer a glass to friends when they come to sit on the veranda of evenings. And remember that for any occasion here is the summer beverage.

Sarazen, Shute Next With 296 Each; O'Hara, Local Star, Totals 301

MAMARONECK, N. Y., June 29.—(AP.)—Out on the high-perched home green this afternoon, the greatest golfer of them all, Bobby Jones, somewhat tired and worn by a bruising battle with par and a record gallery, knelt to study the difficult line of a 12-foot putt on which hung his last hope of staying in the hunt for the open golf championship of the United States.

While fully 12,000 spectators jostled, shoved and milled for a peek at the last episode of a dramatic struggle, Jones stepped up briskly, struck the ball and sent it curving beautifully into the cup for the par 4, enabling him to tie with Al Espinosa, after the Atlanta amateur had come periously close to disastrous elimination.

Jones, two-times champion now in his fourth play-off, and Espinosa, professional of the Sportsman's Golf and Country Club, of Chicago, now sharing the greatest heights he has ever experienced, tied for the regu-

Miss Quier Beaten In Buffalo Final

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 29.—(AP.)—Mrs. Leo Federman, of the Glen Oaks Golf Club, Long Island, captured the ninth annual women's invitation tournament at the Country Club of Buffalo by defeating Miss Edith Quier, of Reading, Pa., 3 up and 1 to play. Mrs. Federman led 3 up at the turn, but the Reading girl squared the match on the thirteenth only to lose it on the seventeenth.

Johnnies, Generals Exchange Players

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 29.—Manager Marty Fiedler, of the Johnstown Middle Atlantic League Club, announced today that he had traded Howard Brown, second sacker with the locals, to Clarksburg for Bill Pritchard, catcher and outfielder.

Brown joined the locals at the start of the present season. Pritchard was the leading hitter in the Middle Atlantic League last season, but is considerably down in the list this year.

GRIMES HURLS SHUTOUT FOR TWELFTH VICTORY

Kolp in Rare Form as Corsairs Fall in Second Battle, 3 to 2—Critz Gives Fine Exhibition at Second.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

THE best last-place ball club the National League has owned for many, many years, the Cincinnati Reds, swapped punches with our Pirates and won a draw Saturday afternoon at Forbes Field in the first twin bill of the home season.

Burleigh Grimes, ranking pitcher of the upper school of baseball, blanked the Reds, 3 to 0, in the early struggle, the pretty triumph making it an even dozen for the Wisconsin wildcat, who has been defeated only once.

REDS WIN SECOND

The breaks of the game brought about a 3-to-2 defeat for the Freebooters in the nightcap.

The Cubs' third straight victory over the Cardinals while the Pirates were being held to a deadlock represented a gain of half a game for the first place Bruins who pushed the Pirates off the top Friday.

Grimes and Texas Pete Donohue gave one of the best slab duels of the year in the first game at the Oakland Orchard. In some respects it might be said that Pete outpitched Grimes, yet Burleigh was called upon for more heroic measures and he came through.

Eighteen thousand fans saw the interesting diamond fights.

The Saturday fans witnessed what many of them will contend was the greatest second-base performance ever enacted in the 20 years of action at Forbes Field as Hughey Critz, the tiny star of the keystone sack, rose to new heights of cleverness. The afternoon marked the twentieth anniversary of the Dreyfuss sport field and Hughey gave the onlookers something to carry home in the way of souvenirs.

CRITZ IN GREAT FORM

Critz bounced all over the right side of the infield as he reeled off 10 assists. More than half of the drives were tagged for base hits when they left the plate, but the smart infielder, who studies the various swatters studiously, had the jump on all of the drives, yet he had to have unsurpassed fielding skill even with "the jump" to haul the bounders. His dizzy exhibition won him a series of ovations.

The opening fight was one of those 1-to-0 affairs, until the eighth inning, when Paul Waner came through with a two-run homer. Grimes and Donohue were beautiful to behold as they drove wedges through the opposing offensives.

Steve Swetonic held the Reds to five hits through seven tense innings of the closing fight, but the North Side boy, who has been having a lot of misfortune on the mound, saw a couple of unusual incidents take what might have been his ball game, despite the clever pitching of Ray Kolp, who worked the entire distance for the Reds.

Paul Waner's throw to the plate which hopped past Hargreaves gave the enemy one tally and a bounding ball that struck second base, turning a scratch single into a flukey double, led to what proved to be the winning marker.

HOMER SEWS UP GAME

Although the multitude had every confidence in Burleigh Grimes in the first game of the afternoon, there were many sighs of relief in the eighth inning when, with two out and Lloyd Waner on first, Brother Paul whacked his ninth homer of the season into the right field stands for two safety runs. The one-run margin might have stood, but there is nothing as comforting as another run or two in a battle of this kind.

The Pirates made what proved to be the winning run of the early

Ruth Clouts Two Homers; Yanks Win

Mack Errors Help Huggmen to Beat Grove, 7-5; Miller Stopped.

PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—(AP.)—Four Athletic errors and Babe Ruth's two home runs, his fourteenth and fifteenth of the season, combined to give the Yankees a 7-to-5 victory over the league leaders in the second and final game of the series here today. Some 43,000 Philadelphians, refusing to treat the meeting with the Yankees as anything but crucial, saw the Champions gain an even break on the two contests.

George Pipgras allowed the Mackmen 11 hits, but invariably was tight in the pinches. The Athletics threatened to pull out the decision in the ninth when Haas and Cochrane led off with singles, but the Yankee right-hander escaped with his game after Foxx's single and Miller's sacrifice fly had sent two runs over the plate.

Robert Moses Grove was the victim of the loose play of Bishop and Dykes, and as forced to retire under fire in the seventh after Ruth had hit his second home run and Lazzeri and Meusel had singled. George Earnshaw entered the box, and Durocher singled, giving the Yanks their seventh and last run. Bill Shores pitched the ninth after Earnshaw stepped aside for a pinch batsman. Shores fanned Gehrig with the bases filled for the final count.

The defeat was Grove's second of the season against 12 victories. He had won nine straight up to today. Bing Miller broke his hitting streak after a run of 28 straight games.

The Yankees reduced the distance between the leading Macks and themselves to 10½ games, but dropped more deeply into third place. The runner-up Browns won two games from the White Sox, cutting the lead of the Athletics to 8½ engagements and increasing their own margin over the Yankees to two full games. The score:

Grays Beat Hilldale, 6-3

PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—The Homestead Grays, of Pittsburgh, managed to bunch their safeties to good advantage here today and took the measure of Hilldale, 6 to 3, in an American Negro League game. The vistors got to Cooper in the third frame and tallied three runs after two were out.

Ed Bolden announced during the fray that a deal had been completed with the Grays whereby Stevens, former Hilldale shortstop, would return to Hilldale in a swap for Britt. The score:

State Open Title Play Heads Week's Golf Card

WOMEN PLAY AT STANTON ON TUESDAY

American Legion Affair Is Slated for Wildwood Country Club Links on Monday.

West Penn Junior Tourney Entries to Close With W. P. G. A. on Friday, July 12.

By VERN SWARTSFAGER.

THE Pennsylvania open championship, Independence Day golf and a number of one-day tournaments are slated for this week as the sport reaches its mid-season. After this week's play the game will settle slightly for more than a month as the vacation period sets in.

The first event is slated for the Wildwood Country Club on Monday, when the Pittsburgh City Post 69, American Legion, holds its first one-day tournament of the season. In order to permit its players to tune up before the regular match, Maj. Moore, chairman of the committee of the American Legion, has assigned practice playing to begin at 9:30 o'clock, with the tournament proper getting under way at 1 o'clock. Beautiful prizes are to be awarded.

LOCALS AT WHITEMARSH

On Tuesday, the state open championship will begin at the Whitemarsh Valley Country lub. It is a two-day affair, and a number of local players are entered in the tournament. Jimmy Devlin, professional at the Nemacolin Country Club, will be making a journey back to the club at which he once worked as pro in playing at Whitemarsh; accompanying him will be Horace, Brand of the Uniontown Country Club, and Stanley Hern, of Pittsburgh. Johnny Capebianco, caddie-master at Edgewood, and Paul E. (Toots) Erath, assistant professional at the same place, will also play but Johnny expects to leave shortly after for Washington, D. C., where he will be married to Miss Mary Smitherman. Erath will act as best man, and the ceremony will take place on Wednesday.

A big women's tournament will be held at the Stanton Heights Golf Club on Tuesday, providing the weather is right. It will be held under the auspices of the Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania, and, because the field was held down Friday at Allegheny due to inclement weather, it is anticipated it will be equally enlarged for the Stanton Heights event.

The Fourth of July programs throughout the district call for play in the morning as well as in the afternoon, with dinner dances and fireworks displays in the evening.

The usual Saturday play will let up slightly due to the excessive use of the courses over the holiday.

JUNIOR PLANS SET

The Western Pennsylvania Golf Association has announced its program for the ninth annual Western Pennsylvania junior championship, which is to be held this year at the Longue Vue Club. This competition is open to all junior golfers who are sons of members of any club belonging to the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association, 18 years of age and under. The entries will close with George A. Ormiston, secretary of the W. P. G. A., on Friday, July 12, at 12 o'clock noon. A 36-hole qualifying round will be followed by four rounds of match play at 18 holes each.

The winner will receive the Percy Preston Memorial Trophy, as well as a gold medal, while other prizes for low qualifying and winner, runner-up and consolation of each 16 will be awarded.

Announcement is made by the Western Golf Association of elaborate plans for its annual open championship, to be held this year August 21-24, at the Ozaukee Country Club, Milwaukee, Wis. A field of only 300 will be permitted to play, which calls for early entry. The usual fee of $5 should accompany the entry, which is addressed to the Western Golf Association office at 1800 Montrose avenue, Chicago.

L. Hamburg joined the hole-in-one club at Schenley Park last week when he negotiated the seventh there with his faithful mashie the other day. It is a 154-yard affair and a par 3.

Bell Annexes Tennis Title

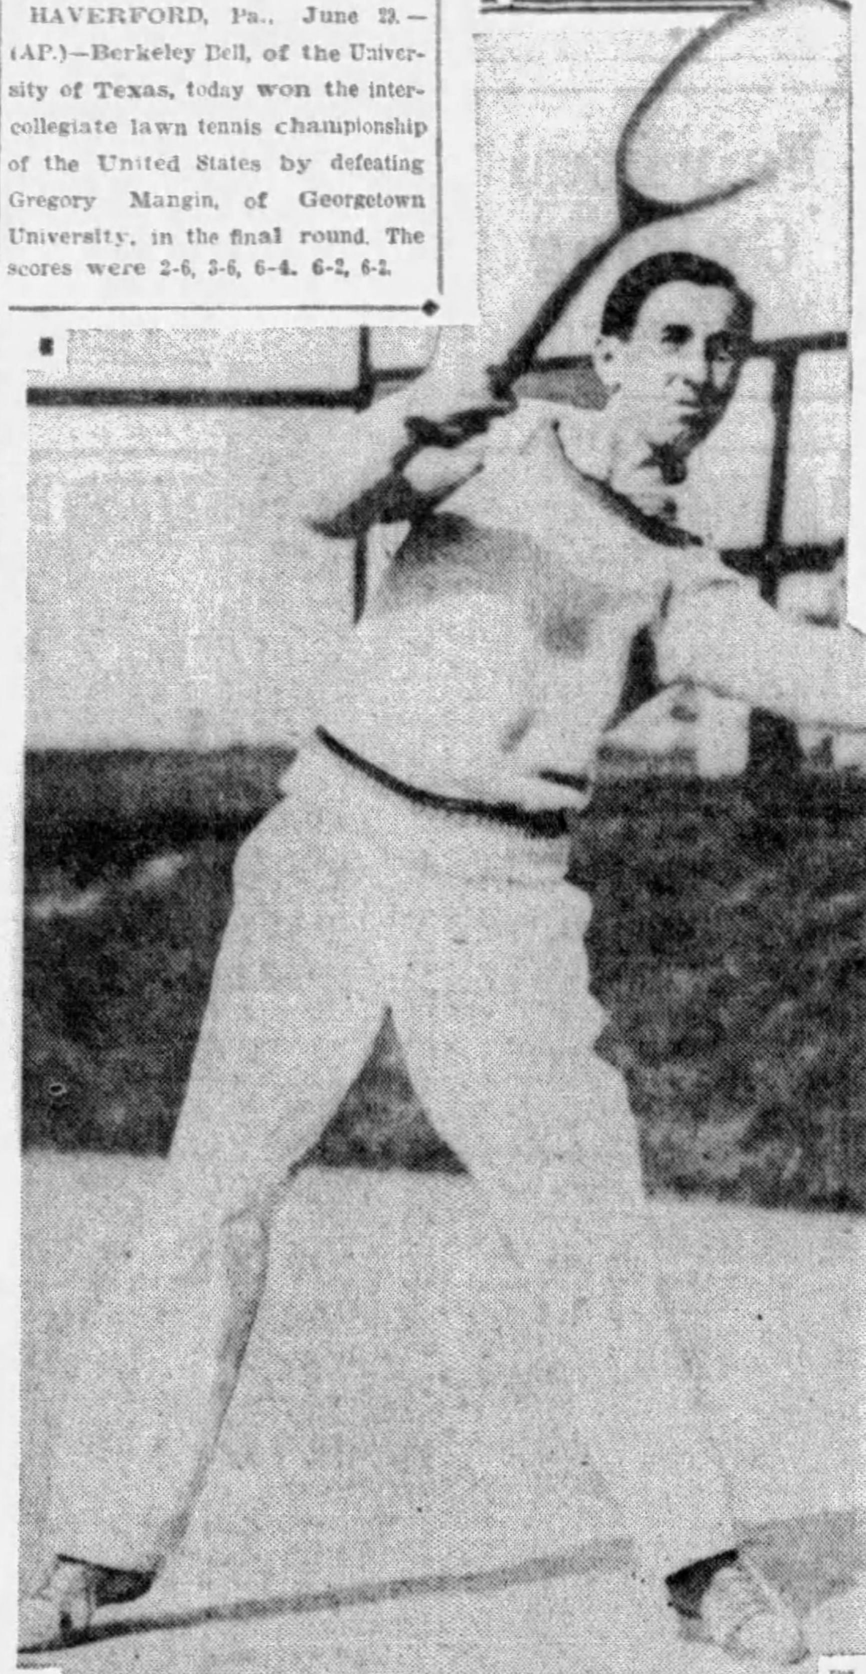
HAVERFORD, Pa., June 29.—(AP.)—Berkeley Bell, of the University of Texas, today won the intercollegiate lawn tennis championship of the United States by defeating Gregory Mangin, of Georgetown University, in the final round. The scores were 2-6, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2, 6-1.

FINALISTS



NEW CHAMPION—Byron Baur, of Erie and the P. A. A., who Saturday regained the West Penn singles tennis championship, which he held in 1927, by defeating Dr. John L. O'Loughlin, the defending champion, in five sets in the final round of the tournament at Stanton Heights.

BEATEN—Dr. John L. O'Loughlin, of the P. A. A., who bowed to his teammate, Byron Baur, after winning the first two sets of the West Penn final match Saturday. The scores were 3-6, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1, 6-2. O'Loughlin was the defending champion.

Baur and Mrs. Snowdon Regain Tennis Titles

Erie Ace Defeats John O'Loughlin in Men's Final, 3-6, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1, 6-2.

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

BYRON BAUR, ace of Erie, has reclaimed the Western Pennsylvania men's singles net title relinquished by him at the Pittsburgh Golf Club a year ago. Fighting up from the rear after being down, two sets to none, the ex-Pitt performer returned to the top at the expense of Dr. John O'Loughlin, scintillant P. A. A. star and the very man who toppled him from the seats of the mighty in 1928. The scene of battle was the Stanton Heights gallery rectangle, the time Saturday afternoon, the occasion the final of the forty-first annual West Penn tourney, and the tally 3-6, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1, 6-2. With victory went the first leg on the new David I. McCahill Trophy and permanent possession of the bronze Grogan Cup.

MRS. SNOWDON WINS

In the women's singles finale, staged earlier in the day, Mrs. Martha Guthrie Snowdon, hope of Pittsburgh, sped through to triumph over Mrs. Dorothy Lewis, Alliance luminary and last year's winner, 6-0, 6-4. Mrs. Snowdon's feat in grabbing off the championship was truly remarkable. Some five years ago she voluntarily abdicated as unchallenged queen of the West Penn courts and took up golf.

Of late she has been shooting Oakmont in the lower eighties, but upon impulse decided to step back into tennis for another crack at her old crown. With one day's practice she entered the current tournament and by dint of excellent stroking and matchless tactics breezed through to success with the loss of only one set in five rounds of play. By virtue of her triumph, she captures initial leg on the handsome Honus Wagner three-year flagon, which the famous diamond master formally presented to the Pittsburgh Tennis Association before a cheering gallery of 300 fans during the intermission of the man-to-man titular tussle.

O'Loughlin opened auspiciously against his up-state opponent, the latter erring frequently in the face of a determined Steel City assault and quickly slipping behind at 1-5. Here Baur braced to annex two games, but O'Loughlin pulled up from 15-30 to hold service for the set, 6-4, the ultimate point being a clean placement on a short, heavy drive from mid-court.

A service break against Baur in the third game settled thedestiny of stanza two. O'Loughlin consolidated his lead at 3-1 by bagging game four after two deuces and thereafter games went easily with service until the 5-4 notch was attained. At this juncture O'Loughlin forced his way to a 40-love advantage, only to net twice and out once for deuce. But Baur outed a backhand lob, then went wild on another backhand attempt, a short slice past O'Loughlin's left sideline and the Winged Head performer was riding a seemingly secure two-set margin of safety.

TIGHTENS AT START

Baur tightened to start session three. He took service in the first game and added the second on enemy delivery after O'Loughlin had battled up from 15-40 to deuce. The Erie youth was shown, 15-40, in game three, but O'Loughlin netted miserably four times in a row to toss away an opportunity that was to cost him dearly. Games four, five and six followed service in quick order and O'Loughlin stock rose as the Pittsburgher snared Baur's delivery at 30-40 on a short passing shot at the barrier. Had John been able to sustain service at this point he would have deuced the going at 4-4, but two outs from 30-all spilled the beans and Baur ran out the set in the ensuing game on four consecutive hostile misplays.

Set four, reeled off after a rest period that bordered on half an hour, was a melange of arrant O'Loughlin nets and outs. Baur was making few mistakes, while the home satellite, instead of pushing batters from fore-court, strove to do so from the baseline and accordingly made all the errors, quite a flock of which came from a backhand that had lost both depth and direction.

Baur appeared to grow steadier as the struggle wore on and as O'Loughlin appeared to weaken, the visiting racqueter emerged somewhat from his shell to inject sting into his ground strokes. John registered his last gallant stand after Byron had nabbed game one of the concluding set. Assaulting his opponent's backhand with deep, vicious drives to the corner, he raked the court to whirl off two straight games to lead at 40-15 in the fourth. Whereupon, with consolidation of his advantage within his very grasp, he netted, outed, and netted in quick succession and Baur picked off the vital marker for game and 2-2 with a pretty backhand overhead placement from a weak O'Loughlin lob. That was all, there wasn't any more. O'Loughlin tried hard to hold service with the count 5-2 against him, but three nets and a double fault hurled away a 30-love advantage and the joust was over.

MATCH BELOW PAR

From the standpoint of spetacular tennis, the Baur-O'Loughlin affair was below the par expected of championship finals. A blustering wind, however, may have accounted in great part for this fact, for neither contestant approached the net with wonted frequency and on those rare occasions when they did come up, their work was spotty to an extreme. O'Loughlin did the forcing throughout the fracas, but, as stated above, failed to follow up with effective sallies to the barrier, while Baur, sizing up matters quite accurately, was content to keep the sphere moving, take no chances, and allow his rival to blow enough shots to sway the issue. O'Loughlin's backhand cracked badly toward the middle of the engagement, but Baur's stood up well, except when pressed too vigorously by wallops to the far angle of the court. The summary:

MEN'S SINGLES.

WOMEN'S SINGLES.

Second round—Anne Scott and Reed defeated Martha Cooper and Cooper, 6-4, 6-4, 6-3; Helen Carson and Hammer defeated Catherine Cole and Ritterbush, 6-2, 6-4; Maybelle Steele and Hicks, won from Miriam Sullivan and Ramsay by default.

Field Club Caddies To Qualify Monday

Pup's Foot Juniors Play Tuesday—Entries Close Friday.

CADDIES at the Pittsburgh Field Club will qualify on Monday for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's second annual Western Pennsylvania junior amateur tournament for the William Randolph Hearst Trophy, which is to be held on the municipal links in Schenley Park on Thursday, July 11. Harry Kelly, affable caddie-master, will direct the test over that club's beautiful links.

On Tuesday, Stanley Garland will direct the caddies at the Pup's Foot Golf Club for their trial for places in the tournament, and a big entry is listed there. Harry McIntosh, president of Pup's Foot, is quite enthusiastic over his team's qualifying.

ENTRIES CLOSE FRIDAY

Eight boys are qualifying from each club, the four low scorers of which will play for the team championship among the clubs.

Five days remain before the entries close. If you are eligible to play, and intend to compete, get your entry in now! The entries close July 5, which is Friday.

The tournament is open to all amateur golfers 18 years of age and under, not attending classes above high school grades, which includes caddies now working who are 15 years of age or under.

The setting for the tournament is at its best right now. Greenkeeper John Kauffmann, of Schenley Park, has improved the fairways and greens since spring, and if the weather treats the local links in the proper way, the layout should be great for good scoring.

NO ENTRY FEE

There is no entry or other playing fee to the tournament, although all contestants must provide their own clubs and balls. Neither does a boy have to be a caddie to enter—the tourney is not a caddie tourney, it is a junior event open to all amateurs within the requirements. There are no boundaries or other limits on residence—no matter where you live, if you are eligible and can get to the scene of the tourney, you are welcome to fall in line. Club affiliations are not necessary, either.

All caddies entering the tournament must compete in preliminary qualifying rounds. These are being held at all of the district clubs, and about 15 teams are expected to compete for the special team plaque and medals. Only those caddies working at clubs too far distant to warrant a qualifying round may enter individually.

TWO TIE FOR LEAD

Joe Truschel, 14, and John Schachley, 15, tied for the medal honors in the qualifying round held at the Valley Heights Country Club. Each returned a 44 for the nine-hole medal test, which was held under the direction of Ben Loeffler, the club's professional.

Others who were among the high scorers were Nick Nassick, 15, 46; Dudley Carey, 14, 49; John Matin, 13, 51; John Truschel, 15, 53; John Tolbert, 15, 53; Edward Sabel, 15, 54; John Penman, 14, 55; John Paljascsk 13, 55.

The first four will represent Valley Heights in the team championship play.

Saturday Golf

GREY COAT WINS DWYER

AQUEDUCT, N. Y., June 29.—(AP.)—In one of the most startling upsets of the year, Samuel Ross' Grey Coat, a 30-to-1 shot, defeated E. R. Bradley's Blue Larkspur in the Dwyer stakes here today. Wheatley stable's Flag Day was third.

Though defeated, Blue Larkspur acquitted himself in brilliant style by taking up 124 pounds, conceding weight to every horse in the race and after following and racing down all colts, held on gamely at end.

Blue Larkspur beat Flag Day three lengths for the place. The time was 2:34 and the race was worth $19,450 to the winner.

CHICAGO, June 29.—(AP.)—H. Deatherage's Montanaro, quoted at 7 to 1, today won the $10,000 Francis S. Peabody memorial handicap at Washington Park. The Wild Rose Farm's Dowagiac was second and 5-year-old Canaan from the Le Mar Stock Farm third. Montanaro's time for the mile and a quarter was 2:04 1-5.

Generals Protest 6-to-1 Victory of Governors

WEST VIRGINIA NINE DISPUTES CHARLEROI WIN

Umpire's Decision on Foul Tip Causes Rumpus in Mid-Atlantic League Battle

Cousins Hurls Fairmont to Triumph Over Wheeling—Johnnies Defeat Jays

CHARLEROI, Pa., June 29.—(AP.)—A foul tip that hit Dave Lamb's toe while he was at bat and rolled fair, caused Clarksburg to play its final game of a three-game series against Charleroi today under protest.

Charleroi defeated the Generals, 6 to 1, in a game marred by needless arguments and complaints by Manager Marable, of Clarksburg.

The Governors made their seven hits count for six runs while Byham scattered nine to hold the visitors in check.

Lucas and Divinney featured with the stick for Charleroi. Bruder got the only home run and Clarksburg's lone run. The score:

Jack Zivic Returns Against Sammy Baker

Two Shows Carded This Week in Meyers Bowl—Bouts at Charleroi and Ebensburg.

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

WITH shows scheduled in the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, Monday and Thursday nights, and at Charleroi and Ebensburg, Monday night; Butler, Thursday night, and Conneaut Lake Park, Wednesday night, Western Pennsylvania boxing fans have another feast of their favorite sport before them this week.

Featuring the program is the return to action in his home district of Jack Zivic, former Lawrenceville bearcat, who now resides in Dormont. He meets an old rival, Sergt. Sammy Baker, of New York, in the main bout at the Bowl Monday night. It is his first bout here in more than a year and marks the beginning of a comeback campaign. He has had only one battle, some weeks ago, at Canton, O., against Dick Ramies, since his trip to California last July.

Back in 1925, Zivic boxed Baker in New York and lost on a foul in five rounds and he has been anxious to get another crack at the former soldier ever since. Like Zivic, Baker has fought with great success against the leading welterweights. He boasts technical knockout victories over Ace Hudkins and Mushy Callahan, a full-fledged knockout over Larry Estridge, victories by the decision route over Eddie Shevlin, Georgie Levine, Joe Simonich, Eddie Roberts, Georgie Ward, Billy Alger, Young Corbett, Clyde Hull, Nick Testo and Gorilla Jones, among others, a win on a foul over Andy DiVodi and a draw with Tommy Freeman.

NANCI, HAGGERTY AGAIN

Johnny Haggerty and Young Nanci, who recently fought one of the most thrilling rounds ever seen hereabouts to windup their return engagement at the Bowl, have been rematched for the eight-round semi-final Monday night, and Mickey Solmen meets Chuck Zelnack and Joey Feldman boxes Howard Williams in the two six-round preliminaries.

On Thursday night, July Fourth, the Bowl will offer a special show at the popular prices of $1 and $2, with Rudy Ceder meeting Dick Ramies in the windup, Mike Payan boxing California Joe Gans in the eight-round semi-final and two six-round bouts. Ramies holds a popular decision over Jack Zivic and has boxed Mushy Callahan, Baby Joe Gans, Jackie Fields, Larry Brignolia and others, while Payan, an Indian, recently defeated Dominick Profio at Washington, Pa., and also has battled Baby Joe Gans, Farmer Joe Cooper, Sam Bruce, Charley Feraci and Jackie Fields.

Cuddy DeMarco swings back into action after a long layoff against Eddie Frisco in the 10-round main bout of the show at the Charleroi baseball park Monday night for the benefit of the Charleroi Club of the Middle Atlantic League, which plays the Pirates in an exhibition game there the same day. Battling Gizzy and Frankie Buff are in the eight-round semi-final to the DeMarco battle. DeMarco now again is making his home at Charleroi, where he started out on his boxing career.

SHOW AT EBENSBURG

Ray Newton meets Al Gordon, of Philadelphia, and Young Rudy opposes Tiger Joe Randall in the two 10-round bouts featuring the card at the Ebensburg Fair Monday night. Two six-rounders complete the program.

Dan Billick, of Duquesne, boxes Heine Hart in an eight-round return bout at Allentown, Pa., Hart's home town, Monday night. Andy Stahura, of Braddock, meets Johnny Murphy, of Cleveland, in the semi-final to the Jimmy Slattery-Lea Darcy bout at Steubenville, O., Tuesday night. Jack Wells, Abie Witz's heavyweight, boxes Curley Reese, in a 10-rounder at Weston, W. Va., on the Fourth.

Morgan Bird, successful promoter of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where he has shown Mickey Walker, Pete Latzo, Tommy Loughran, Kid Chocolate, the late Harry Greb and other stars, is contemplating invading the local field, if he can obtain the sanction of the State Athletic Commission. He attended the Max Schmeling-Paulino Uzcudun bout in New York last Thursday night and revealed his plans, saying he believed Pittsburgh could be made a topnotch fight town with the arranging of big matches.

HEAVIES AT PHILADELPHIA

Promoter Jules Aronson is putting on an all-star heavyweight show consisting of a 10-round windup between George Cook and Jimmy Byrne and three eight-rounders and a six-rounder at the Phillies' park, Philadelphia, Monday night, at the popular prices of 50 cents, $1, $1.50 and $2.

Roy Wallace, of Indianapolis, and Angus Snyder, of Dodge City Kas., scored hits in turning in knockout victories against Primo Uvaldo and Johnny Grosso, respectively, in preliminaries to the Schmeling-Paulino fight at the Yankee Stadium, New York, last Thursday night. K. O. Christner, of Akron, also went over big, although technically knocked out in the ninth round by Otto Von Porat, of Chicago. A badly cut ear caused the referee to stop the affair after the squat but agile Christner had done the forcing almost all of the way.

Buck McTiernan, the Swissvale welterweight, is confined to bed by illness and will not be able to go through with his proposed return bout with Andy DiVodi at the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, Monday night of next week on the same card with a return engagement between Phil Goldstein and Tony Herrera. His condition is described as so poor that an operation for the removal of his tonsils planned for Monday will have to be postponed until later in the week.

Young Zabish, of Beltzhoover, and Harry Taylor, of Johnstown, who have fought several sensational battles against each other, have been rematched for the 10-round windup of a show at the Butler Fair Grounds next Thursday night in connection with the July Fourth celebration.

DAVIES AT JOHNSTOWN

Willie Davies, of Charleroi, and Luis Carpentero, Filipino, of Toledo, have been rematched for the main bout of a show at the Point Stadium, Johnstown, Monday night of next week. Ike McFowler and Bud Gorman, who fought a draw in the Flood City about a year ago, will meet in a return bout there later in the month.

Young Guido, of Youngstown, and formerly of Sharon, who has been on the sidelines for 10 weeks because of an eye infection, is ready to box again and wants to meet Buck McTiernan, Mickey Solmen or any of the other stars in his class.

Henry Firpo, middleweight of Louisville, and Lee Meredith, of Toledo, will box the windup of the opening show of the season in the Temple of Music at Conneaut Lake Park, Pa., Wednesday night. Harry Crisp, of Cleveland, and Frankie Sunday, of Akron, are the semi-finalists.

JERRY WINNER IN MARATHON; COOPER LOSES

Union A. C. Runner Cops Feature of 27th Ward A. C. Handicap Meet

Ruth Waldner Triple Victor In Girls' Sprint Events; Allen Finishes on Top

FRANK JERRY, former Westinghouse Club star, and now wearing the colors of the newly formed Union A. C., copped the modified marathon at the second annual track and field meet of the Twenty-seventh Ward Athletic club, run over a six-mile course on the North Side Saturday afternoon. Von Keanel ran second, and John Nase third. Jerry ran a brilliant race, taking the lead at the half-way mark, and won by 500 yards.

The sensation of the meet was the defeat of Cornell Cooper, Westinghouse High School star, in the high jump. Cooper was wearing the colors of the Holy Cross A. C., and could only finish third. He reached 6 feet 1 inch, but two of his teammates, Spencer and Branch, went higher, Branch going over the bar at 6 feet 3 inches and Spencer clearing 6-2.

Ruth Waldner, of the Pennsy team of Philadelphia, copped the girls' events, winning the 100-yard dash in 11 4-5 seconds, creating a new Allegheny Mountain Association record for women. The former record was 12 seconds. The eastern lassie then copped the 50-yard dash from Ruth Comer, of McKees Rocks High School, and when the Philadelphia team only had three girls to run the relay, ran the last 220 yards in the anchor position and won that race.

Luke Dillon, the veteran local sprinter, tried to break his own record for the 100-yard dash of 11 4-5 seconds, but failed to equal the time, and was clocked at 12 seconds flat.

Holy Cross won the team trophy with 21 points; Union A. C., with 19 points, was second; P. R. R. girls third with 15 points; P. A. A. fourth with 12; McKees Rocks High fifth with nine points; unattached athletes copped eight points, and Twenty-seventh Ward four points. Peabody totaled three. The summary:

GIRLS' EVENTS

50-yard dash for girls—Won by Ruth Waldner, P. R. R., Philadelphia; Ruth Comer, McKees Rocks High School, second; L. Macios, Twenty-seventh Ward A. C., third. Time, 6 2-5 seconds.

100-yard dash for girls—Won by Ruth Waldner, P. R. R., Philadelphia; Ruth Comer, McKees Rocks High School, second; L. Macios, Twenty-seventh Ward A. C., third. Time, 11 4-5 seconds.

440-yard relay for girls—Won by P. R. R., Philadelphia (Ruth Waldner, Florence Kennedy and Anna Reece); McKees Rocks High School, second; Twenty-seventh Ward A. C., third. Time, 53 seconds.

High jump—Won by Spencer, Holy Cross; Branch, Holy Cross, second; Cooper, Holy Cross, third. Height, 6 feet 3 inches.

Cubs Down Cards, 10-7

ST. LOUIS, June 29.—(AP.)—The Cubs took a firmer grip on first place today by defeating the Cardinals for the third successive day, 10 to 7. Hornsby got his fourteenth homer of the season and his third in the present series in the first inning and Grimm hit for the round trip also in the first, bringing in L. Wilson, Cuyler and Stephenson. Bottomley also hit a homer in the first. The score:

All-Pennsylvania World Series Hope of Fans Here

JAMES J. LONG Sport Comment

Aided by Weak Clubs. Altitude and Athletics. Crew Hides Individual.

GIANTS MEET WEST 49 TIMES IN ROW

BASEBALL pennants are not won in June, July or August. And it doesn't always follow that September will bring in the decision, either.

Even though there is no telling what may develop between the present stage and the tape, however, that fact doesn't prevent the fans from dreaming, and right now every rooter in Pirate territory is picturing more hopefully than at any previous time since the flag fighting got under way an all-Pennsylvania world series between the Buccaneers and the Athletics.

SUCH a series would not be a record-breaking one in financial returns or attendance, and there would be many disappointed ticket-seekers, inasmuch as not more than 35,000 persons can be crowded into Shibe Park in Philadelphia.

But it surely would be a popular outcome of the big flag races, generally as meaning the busting of the Yankee pennant trust, and in Pennsylvania, at least, as the first classic between two cities in one state. All four previous series confined to one state have had as principals teams representing one city. Those were between the Cubs and White Sox at Chicago, in 1906, and between the Giants and Yankees at New York in 1921, 1922 and 1923.

AND who can say that there isn't a fair chance that the dream will come true? On one side the Pirates have proved themselves the class of the National League so far by outplaying all rivals in the hand-to-hand competition among the four contenders, and on the other side the A's have so firm a grip on first place that it may be difficult to dislodge them.

There was some doubt about the Mackmen's chances until they showed that they had been cured of their old and fatal habit of curling up every time they saw a Yankee uniform.

WITH that weakness overcome, and the Athletics out in front, whereas in previous years they were far behind the Hugmen at this time, a Mackian pennant victory is by no means improbable. So a Keystone State series is within the bounds of possibility, at least, provided, of course, that both the Corsairs and the A's are able to keep up the gait at which they have traveled thus far. The latter part of any race, when the real strain comes, is always the toughest, but the Pennsylvania teams have shown nothing to warrant any fear that they may crack.

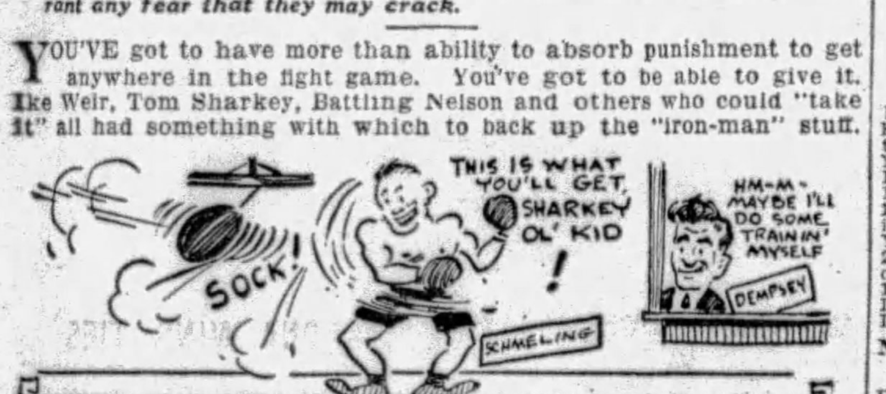
YOU'VE got to have more than ability to absorb punishment to get anywhere in the fight game. You've got to be able to give it. Ike Weir, Tom Sharkey, Battling Nelson and others who could "take it" all had something with which to back up the "iron-man" stuff.



Apparently Paulino Uzcudun lacks those extra qualities that are essential to fistic success. Max Schmeling demonstrated this fact last Thursday night by giving the woodchopper a bad lacing.

Schmeling showed that he, too, had plenty of endurance, and with it the other things that Paulino did not have. All that the result proved, however, was that Schmeling is better than Paulino. That doesn't mean much. Unless Jack Sharkey has one of his off nights he ought to beat Max when they meet in September. Then they'll drag Jack Dempsey back again, not that he'll have a chance to defeat Sharkey, but just for the gate that the affair will draw.

THE fighting Rovers have surpassed the entire rival pennant field of Chicago, New York and St. Louis. Against the first-division clubs the locals have won 19 and lost 13, the Giants have won 11 and lost eight and the Cards have won eight while losing 18.

All of which might be said to show that the Bucs are the class of the lot, and that as a flag possibility St. Louis is merely a pretender. The Cards have been kept in the parade only by their victories over the weak clubs in the league.

ON TOP of the bumps they have received from Brooklyn and Boston in the East, there is more woe in store for the Giants. Stretching ahead of the McGrawites is a schedule that threatens to smash their pennant prospects unless they take a tremendous brace and show a reversal of form and a return to steadiness. No doubt McGraw gets a headache every time he looks at that schedule, for it is one of the hardest that any major league club ever was called upon to tackle in one unbroken run.

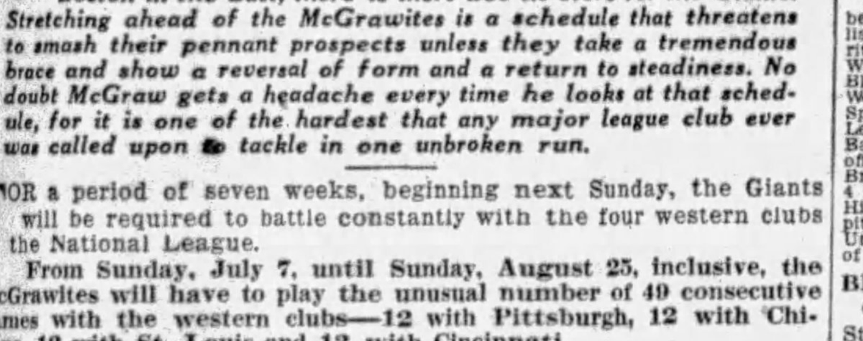
FOR a period of seven weeks, beginning next Sunday, the Giants will be required to battle constantly with the four western clubs of the National League.

From Sunday, July 7, until Sunday, August 25, inclusive, the McGrawites will have to play the unusual number of 49 consecutive games with the western clubs—12 with Pittsburgh, 12 with Chicago, 12 with St. Louis and 13 with Cincinnati.

THE only break that the Giants get out of it is the fact that they will be privileged to play 34 of those games on their own grounds against only 15 on the road.



It is true that the New Yorkers have experienced less trouble with Chicago and St. Louis, of the West, than with Brooklyn and Boston, of the East, but at the same time the schedule is one that will call for all that the Giants have in them if they hope to save themselves from being eliminated from the chase for the gonfalon.

IT WILL be interesting to note what effect Denver's altitude will have upon the country's star track and field athletes when the A. A. U. national championships are held there for the first time next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.. Some experts figure that the runners will be able to make better time and the weight men longer throws than usual because of the lessened resistance offered by the light air.

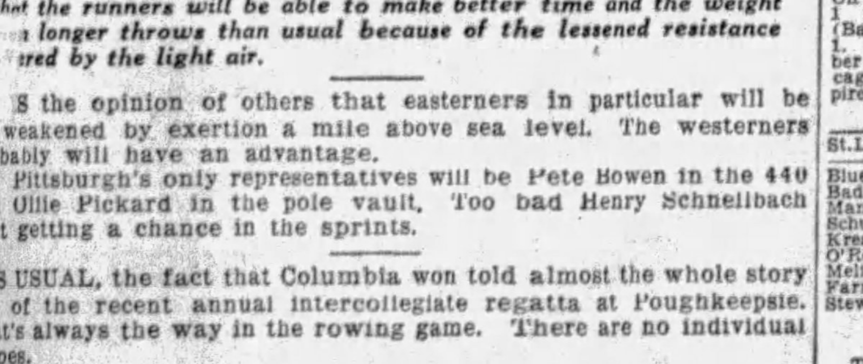
IT IS the opinion of others that easterners in particular will be weakened by exertion a mile above sea level. The westerners probably will have an advantage.

Pittsburgh's only representatives will be Pete Bowen in the 440 and Ollie Pickard in the pole vault. Too bad Henry Schnellbach isn't getting a chance in the sprints.

AS USUAL, the fact that Columbia won told almost the whole story of the recent annual intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie. That's always the way in the rowing game. There are no individual heroes.



Rowing is the only sport in which individualism fails to stand out. Only the crew as a whole figures. Baseball, football, hockey, lacrosse and other competitions between teams, all have their individual heroes, but in college boat races this is wiped out. It's the crew that wins, with each member sharing equally in the glory.

TIE FOR OPEN TITLE

ESPINOSA—Al Espinosa, who played fine golf to overtake Bobby Jones and tie him for the National Open title at the Winged Foot Country Club Saturday. This makes the fourth time Jones has had to play off for the honor. In 1924, he tied with Bobby Cruickshank and won; in 1925, he lost to Willie MacFarlane, and last year he tied with Johny Farrell and was beaten in the extra play.

BUCS AND REDS SPLIT EVEN

struggle in the second inning, the power being furnished by Earl Sheely, de luxe first sacker, whose every day run-of-mine business is to save errors for other infielders.

Adam Comorosky singled to right with one erased in the second. Sheely waited for a tailor-made pitch and then he slammed a liner against the scoreboard for two sacks, the Polish flyer counting on the drive.

In making it an even dozen victories for the current season, Grimes was touched up lively by the Reds, but Burleigh saw to it that a lot of Rhinelanders were left on the sacks. He rose to his brightest brilliance in the third when he had the bases filled with enemy runners, one out and George Kelly at the plate. In this crisis he made Kelly hoist a foul to Grantham, and Critz followed with a fly to Waner.

Hughey Critz gave what might be regarded as the best second-base performance ever witnessed at Forbes Field. The wee marvel of the Red infield handled 10 assists without a slip, six or seven of the plays killing off base hits. He was applauded to the echo by the fans.

The day's program marked the twentieth anniversary of Forbes Field, the real date falling on Sunday.

SCORE ON ERROR

The Pirates were favored by lady luck in making their first tally in the closing scrap with the Reds. Dick Bartell singled with two out in the third and when Evar Swanson muffed L. Waner's short fly, Dick sprinted to the plate for the only marker up to that time.

North Side Steve was swinging along in a pretty stride and the Reds were blanked as late as the fourth. With one out, Long George Kelly bumped the left center fence with a terrific double and Critz followed with a single to right that should have scored Kelly, but Critz made his way around the sacks before the dust lifted.

Brother Paul came in fast and tried to nail Kelly at the plate. His hard shot indicated there would be some close action with a chance that Kelly would be tagged out. The rocket hopped a bit high to Hargreaves who took enough of a jolt from the bigger man to make him miss the ball and it rolled to the stands, nobody backing up the throw. Critz flew around the course on the misplay which was charged to the rightfielder.

The second squeeze play in two days won the contest for the Reds in the seventh. Kolp was on the business end of this maneuver and the pitcher put the stunt on so skillfully that he really deserved something little short of victory. Ethan Allen hit a bounder toward second to start the inning. As Bartell and Grantham closed in on the ball, which would have been an infield hit, the sphere struck the bag and swerved into short center for a lucky two sacker. Ford sacrificed.

Swetonic and Hargreaves were careful on Catcher Sukeforth, inasmuch as Kolp was the succeeding hitter.

Sukeforth eventually walked, and there was a fine double play set up for Kolp, but the pitcher outsmarted our boys with a bunt down the first-base line, scoring Allen.

The Pirates had the fans hanging on to their seats in the eighth, Curt Walker nailing Bartell's liner in the inning that carried the thrill of victory. Comorosky started with a single and Sheely walked. Brickell batted for Hargreaves and his sacrifice fly to Walker advanced Commy to the three-quarter post. Ervin Brame batted for Swetonic and singled off Critz's glove, scoring Commy. At this point Bartell rifled a hot one into right center, but Walker sprinted fast and hauled in the drive.

Curtains for the Buccos.

MOVE ON TO CINCY

The Pirates and Reds left late Saturday for Cincinnati, where on Sunday they will stage a single game. Monday is an open date for the Pirates, but the off day will find the Buccos in Charleroi for exhibition purposes.

Senor Luque and Monsieur Kremer are slated to stage another Latin mound duel in Cincinnati Sunday.

The Cardinals will be in town for the Fourth of July observance. Four games with the Redbirds are on the Forbes Field slate beginning Tuesday, the contest of Wednesday having been moved back on account of a postponement. Morning and afternoon games with the Cardinals will be played on Independence Day.

Jones, Al Espinosa Tie for Open Title

Bobby 'Blows' Lead, But Matches Chicago Pro's 294; Playoff Sunday.

lation 72 holes at 294 strokes apiece after one of the wildest battles in the history of the tournament. Jones, finishing as poorly as he started brilliantly, scored 69-75-71-79. Espinosa put together rounds of 70-72-77-75.

Those in the money below Jones and Espinosa were: Gene Sarazen and Densmore Shute, tied at 296; Tommy Armour and George Von Elm, the amateur, tied at 297; Henry Ciuci, 299; Pete O'Hara and Leo Diegel, deadlocked at 301, and Horton Smith, 302.

36-HOLE PLAYOFF

Tomorrow they will play for the title at 36 holes, 18 in the morning starting at 10 o'clock and 18 in the afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Thus, for the second successive year, Jones, with the crown apparently perched firmly on his head, permitted it to slip off in the final round for hands to grab and dispute with him.

Last year, the famous Atlanta amateur in a similarly commanding position as leader going into the last 18 holes, frittered away seven strokes on five straight holes, wound up in a tie with Johnny Farrell, also at 294, and then lost the playoff by a stroke at Olympia Fields.

Today, with a three-stroke margin over his nearest rival, Gene Sarazen, and four shots ahead of Espinosa, after 54 holes of competition, Jones astonished a gallery of 12,000, the greatest and also probably the most uncontrollable in open championship history, by taking sevens on two holes, the eighth and fifteenth, then three costly putts on the sixteenth green from only 18 feet.

ESPINOSA RALLIES

Espinosa, in the thick of the fight all the way, a co-leader with Sarazen after 36 holes, rallied spectacularly himself on the last few holes to post his 294 and take the lead, after an atrocious 8 on the twelfth hole apparently had put him out of the running. But Jones met a flock of fresh trouble himself, where he seemed to have the title stowed safely away.

After Espinosa had finished with a blazing 4-3-4 for his final round of 75 and grand total of 294, Jones came to the last two holes needing par four on each to tie. He played the seventeenth perfectly, then smashed a long drive down through the dense masses of humanity fringing the eighteenth fairway. His iron, slightly pulled, was hole-high, but off the green, a foot from the edge of a trap and when he chipped a dozen feet short of the cup, his chances looked slim. A slight slope to the green required careful calculation, but Bobby had the finishing punch and delivered it, where farther back it looked as if he was himself on the ropes and about to be knocked right out of the tournament.

SHUTE'S EFFORT VAIN

This was exciting enough for the great throng, but there was one more bit of drama as Densmore Shute, 42-year-old Columbus, Ohio, professional, came along behind Jones to make the one remaining thrust either for the title or a share in the tie. Needing 4-3 or 3-4 to tie Jones and Espinosa on the last two holes, Shute missed his bid for the birdie on the seventeenth by inches. Still game, he slugged a tee shot that cleared the last two hillocks and rolled to within 125 yards of the 419-yard ninth. His pitch was straight, but too strong, rolling back over the green among the spectators.

Knowing he had to sink the next shot to tie, Shute struck it boldly, but it went well past the cup. His last hope gone, he took a 5 for the hole, 76 for his final round and a grand total of 296 that left him in a tie for third place with Gene Sarazen.

The half dozen contenders who furnished the main pack of thrills in the closing drive was completed by George Von Elm, the Detroit amateur, and Tommy Armour, professional fellow townsman. Each wound up with totals of 297 for a tie for fifth position with the rest of the field, as well as a flock of badly beaten favorites, scattered behind them.

GIANTS, PHILS BREAK EVEN

NEW YORK, June 29.—(AP.)—The New York Giants and Philadelphia Nationals divided a doubleheader today as Melvin Ott took the lead in inter-league home run honors with his twenty-second circuit drive of the season.

The Phillies copped the opener, 10 to 6, but found Dutch Henry a puzzle in the nightcap and lost, 6 to 1. Victory in the first game broke the Giants' streak of nine straight wins over the Phils. The scores:

Punch With Body To Score Knockouts. Follow-Through Idea.

'MY SECRETS OF SOCK'—CHAPTER III.

THE golfer who rises to stardom is the one who acquires the knack of putting his BODY into his drives. The dub is the ARM SWINGER.

The greatest sluggers in baseball history were the ones who put the ENTIRE BODY into their swings. The weak hitters are those men who swing with ARM POWER.

And the knockout specialists in ringdom are the men who have their WHOLE BODY concentrated in their punches.

A man need not be bulky, nor gigantic, nor amazingly strong, to be a superlative driver on the links, a home run artist, or a knockout specialist. The fellow who is comparatively small and light can, by concentrated BODY POWER, outslug the giants at any game, provided these giants are merely arm hitters.

In golf, the Hagens, the Joneses, the Farrells, the Armours and other satellites are not physical giants. But they know the knack of BODY DRIVING, and, because they do, they can consistently outdistance other men who have greater height, greater weight and mightier strength, but have NOT the BODY FORCE knowledge or knack of using it.

BABE RUTH, super-hitter of balldom, is a big man. That would seem to prove that weight and height count. Yet the thing that has made Ruth king of home run hitters is neither bulk nor stature. There are 50 men in the big leagues as powerful as Ruth, yet they are unknown as horsehide murderers. Ruth becomes an immortal simply because he puts his body into every swing that he takes at the ball.

Rabbit Maranville and Joe Sewell are hardly bigger than a sack of potatoes. In the matter of bulk and physical strength they are dwarfs in comparison with most of the other men in their leagues. Yet the fact is established that both do hit a ball harder and for longer distances than about 75 per cent of the giants. That's because they know the secret of swinging at a ball with all their weight in the effort.

Bob Fitzsimmons, Kid McCoy, Stanley Ketchel, Jack Dillon, Joe Walcott and Sam Langford in their younger years were not big in stature. Walcott and Langford were hardly taller than bantamweights. Ketchel and Dillon were of average size. Fitzsimmons and McCoy were only big middleweights. Yet those men compiled amazing knockout totals against men who were from three to twelve inches taller and from 10 to 75 pounds heavier.

IN HIS best days, when Langford was knocking out all the fellows who dared to try conclusions with him, he was asked about his knockout "secret."

"Tain't no secret," replied Sam. "All ah does is put mah hips into them punches!"

That's the knockout prescription, which, elaborated upon, reads:

WHEN YOU SWING WITH YOUR FIST, YOU SHOULD AUTOMATICALLY SWING AND LET THE HIP AND BODY FOLLOW ALONG WITH THE PUNCH.

Some years ago, while I was training for a fight, an ambitious youngster came to my camp, sparred with me one day and afterward asked me:

"What are my faults?"

"The chief one," I told him, "is that you are hitting only with arm power. You can't do any real damage that way. Certainly you can not score any knockouts. The thing to do is to let go with your fist, and, as you do, let your whole body go with it. Make the action fast and concerted, and with your WHOLE BODY in the punch."

"But," he cut in, "suppose I missed? I might spin myself all the way around the ring and I'd look like a sucker to the crowd."

THE kid was right—from his viewpoint. And his way of looking at things is that "safety first" idea which percolates all through ringdom today—to the detriment of knockout results. But there is another way of looking at it—the way the Fitzsimmons, the Langfords, the Ketchels, the Walcotts, the Leonards, McGoverns and the others looked at it. I explained it to the youngster in this fashion:

"Don't let go until you are reasonably sure you won't miss. And don't let your head get muddled up by the fear of what will happen if you do miss. Swing with the one thought in mind of hitting your man and knocking him out. Swing with everything you've got to swing with. If you miss—well, that's something that belongs to the future, and the future usually takes care of itself.

"If you are afraid to take a full body swing at a man because you might miss and 'look like a sucker,' you'd better quit the game right now. For, if you won't venture, you can't gain. Babe Ruth looks like a sucker when he misses a swing—but he's out there swinging just the same. Fitz and those boys missed plenty—but they kept right on swinging, even if they looked foolish.

"I missed a few myself. I spun around when I did and undoubtedly I looked like a sucker. But I wasn't worried about missing and didn't mind being laughed at. While the 'safety first' boys, who wouldn't take a chance on missing, got nowhere in particular, I grabbed myself a championship."

(In his fourth article on the Knockout as a Pugilistic Art, Jack Dempsey describes how he discovered a simple and effective system of learning how "to put everything" into a blow while practicing on a punching bag. This idea, which the reader readily can use, really started Dempsey on his amazing K. O. career. The article will appear next Sunday on this page.)

Robins Beat Braves Twice

BROOKLYN, June 29.—(AP.)—Behind the fine pitching of Clark and Johnny Morrison, the Dodgers drubbed the Braves twice today, taking the opener, 4 to 3, and the last, 8 to 7. Errors gave the Braves all of their runs in the last two innings of the second game.

The appearance of Morrison in the second game marked the first starting appearance of the former Pirate curve ball artist in a Brooklyn uniform. Bissonette, Robins' first baseman, knocked out two home runs, one in each game. The scores:

Numerous Playoffs Loom in Local Sandlot Races

LEADERS TIED AS FIRST ROUND NEARS FINISH

West Penn Loop Finds Three Clubs Deadlocked as Half-Way Point Approaches.

North Side Civics Still Have Fight on Hands in City League Competition

By TOM BIRKS.

WONDERFUL races are marking the final weeks of play in the first halves of the local sandlot league, and reviewing the races it appears as if many playoffs will be staged before the initial champions are crowned.

The greatest race in Western Pennsylvania is being staged in the West Penn League. Sandlotters in the district are faced with a triple tie in that loop, Wilmerding, Verona Community and Universal being bunched. The coming week will see the first triple playoff for a championship in many years on the local lots.

STAGES COMEBACK

Universal staged a wonderful spurt in the race, for just as the fans had figured the fight between Wilmerding and Verona, McKeag's Cement nine started down the stretch and went into a first place tie. Ernie Vavra, the speed ball pitcher, and former scholastic star, was responsible to a certain extent, but he is lost to Universal in the playoffs, having left for New York, where he will enter New York University.

Verona Community will meet Export-Murrayville at Verona on Tuesday and at the conclusion of this game plans for the playoff will be discussed between Bill Bright, McKeag and O'Connell.

The City League battle still is in full blast. The North Side Civics are not out of the wood and still have to beat the J. L. Thomas nine. Sammy Leon probably will pitch this game against the Rooneys, and should the Bloomfielders win another playoff might face the fans.

Playoffs seem to be the popular thing in the first half races. The Steel City League, another loop under the guidance of Honus Wagner, also has a three-club tie. In this loop, the Dispatch, Herron Hill Cardinals and Moore Cardinals are battling it out with the result very much in doubt. In fact, any of the three clubs named can win the first half.

The halfway mark of the sandlot season comes Thursday. In seasons past the Fourth marked the dwindling away of many clubs; in fact before the era of the sandlot league half of the teams disbanded at this time. However, the league idea keeps the clubs together, and it is far better for the game.

LEAGUES HELP GAME

The league idea is fast displacing the booking of independent games by managers. Clubs are becoming used to playing in leagues, and many teams like the Homestead Aces, the J. J. Boyles, Verona and North Bessemer, who have an unlimited use of grounds, play in a couple of leagues to keep the fans with a standing set schedule of attractions, and this eliminates the worry of guarantees. In fact, it seems as if the club playing in the independent ranks is passing out of the picture.

While talking of playoffs, the Commercial-Industrial loop, over which Dick Mackey presides, also gives indication that a playoff will be staged. Carnegie Steel and Reick McJunkins are in the race. The Milk boys have to play Gimbels, and the Steelers meet Joseph Hornes. On the season's form the possibility of a playoff to decide the first half champion looms. Post-season meeting between Carnegie Steel and the Reick-McJunkin nine would be quite an attraction for the fans.

The second half of this race might be entirely different. The first half found the Joseph Horne nine playing all of its games on the road. The second half will find all of the clubs making the pleasant trip to the Horne camp down along the Ohio, and Hornes probably will make them all step.

The second half of the Pittsburgh Central loop will commence on Monday. W. O. W. as class A elimination champion copped the first half, but Manager Jedinak knows that his wonderful club is going to meet plenty of opposition in the second half of the race. The other managers, Johnny Hornyak, Jerry Saunier, Goldstein, Lutton, Hoochstedder and McBurney have been strengthening their clubs, and it is quite possible that the class A champs will meet some tough opposition.

On Tuesday, East Liberty will open at Olympic Park, opposing C. M. C., while the first half winners will entertain the Harvey Club, of the North Side. Wednesday will find C. M. C. at the Salt Works meeting Harveys. Two game are called Friday, W. O. W. at Soho and the Boyles at Roosevelt. Saturday finds the Roosevelt Club at East Liberty Red Sox.

Homewood-Brushton still keeps up its great ball playing activities. The league officials still are trying to put another club into the race that might give the flying Homewooders a tussle, but getting clubs of this caliber at this stage of the game is a tough problem.

However, there is a chance that Beaver Falls and Canonsburg will make the going tough for Hank Daly's club in the second half. It seems as if the opposition will have to come from these out-of-town combinations. The Jimmy Smith Club and Dormont do not appear to be in Homewood's class as far as winning ball games is concerned, but Canonsburg and Beaver Falls, two real baseball towns, with capable managers, probably will not be content to string along and let Homewood monopolize the limelight.

GIRLS DRAW CROWD

Psychology is ever present even on the sandlots. Fandom is ever looking for something different. Last week the Ranger Girls, presumably from Chicago, breezed into town, meeting Stowe. The visitors played to one of the greatest crowds ever bunched together at a sandlot game. The fans knew practically just what the result of the game would be, but they turned out, just to see something different. Had Stowe been battling one of the leaders in the City loop, with the title at stake, the crowd would not have been half so large, which makes one ask himself, "Do the fans go out to see baseball, or a side attraction?"

PETE SANSTOL WINS

NEW YORK, June 29.—(AP.)—Pete Sanstol, Norwegian bantamweight, decisively outpointed Johnny Erickson, of Sweden, tonight in a fast sixround bout at Ridgewood Grove. Sanstol weighed 116 3-4 pounds, Erickson 119.

Jones Is Favored In Open Playoff

Greater Experience Likely to Give Bobby Edge Over Espinosa.

By HORTON SMITH,
French Open Champion and Sensational Young U. S. Pro.

MAMARONECK, N. Y., June 29.—There was no presentation of the championship golf cup tonight, the ceremony being slated to take place tomorrow evening after Bobby Jones and Al Espinosa, the amateur and the professional, who tied in the regular 72-holes, have finished a 36-hole playoff for the title. They were tied today at the end of 72 holes with scores of 294 each.

Both might have won the championship outright but Jones took a seven at the fifteenth hole in his last round and tossed his chance to the winds and Espinosa took an eight at the twelfth and sunk his chances. None of the other players were quite able to catch these two, although Densmore Shutte, of Columbus, George Von Elm, of Detroit, and Tommy Armour made gallant efforts.

Horton Smith.

Jones, in his annual battle with the professionals, has thus eliminated all but one of the 1,000 who started the chase in the qualifying rounds. It is the fourth time that Bobby has been in a two-man tie for the title. The first time he won from Cruickshank at Inwood, the second time he lost to Willie MacFarlane at Worcester, and last year Johnny Farrell beat him by a single stroke in Chicago.

JONES PLAY SPOTTY

Because of this previous experience, and because Espinosa has never been this close before, Jones is the favorite. As far as the golf they have both played here Espinosa looks the best for his golf has been very steady, whereas Jones has played spotty stuff. His row of consecutive threes in his second round when he finished the last nine in 31, was the brilliant flash that kept his name to the front. Espinosa had no such glorious run of holes and worked his way to the front by good hard plugging for his par figures.

Al Espinosa, the Chicago professional, who has worked his way into this play-off, has been one of the leading professional golfers in America for many years. He was born on the Monterey Peninsula of California, in the ancient Spanish settlement of Monterey, and is himself of Spanish ancestry, his forebears having settled in California before the Pilgrim Fathers came to Massachusetts.

Al was a member of this year's American Rider Cup team and has been one of the regulars in the winter tournament group of players who annually tour the United States playing in the open tournaments. He has finished in the money with great regularity and there is no reason why he should not be able to produce his best game tomorrow.

WIFE LOYAL SUPPORTER

Al's most loyal supporter and a constant companion at all golf tournaments is his wife. Mrs. Espinosa has followed Al over hundreds of courses. She seldom misses a round of tournament golf in which her husband plays and will be out at Winged Foot tomorrow. Mrs. Espinosa accompanied her husband to Europe this spring.

One other golfer had a chance to get into the play-off when Denmore Shutte came to the last two holes needing a three and a four to tie. His putt for the birdie three at the seventeenth stopped on the lip of the cup, but his second to the home green was too far and he finished in third place with two good fours.

Gene Sarazen, who was in second place with a round to go, took 41 to the turn and spoiled his chance. George Von Elm, the Detroit amateur, made a gallant try, as did Tommy Armour, but they could not quite make the grade.

Merion Cricket Club Is Awarded Amateur for '30

Associated Press.

MAMARONECK, N. Y., June 29.

THE U. S. G. A. today announced that the 1930 amateur championship had been awarded the Merion Cricket Club, Philadelphia, and that the women's championship for the same year will be played over the links of the country club, Buffalo, N. Y.

The dates will be announced later.

Yank Tennis Stars Win

By F. A. WRAY.
International News Service.

WIMBLEDON, England, June 29.—George M. Lott, Jr., forging his way through the singles of the Wimbledon tennis championships, entered the quarter-final round today by defeating J. Kozeluh, of Czecho-Slovakia, 6-4, 6-1, 6-4.

Lott played a brilliant game and provided one of the finest performances yet showed by an American in this important tournament.

In an early match in the women's singles, Miss E. Goldsack, of England, eliminated her countrywoman, Mrs. R. L. C. Mitchell, 4-6, 7-5, 6-0.

By defeating Kozeluh, Lott joined Big Bill Tilden in the last eight, thus giving the United States two men in the quarter-finals. His opponent will now be Jean Borotra, of France.

Miss Elizabeth Ryan, Californian now living in England, and Miss Betty Nuthall, advanced in the women's doubles event by defeating Mrs. John Hill and Miss Evelyn Colyer, of England, 6-4, 6-4.

Miss Joan Ridley, English girl star, defeated Fraulein Cilli Aussem, of Germany, in straight sets, scoring somewhat of an upset. The scores were 8-6, 6-1.

Billie Tapscott, of South Africa, defeated Miss Chamberlain, of England, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4.

Helen Wills and Edith Cross, American girl aces, from California, eliminated Mrs. Molla Mallory, former American women's champion, and Miss Desmidt from the doubles play. The scores were 6-1, 5-7, 6-1.

J. C. Gregory and Miss Ryan teamed in the mixed doubles to defeat the British pair, George W. Hillyard and Mrs. Satterthwaite, 6-1, 6-3.

Von Kehrling, of Hungary, entered the quarter-finals by defeating Cliffe, of England, 9-7, 7-5, 6-4.

H. W. (Bunny) Austin, the English star, also made his way into the quarter-finals by defeating his countryman, H. C. Kingsley, in a hard fought five-set match, 6-2, 4-6, 6-1, 4-6, 11-9.

Bill Tilden and Frank Hunter continued their progress through the doubles field, defeating an English pair, Gordon Crole-Rees and Cyril Eames, 6-1, 6-4, 6-3.

Star Pilots in Auto Race At Bridgeville July 4

THE very latest automobile racing mechanism will be seen in action at the Pittsburgh-Bridgeville board speedway next Thursday afternoon—July 4—when the outstanding speed monarchs of the country meet in a 100-mile all-champion drivers setto.

While Millers will dominate the field, there also will be a couple of the famous Deusenbergs among the flock, but the steel steeds that will command more than casual attention will be the front-wheel drives of Cliff Bergere, the noted French ace, of Hollywood, and Burt Karnatz, of Detroit.

Following are the entries to date:

Jimmy Gleason, Deusenberg, Indianapolis; Lou Schnieder, Miller, Chicago; Cliff Bergere, Miller, Hollywood; Lou Moore, Miller, California; Speed Gardner, Miller, Pittsburgh; Chet Gardner, Boyle Vale Spec, Philadelphia; Bill Lindau, Miller, Pittsburgh; Deacon Litz, Miller, Dubois; Dave Evans, Miller, Texas; Billy Arnold, Miller, Chicago; Bob Robinson, Deusenberg, Philadelphia; Burt Karnatz, Miller, Detroit.

Robinson will drive the Deusenberg owned by Keech estate. It is the same car that was responsible for the fatal accident in which its owner was killed at Altoona.

The names of a few more high-class speedsters will be added to the above list when the official entry list is announced by Director B. Ward Beam, Wednesday.

Large Field Enters Race

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 29.—Fifteen and possibly 18 dirt track auto racers will face the starter's gun in the annual mixed 100-mile grind at the Fair Grounds Oval here July 4, according to the list of entrants given out by the officials of the event today. Jack Johnson, former heavyweight champion of the world, is to be honorary referee of the meet and is due in the city tomorrow. He will pace the cars around the track for the first lap of the grind.

C. J. Wall

The entry list to date includes the following drivers, all of whom have definitely entered the event:

George Kratt, Washington; Beeler Burns, Tut Jackson and Jack Johnson, Washington Courthouse, O.; Johnny Clevenger, Mt. Morris, Pa.; C. J. Wall, winner of second place in 1928, Washington, Pa.; Ray Fouts, Steubenville, O.; Al Lype, Brentwood; Don Davidson and Bill Moore, Connellsville, Pa.; High Gear Harshaw, Millvale, Pa.; Quinn Banks, Washington, Pa., and Ray Leake, Carrick.

A series of motorcycle races and a special five-mile stunt race will precede the feature event.

Pyle Ready For Pay-Off

LOS ANGELES, June 29.—(INS.)—C. C. (Cross Country) Pyle today announced that the final pay-off for 15 prize winners in the 1929 bunion derby was being aligned and with the accomplishment of "certain details will take place by Tuesday of the coming week."

Queried as to where and how he had raised the $60,000 to meet the obligations, Pyle declined to answer, except that "everything is being done to take care of the men and to maintain their confidence in me."

Pyle said that six of the 15 runners had already been settled with and that they had departed for their homes.

Pyle has been cited to appear before the state labor commissioner next Monday to show why he has not paid the winners.

VERONA WINS, TIES

Verona Community won and tied a twin bill with the Jimmy Smith club, of the Inter-County League on Saturday. The afternoon game at Verona found the home club swamping the visitors by a 13 to 1 score. The twilight affair at Magee Field went 10 innings, and then the game was called on account of darkness with the score tied, 5-5. The scores:

Anglers on Edge for Opening of Fishing Season

ROD AND REEL TO COME INTO OWN ON MONDAY

Conneaut Lake to Serve as Mecca for Outdoor Sportsmen During July, August.

Lake Erie and Susquehanna River Other Popular Places For Water Enthusiasts.

By GIB MARSH.

WHEN the old clock shows that the 24 hours of Sunday have passed and July 1, 1929, is here the anglers of Pennsylvania will step into their boats and make their way to some favorite fishing grounds in the lakes and streams in Pennsylvania for the opening of the season on bass, salmon, muscallounge and all the other game fish of the fresh waters.

Yes, just one minute after midnight will be the curtain raising session for one of the best of the summer pastimes in the Keystone State, fishing for large and small-mouth bass, the tiger-like "muskie," and the hard-hitting salmon. Today the Western Pennsylvania anglers are making their way to Conneaut Lake, Edinboro Lake and Lake Erie, while in the central part of the state the sportsmen are congregating along the Susquehanna river for the opening hostilities.

Gib Marsh

LAKE IS POPULAR.

Probably, over 100 boats will be on the water at Conneaut Lake, the occupants, equipped with long poles, trolling over the bars of that famous old lake. For the first time since last October the bass, salmon and "muskie" will have offered them as lures, spinners, baited with worms or pork rind. Likely some large hungry salmon will strike, only to find itself hooked, then lifted out of the water in a landing net. The thrill of the first catch of the season has been experienced.

When the break of day peeps over the hills surrounding the lake the early morning anglers, who like to cast, will take their turn. There are just two periods of the day when casting can be done successfully, early in the morning and in the evening, when the bass and salmon are preparing to leave their night refuge, the weeds in the shallow waters on the bars, for the deep cool pools where they will spend the day, and the evening when they return to the bars to spend the night.

There is every indication that at Conneaut Lake a banner opening will be staged. I have talked to scores of sportsmen who are going to give Conneaut Lake "a whirl" as they express themselves. It will be a pleasant assembly for those groups of anglers will spend Sunday afternoon and evening in discussion of their favorite sport.

They will relate their former experiences at the lake, probably row out on the lake and select some likely fishing bars, for the midnight activities. And when the hour hand of the clock indicates that Monday has officially arrived they will be on the water. Usually they troll for four or five hours and it is a treat to be at Sam Hudson's pier when they return.

They will exhibit their strings of bass and salmon, principally salmon, for the bass does not always favor the usual trolling baits, such as worms and pork rind. Probably a few anglers will have the pleasure of landing a "muskie" or two and quite a number will return without any fish on their strings.

TWO BIG MONTHS

Throughout July and August the anglers will be busy at the lake. September and October, which are the real months to fish will find some of the clan at the lake, but the major number of the anglers will be the natives. And the sport those natives enjoy. However, vacation time for the city dweller and worker is not in the months of September and October, so they must be content with July and August when the pesky weeds in the lake make the conditions annoying for casting.

I know two veteran anglers, who like to fish for "muskies" are glad the season is at hand. Those two veterans have been fishing at Conneaut Lake for many years and confine their efforts to landing "muskies" and hunting the dens of those "tigers." Yes, they will be out at daybreak in their small motor boat, trolling some luring spinner or plug over the section of the lake where they know some large "muskie" has its den.

PERSISTENT FISHERMEN

They have taken out many muscallounge at Conneaut Lake and they have lost quite a few which struck their lures. However, when that pair of veterans lose a "muskie," they mark the spot and return for another fray. I remembered in 1922 they worked two evenings each week for the entire summer to land a "muskie," which they had observed when it followed a fast revolving spinner those "vets" were trolling, but did not strike.

It was late in September when they finally landed it. Both were elated over their success and felt they had been more than repaid for the months of effort they had expended. The largest "muskie" that was ever taken on a hook and line was caught five years ago at Conneaut Lake. I think it weighed over 38 pounds. Of the natives, Sam Hudson and Durant Zuschlag are more expert in landing "muskies." Those two fishermen usually catch from 15 to 29 big "muskies" annually. Both resort to different methods. Zuschlag trolls from a small motor boat and Hudson does his work from a row boat, casting a large "sucker" along the edge of the bars in the evening.

It will be pleasant to know that the night fishermen will not be annoyed this season, by fast "joy-riding" motor boats. At the last session of the lawmakers of this state an act was past prohibiting the reckless piloting of motor boats at high speed at night. All large motor boats now must be equipped with mufflers and must have large lights. So no longer will the anglers live in terror of being run down by these reckless piloted motor boats.

ATHLETE INJURED

SHARON, Pa., June 29.—William Edeburn, of Sharon, who was a member of the Kiski Prep School track team the past year, was painfully injured while swimming in the Shenango River.

Pittsburgh Society Answering Call of Summer Resorts

Social Leaders in Increasing Numbers Leaving Heat of City For Cool of Mountain and Shore

By PATRICIA PITT.

FACE to face with a social calendar that looks rather blank compared with the well-filled pages of the weeks just past, we can take a little comfort, can't we, in the fact that the vacation days will put the debutantes and their mothers, not to mention "their sisters and their cousins and their aunts," in trim for the busy season to come. They may just as well fill their lungs with fresh air this summer, because most of their time until the first of the new year will be spent indoors, at one party or another.

The eastern resorts are exerting a powerful attraction for our local folks, now that most of the entertaining is over, and already some of the summer places are occupied. The Watch Hill society colony swings into full stride this week-end, I understand, with many villas opened and the golf clubs arranging their tournament programs. And since the Sunday afternoon musicales at the Misquamicut Golf Club have always meant so much to our colonists there, perhaps you would be interested to know that plans are being made to present a varied list of artists, instead of the purely orchestral programs of other years. The first musicale, next Sunday, will be given by the Philharmonic Sextet, and later in the summer, Gertrude Ehrhart, soprano, and David Blair McClosky, baritone, will be heard.

The golf club opens its tournament season on July 4, and the tennis courts are being resurfaced. Mrs. Harry Darlington, by the way, has been elected to the house committee of the club. The Darlingtons have already opened their villa, "Longshore," and have figured among the early hosts of the season. Their yacht, Ardea, is in the Watch Hill harbor for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Frederic Byers are also at the Hill and have opened their house, "Cedarhurst," while "Samoset,"

NOT only the "grown-ups" of the social realm come to Longue Vue, but members of the school set, too. Miss Nancy Wise, Miss Polly Mitchell, and Miss Neil Stewart Zang like Longue Vue. Although none of the girls will come out in the fall, all have been seen at June debutante affairs. PHOTOS BY PITTSBURGH SUN-TELEGRAPH.

LUNCHEONS and bridge as well as golf bring attractive Mrs. William A. Duckham, a member of the younger married set, to Longue Vue. And a very pretty picture she makes against a vine-covered niche, where she's waiting for her car.

One of the loviest country clubs attracting Pittsburgh society folks is the Longue Vue Club. The clubhouse is distinctive.

Miss Betty Daly Miss Laura Evans Miss Nancy Allderdice

READY to drive away from Longue Vue after a pleasant afternoon are Miss Daly, Miss Evans and Miss Allderdice. Miss Daley, of Denver, has been the guest of Miss Laura Evans, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard S. Evans, of Beechwood boulevord. And Miss Allderdice will be presented to society in the fall, too, by her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Allderdice. Laura looks most attractive, don't you agree, in her white silk crepe sleeveless dress and cherry blossom printed coat? And a bunch of cherries trims her alluring white hat. Miss Allderdice, in a two-piece white silk crepe dress, will be one of the debutantes of the fall season.

Miss Mary James Mrs. Frederick W. Edmondson Miss Martha Edmondson

SEEN chatting on one of the attractive terraces of the clubhouse are Miss James, of Hamlet, North Carolina, Mrs. Edmondson, and her daughter, Miss Edmondson, who'll make her bow in the fall. Mrs. Edmondson gave a luncheon recently at Longue Vue for her debutante daughter and Miss James, who has been a guest at the Edmondson home. Miss Edmondson and Miss James were graduated from Spence School earlier this month. At the luncheon given for them, many of the debutantes of this year and a group of sub-debs, too, were guests. Miss Edmondson is wearing a white and scarlet printed chiffon, and a large scarlet straw hat. Her mother is in white. Rustic reed chairs are enticingly placed.

Club Women to Be Big Sisters to Gumbert School Girls

Auxiliary to Be Formed to Aid in Solving Problems

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG.

A BIG Sister Auxiliary to the Gumbert School for Girls is to be formed by the clubwomen of this district. It is eminently fitting that such an organization should be made up of clubwomen, since it was they who were responsible for the establishment of the school a little more than three years ago. Under Mrs. Charles S. Hutchison's chairmanship, the need for the school was made plain to the county commissioners by the welfare department of the Congress of Clubs and the commissioners purchased the Pickering property on the Three Degree road, a place most admirably suited to their purpose.

The Auxiliary members will work as the name implies, each member taking an interest in one girl at the school, studying with her her problem, looking towards its solution, and lending a friendly hand both before and after release. When it is known that there are girls in the school whose mothers never come to visit them, the position of a big sister is immediately seen to be of vast importance and her need imperative. One can readily understand that the efficiency of the entire regime will be decidedly heightened by the human, personal touch which the Auxiliary will introduce. Not that the personal touch is at present lacking—such superintendence and house-mothering as the school now has assured its presence—but the Big Sisters will make it more individual, and in this way the girl with an exceptional talent may be given an opportunity to develop her more or less latent gift.

Mrs. Sloan President

Mrs. John S. Sloan has been president of the board at the school ever since she finished her six-year administration as president of the Congress of Clubs. Serving also on the board are Miss Suzanne Beatty, Mrs. Hutchison, Mrs. Raymond Kaufmann, Miss Harriet Goldman, Joseph Beck, W. H. McNaugher, Dr. John A. Hollinger and Gustave Schramm.

Whether they feel the institution is peculiarly their own or whether it is only because of their ability to recognize any worth while movement, Pittsburgh club women have taken an active interest in the school from the time of its inception. Most of the books in the growing library are gifts from members of different clubs and the women show their interest by visits to the home, trips which repay the guests many times over through the insight they get into the efficient working of such an institution. Forty members of the Chartiers Women's Clubs association motored out to the school Tuesday and spent a most delightful day inspecting the houses and gardens and enjoying the lovely outdoors. There are at present 46 girls in the school who give the visitors 46 smiles of very real welcome and who rise to their feet in greeting as would the children in any other well ordered and well mannered household. These are busy girls at the Gumbert School, for even with 46 of them to do it, making of their clothing and of household hangings and coverings, milking, gardening and housekeeping for such a large family, amount to tasks of considerable magnitude, every bit of which is done by the girls themselves, in addition to their academic studies and their other lessons. Last season the girls who were in the school at the time "put up" 2,000 quarts of fruits and vegetables, all of which had been garnered and most of which had been planted and cultivated by the same hands.

The house, which had originally been a two-family winged building, with a great, common, beautiful living room as the connecting link, is kept in meticulous spick-and-span-ness and no less neat and attractive is the school house, whose upper rooms are used as dormitories by the Negro girls. The lower floor rooms of one wing in the big house have been made over into a most attractive suite for the superintendent, office and dispensary. The painting in these new quarters was done entirely by the girls, a "job" upon which they can look with justifiable pride. Some of the girls even show an aptitude for carpentering, new window screens giving evidence of this. The next improvement in the school is to be the installation of three much-needed showers and dressing rooms in the basement, where already are store rooms, well equipped laundry and model, spotless dairy. A new disposal plant is in process of installation.

But no one must think that life is all work and no play for these girls whose "problems" have made a school their temporary home. A tennis court where gorgeous climbing roses make a bower of beauty, is theirs for basketball, baseball, tennis or other games and on nearly 70 acres there are bound to be many inviting paths for walking. Recreation of a winter evening is often supervised and planned by the house mothers, one of whom is Mrs. Rosalie M. Pentecost, well-known member of the Outlook Alliance whose histrionic gifts have frequently entertained her fellow club members. Such lovely vistas as Gumbert School presents from almost any angle are sufficient for a constant feasting of the eye and soul, if one but has the capacity for such food.

DANCE CHAIRMAN

Congress to Hold Bridge Breakfast

THE Congress of Clubs never goes eventless for long. After a period of early summer inactivity, the Congress board is starting the ball rolling anew with its plans for something unusual in the way of entertainment—a bridge breakfast, to be held at the clubhouse, July 24. The affair is planned especially for those members remaining in town during July. Improvements and repairs are going on apace in the clubhouse, but this does not interfere with the service.

Mrs. Philip Benz, in charge of the Congress weekly radio programs during the absence of the radio chairman, Mrs. Erwin Sohn, announces Dr. Walker F. Donaldson as speaker for Tuesday at 10:45. Dr. Donaldson will talk over KDKA on "First Aid for Vacationists."

The evening department, at its dinner meeting last Monday, decided to discontinue sessions until September. The officers of the department, however, will be in the clubhouse for dinner every second and fourth Monday evening to meet department members informally.

Mrs. F. H. Burdick, first vice president and finance chairman of the Congress, entertained members of the executive board and the finance committee at her home, in Heberton avenue, last Saturday.

B.P.W. Party Will Attend Convention

MEMBERS of the Pittsburgh Business and Professional Women's Club who will leave Friday morning for the national B. P. W. convention, which is to be held next week in Mackinac, are Miss Marie Maloney and Miss Esther Katten, the delegates, and Miss Elizabeth Sturgeon, Miss Jewel Foley, Miss Margaret Farrell, Miss Leah Coleman, Miss Margaret Schwalm, Mrs. Minnie Oakes and Miss Ella King Vogel. The Pittsburgh delegation will join the president's special at Erie. On board will be representatives from the New England States, New York, New Jersey and Delaware, the national president, Mrs. Lena Madesin Phillips, and the various state presidents, who will form her guard of honor. In Erie the representatives from the 37 Pennsylvania clubs will entertain those aboard the special during the afternoon. The special will reach Cleveland at 7 o'clock that evening and will remain there until midnight, the Ohio Federation in the meantime entertaining with a banquet, for which Judge Florence Allen is a member of the committee. A breakfast, luncheon and drive will be given in Detroit, where the special will stop from 8 o'clock Saturday morning until 6 that evening.

South Hills Women Plan Rummage Sale

A RUMMAGE sale will be held Friday, July 26, by the South Hills Woman's Club at the South Side Y. M. C. A., Twenty-ninth and Sarah streets. The club had its last business meeting Monday evening in the Bane School. Reports from the various standing committees showed progress during the year. Mrs. Mayme James is in charge of the picnic which the club will have July 16 in McKinley Park. The closing event of the current season will be the annual luncheon in honor of the retiring president, Mrs. Mayme Evans, and the other officers and to welcome the incoming officers, who are headed by Mrs. LaRule Lane. This will be held August 8 at the Congress of Clubs.

Special Swimming Courses at Y. W.

TWO special courses in swimming will be held at Central Branch, Young Women's Christian Association, this summer, the first July 1 to 24, and the second, August 5 to 28. By meeting on Monday and Wednesday evenings, an intensive course is provided for beginners and intermediates. Appointments for outdoor tennis may be made at any time. Because a medical examination by the staff physician is required of all persons entering any activity, it is requested that registrations be made in advance.

Cotillion Club To Hold Bridge

THE Carrick Cotillion Club has set Saturday, July 6, as the date for its annual bridge and "500" party at the Southern Country Club, Claus avenue, Carrick. The committee in charge, headed by Miss Grace Bleichner, includes Miss Luella Doyle, Miss Florence Drost, Miss Florence Graser, Miss Margaret Halligan, Miss Carolyn Schumaker and Miss Bernadette Stewart.

Luncheon Closes Travellers' Year

THE Travellers closed their year Friday with a luncheon in the Garden Tea Room, Liberty and Center avenues, Mrs. G. A. Wallace, chairman for the event, was assisted by Mrs. R. W. Berberich, Mrs. William M. Justice, Mrs. Edmond Englert, Mrs. W. H. Francies and Mrs. J. F. Ray. Mrs. J. C. Schreiner, the new president, was introduced by her predecessor, Mrs. Albert Wehner.

Two Boards To Meet in Curtis Home

MRS. JOHN P. GETTMAN, Mrs. Rollins A. Haddock, Jr., Mrs. T. H. Ream, Mrs. M. A. Kretzschmar, Mrs. L. O. English, Mrs. Ray Tinsley, Mrs. E. B. Kunselman. Mrs. W. H. Wood, Mrs. P. Z. Dienbacher, Mrs. John Fisher and Mrs. William Sturgeon, directors for the Curtis Home for Destitute Women and Children, are sponsoring a picnic supper for the children of the home on the grounds at 1136 Western avenue, North Side, Tuesday. Supper will be followed by a joint meeting of the board of directors and the advisory board. The executive board will meet at 2 o'clock in the afternoon for its mid-summer meeting. Mrs. Gettman, who is spending the summer in her cottage at Ridgeview, and Mrs. Haddock, who is at her Chautauqua cottage, will return for the meeting.

Wilkinsburg Civic Club Plans Year

AMONG the features scheduled for next season by the Woman's Civic Club of Wilkinsburg are president's day, October 10; an address by Mrs. Mary Thompson, president of the Westmoreland Federation of Clubs; the annual card party; a talk by Mrs. J. Andrew Gettig, former president of the Braddock Woman's Club; a Christmas program; a reception for new members; community day with Mrs. J. G. Chalfant, president of the Allegheny County Federation, as the speaker; a playlet; a talk on "What Constitutes Good Citizenship," by Mrs. Frank Thompson; the annual business meeting and the annual outing.

Pittsburgh Women To See Unveiling

MRS. ROBERT F. METCALFE, a former president, is a chairman of a committee from the Pittsburgh Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, appointed to attend the unveiling of the North Carolina state monument on Gettysburg battlefield, July 3, and the dedication of a memorial on July 2 to two Confederate soldiers killed in a skirmish near McConnellsburg, Pa. The Pittsburgh delegates will be the guests of the North Carolina division and the Elliott Graves chapter, Richmond, Va., United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Girls' Club Plans Party for July 4

A LARGE number of reservations have been made at Pittsburgh Girls' Club hearquarters in the Bessemer Building for the over-the-Fourth party which the club will have at its summer camp, Sandy Lake, at Stoneboro, Pa. A chartered bus will carry the girls to camp, returning the evening of the Fourth.

Blind Going On Boat Trip Wednesday

SEVERAL hundred blind persons are eagerly anticipating the excursion on the Homer Smith which the Social Service Committee of the Pennsylvania Association for the Blind has arranged for Wednesday. Games of various kinds, including cards, together with dancing, refreshments, luncheon and supper wil be provided for the sightless guests. Mrs. Moses Ruslander is general chairman. Under her will serve the reception committee composed of Mrs. Agnes Bongartz, Mrs. F. C. Smith, Mrs. Anna Amberson, Miss Ethlyn R. Harris, Miss Lyde Kerr Wilson, Mrs. Mary E. Mulhattan, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Latimer, Mrs. J. W. Briggs, Mrs. Etta M. Kelly and Miss Eliza Moore. Mrs. David Stuhlfire, Boy Scouts from Troop 3, Crafton, with Miss Stella Reel, Miss Mary Kane and Mrs. George C. Evans will have charge of the ice cream and pop; Mrs. Rose Weiss, Miss Mary Stone, Miss Pearl Thompson and Guy H. Nickeson are looking after tickets; Mrs. Joseph Brooks is chairman of the coffee committee; Mrs. James E. Bay and Mrs. Flora Griffith will have charge of the check room, and Mrs. J. W. Briggs, Mrs. Fred Ruslander, Mrs. Joseph Brooks and Mrs. F. C. Smith comprise the purchasing committee.

Mrs. Earhart Leaves for Trip Abroad

IT seems a most fitting climax to her administration as president of the Tuesday Musical Club that Mrs. Will Earhart should be having her first European trip. She, Dr. Earhart, their son, William, and Oscar Demmler sailed yesterday from Montreal, to be gone until September 1. Their European traveling will be done by motor and in Munich they will meet Dr. and Mrs. Charles Heinroth (the latter also a Tuesday Musical member) and all will be together there for a season of opera. Mrs. F. F. Rohrer, Mrs. Earhart's predecessor as president, gave a delightfully informal porch party in her honor on Tuesday. Mrs. Earhart outlined her itinerary, Mrs. James Stephen Martin told something of the annual convention held earlier in the month by the National Federation of Music Clubs and Miss Virginia Kendrick, voice prize winner at the convention, sang some of the numbers which she had used in the contest.

GRADUATE

MISS DOROTHY NELSON, daughter of Mrs. W. J. Nelson, of Wood street, Wilkinsburg, was graduated this month from the Ellis School.

Round Table Year Books Distributed

ONE of the earliest year books to be issued for next season is that of the Bellevue Round Table, distribution of the new books having been made at the present season's closing meeting. Programs on the drama, waterways, coal, life-saving, flying, poetry, fiction and other topics have been prepared for the entertainment and edification of the women, many of the papers to be given by the members and others by guest speakers. Among the latter are scheduled Elmer Kenyon, Mrs. M. M. Redenbaugh and Mrs. Ross E. Taggart. President's day, the opening of the season, is set for September 24.

PATRICIA PITT'S COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH SOCIETY

the summer place of the Thomas H. Eddys has been opened for the children, Dorothea and Jean. Mr. and Mrs. Eddy will be there within a short time, I believe. Mrs. Wallace H. Rowe is returning to the Hill this summer after an absence of several years, and has leased Wetumanetu cottage. And as I told you before, the William Christopher Robinsons will be at East Dunes cottage. Mrs. William Frew and Dr. and Mrs. William J. Holland will be season guests at Ocean House.

Mountains Lure Many

THE mountains are luring folks away from their city homes, too. Mrs. Alfred E. Hunt, of Amberson place, motored to Whitefield, in the White Mountains, N. H., and has opened her summer place. And the Daniel E. Clemsons, of Fifth avenue, who have spent the summer at Bretton Woods for many years, are expected there again shortly after the opening of the Mt. Washington on Wednesday. Many local boys and girls are at the summer camps scattered through the White Mountains, and a majority of the parents spend all or part of the summer at the resorts nearby.

Sewickley Dog Show

THE over-crowded week just gone came to a close yesterday with the dog show. From 10 o'clock in the morning until 6 o'clock in the evening, the dogs were on exhibition in the horse show ring of the Allegheny Country Club, and they were the object of keenest interest among the dog fanciers of the Sewickley Valley and Pittsburgh.

The Sewickley Kennel Club was in charge of the show, you know, and the proceeds are to be turned over to the social service department of the Allegheny General Hospital. During the day there was a sale of candy at a booth which Mary Elizabeth Floyd, one of this season's debutantes, conducted. Mary Elizabeth was helped by two of her sister buds, Dorothy Jarvis and Margaret Thompson.

At about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, there was an exhibit of police dogs which attracted a great many of the visitors. In charge of this exhibit were Mary Robinson, another of the season's debutantes, and daughter of Mrs. William C. Robinson, president of the Kennel Club. Mary had as her aides Margaret and Anne Rose, who made their debut on Friday, and Margaret Holdship and Virginia Willock, debutantes of the past winter.

Dance for "Buds"

THERE was a debutante party last night, with Mrs. DeWitt B. Nettleton, of Sewickley, as hostess. Mrs. Nettleton entertained with a dinner dance in the Allegheny Country Club and she had as her guests of honor Margaret and Anne Rose, debutante daughters of the Don Roses, of Sewickley. A profusion of summer flowers were used in decorating the clubhouse and to adorn the dinner tables.

Margaret and Anne made their bow to society on Friday at a tea dance given by their parents at their home in Bank street, Sewickley. Garden flowers formed an effective background for the affair and the two girls made charming pictures in their light frocks. After the tea dance, Mr. and Mrs. Rose entertained at dinner in the Allegheny Country Club, with the debutantes and an equal number of men as their guests. Dancing followed the dinner.

Johnston Debut

ON Thursday, Frances Johnston made her debut. Her father and mother, the Norwood Johnstons, of Shady avenue, gave a tea dance in the Longue Vue Country Club, and after the dance, they were hosts at a small buffet supper in their home.

For her coming-out party, Frances wore a frock of eggshell chiffon made with a tight bodice and a full, three-tiered skirt, and a jade green horsehair braid hat. Receiving with her, of course, were her parents, and also her sister, Mrs. S. Davidson Herron, of Philadelphia. The line stood in the club drawing room, before a background of ferns and palms, together with the gift bouquets.

Tea was served on the terraces, at small tables placed under bright-hued umbrellas. There was also a tea table in the dining room, decorated with pink and yellow roses and blue delphinium.

"Debbie" Luncheon

THE first event of debutante nature of the week was the luncheon Mrs. Frederick W. Edmondson, of South Negley avenue, gave Monday afternoon in the Longue Vue Country Club honoring her debutante daughter, Martha, and Martha's house guest, Mary James, of Hamlet, N. C. Both girls were graduated from the Spence School earlier in the month. There were about 45 guests, including debutantes of the season and sub-debs. At a tea in November, Martha will make her formal debut to the social world, I've mentioned before.

Debutante Dance

ON the same evening Mrs. Remsen V. Messler gave a dinner dance in the Pittsburgh Golf Club for her debutante niece, Anne Douglas Stewart, daughter of Mrs. Douglas Stewart, of Solway street. The 150 guests were seated at long tables, decorated with spring flowers and lighted with green tapers.

The hostess wore heliotrope chiffon and Anne, apple green lace.

Mrs. Oliver Gives Dance

AND one of the outstanding events of this important week was a dinner dance Mrs. James B. Oliver, of Shields, gave for her two granddaughters, Caroline Crittenden, debutante daughter of the W. J. Crittendens, of Sewickley, and Maria Dusmet, daughter of the Marchese and Marchesa Dusmet de Smours, of Rome, Italy, on Tuesday night in the Allegheny Country Club.

Makes Bow at Tea

THE next day, Wednesday, Katherine Collin, daughter of the junior William Welch Collins, of Sewickley, made her bow at a tea dance in the Allegheny Country Club, the scene of many a distinctive social entertainment in the exclusive Sewickley Valley. Katherine's father and mother received with her, and so did Jassamin Goddard, of New York, her house guest.

The debutante was charming in eggshell lace and a picture hat of horsehair braid in the same shade, and her mother wore jade green chiffon with a hat to match. The youthful New York visitor was in beige chiffon and wore a hat to match.

And I might mention that the clubhouse was decorated with yellow Pernet roses and snapdragon and delphinium.

A dinner in the club honoring the debutante of the day followed with the James Cullums and their debutante daughter, Mollie, as hosts. And still another event followed, honoring Katherine—a dance the William Ayers Galbraiths gave. For the dinner and dance Katherine wore white chiffon, made with a full skirt with a longer-in-back hem-line, and she carried orchids.

Cotillion Dec. 17

AS a climax to the social season for the debutantes comes the Pittsburgh Club cotillion, and the date chosen is December 17. Naturally, it will be be given in the club, and the committee in charge consists of James Verner Scaife, Jr., Richard King Mellon, Moorhead Holland, John H. Ricketson III, and William Christopher Robinson, Jr.

There are always several affairs preceding the cotillion, but next winter there will be no less than a debut dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Howard Salisbury Evans, of Beechwood boulevard, have taken that date for a dinner to be given in their home for their daughter, Laura. The guests will include all the debutantes of the season and an equal number of men.

Dance Dates Set

BALL dates play an important part in our news for the coming season. Among the dances given for buds will be a dinner dance Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Fickes, of Woodland road, will give for their debutante daughter Harriet on December 27 in the University Club. And this event, by the way, precedes the ball the Thomas A. McGinleys will give in the Pittsburgh Club for their demutante daughter, Mary Elizabeth Floyd.

Harriet will make her debut, don't you remember, at a tea her mother and father will give in the family home November 2?

To Make Bow Dec. 18

OUR news these days seems to be decidedly "debutanteish" you've probably noticed. Most of our entertainment and plans for entertainments concern the debutante set. Another girl will come out this fall, we've just learned. Harold H. Robertson, of the Park Mansions, formerly of Sewickley, will present his daughter, Sylvia Burnett Robertson, at a ball on Wednesday, December 18, in the Pittsburgh Club.

Sylvia went to school down South—the Greenwood School in Baltimore, Md., and studied abroad last year with a girls' traveling school. Frances Forsyth, daughter of the James Magees, of Forbes street, a debutante, too, was in the same school, by the way. Sylvia has just been back about two weeks.

Nancy Miller Engaged

ONE of the announcements of interest made during the week was that of the engagement of Nancy Shaw Miller to Robert Upjohn Redpath, Jr. Nancy is a daughter of the William Booth Millers, of Sewickley you know, and her fiance is the son of Mrs. Redpath and the late Dr. Robert U. Redpath, of Maplewood, N. J.

Nancy is a graduate of Miss Madeira's School in Washington, D. C., and this June was graduated from Smith College. Mr. Redpath is a Yale man and he is a member of the 1925 class.

To Marry July 10

WEEK after next we're going to have a wed ng, probably the last wedding of interest in the social world, until fall. Harriet Agnes Patterson, daughter of the James Pattersons, of Beechwood boulevard, and Lowell Clement Noyes, son of Mrs. George Edward Noyes, of Evanston, Ill., will be married on Wednesday, July 10, at high noon in the home of Harriet's father and mother.

Ann Blakeley Watt will be the bride's only attendant, and George F. Noyes, brother of the bridegroom-elect, will be best man. There'll be two ushers, Allan S. Noyes, another brother of the bridegroom, and John G. Patterson II, Harriet's brother.

Miss Beegle Marries

DOROTHY LOUISE BEEGLE, daughter of the Harper K. Beegles, of "Harbeth Lawn," Gibsonia, became the bride of James McClain, son of Frederick McClain, of Gibsonia, Wednesday night at 7 o'clock in the home of the bride's father and mother. The Rev. George Rowland, of Coraopolis, was the officiant. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore white taffeta and tulle with her veil of tulle arranged with a cap of seed pearls. She carried white roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Mildred Alexander, of Reynoldsville, and Miss Louise King, of Pittsburgh, as bridesmaids, wore orchid and flesh tinted chiffon, and carried yellow roses and delphinium. Harper K. # 'Zealous Zelia' Hoffman, Ex-American, Loses in Election

U. S. Dollars Fail To Impress Rural British Voters

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER.

NEW YORK, June 29.

NOW that the English elections are over and Great Britain has a new prime minister, it is interesting to dig deep into the avalanche of opposition votes which swamped the Conservative party and discover that that expatriated American, Mrs. Charles Frederick Hoffman, former mistress of the handsome "Armsea Hall" at Newport and, incidentally, mother of Mrs. Aymar Johnson, of this city and East Islip, went down to an inglorious defeat.

"Zealous Zelia" Hoffman, who in the last three years has become more British than native-born Britishers, went to England a few years ago, used a number of her American dollars to lease a great establishment, became so intrigued by English politics she renounced her American citizenship, swore allegiance to his majesty King George V, and managed to have herself nominated for office from her rural district.

When the news that "Zealous Zelia" had followed in the footsteps of Nancy Astor and was making stump speeches in the countryside, Newport was greatly amused. For, at the Aquidneck Isle, "Zealous Zelia" always turned up her patrician nose at the local politicians, and the mere mention of politics was taboo at "Armsea Hall."

How "Zealous Zelia" has changed! And how poor old Garret Storm would turn in his last resting place could he but know that a part of his grocery millions were used to exploit, politically, in England, the widow of one of his descendants.

Duff-Cooper Loses

Another who went down to defeat in the English elections was Alfred Duff-Cooper, husband of that perennial English beauty, Lady Diana Manners.

Ever since their marriage, the daughter of the Dowager Duchess of Rutland has devoted her energies to pushing Alfred Duff-Cooper politically. She has appeared on the stage and in the films to obtain additional funds to carry on Duff-Cooper's career, and the many friends here in New York of Lady "Di" are extremely sad over Duff-Cooper's defeat.

The Hon. "Freddie" Guest, who married a daughter of the Henry Phippses, was still another to lose his place in the English elections, but I rather imagine his immensely wealthy wife and his Phipps in-laws in this country are not shedding any tears.

For now the Hon. "Freddie" will be in a position to spend more time on this side of the Atlantic—especially at Palm Beach, where the Guest Villa is one of the show-places of the ocean boulevard.

McLeans at Newport

Newport is agog over the arrival at "By-the-Sea," the former August Belmont villa on Bellevue avenue, of Mrs. Edward B. McLean.

Several years ago the McLeans purchased the fine old estate that was the pride and joy of "Augie" Belmont and then promptly forgot about the place. The lawns were kept up in magnificent style, the shutters removed from the villa and everything put in readiness to receive "Ned" and Evelyn. But not until the other day did Mrs. McLean and her children, "Ned" Junior, and Emily, land in Newport. Another son, John R. McLean, named for his illustrious grandfather, is due to arrive a few days hence from the Windy City, where he has been participating in a tennis tournament.

If Newport expects Mrs. McLean to take an active part in the summer frivolities I fear me Newport is doomed to disappointment. And those who will stand at attention, anxiously awaiting the moment when Evelyn will don for their especial benefit the famous Hope diamond, need not waste their time. It is doubtful if Mrs. McLean included the Hope diamond among the jewels she took with her to the Aquidneck Isle.

If ever there was a matron blessed with position and wealth who enjoys being left to her own devices, that woman is Evelyn McLean. At Palm Beach she eschews all large, formal parties and many of us suspect she will adopt the same procedure at Newport.

Which will intrigue Newport beyond words.

Difference in Bidding In American, Auction Bridge Games Explained

By ERNEST H. HEINRICHS,
Sun-Telegraph Bridge Expert.

MRS. A. W. W., of Mercer, Pa., who writes that she has followed the articles in American bridge in this column with considerable interest, is anxious to learn the difference in the "bidding" between that game and auction bridge, and as many similar requests have reached the writer from numerous other readers, the following facts may prove helpful:

1. While in auction bridge the player when bidding for the contract is satisfied to buy the contract as cheaply as he can, the player in American bridge, in conjunction with his partner, bids as high as the trick-taking value of the combined hands will permit. The reason for this is that, in American bridge, the two partners, who have bought the contract, are credited in the score for game with those tricks only which they bind themselves to make when they secure the contract.

For example: If a player in auction bridge has bid one no trump, and no one else overbids him, he scores not only for one no trump if he makes his contract, but he also scores for every additional trick he makes the same as if he had bid for them. In other words, if you bid one no trump in auction bridge and make three no trump, you score 30 points for tricks, and 125 points for game, besides whatever honors you may hold.

Must Earn Score

In American bridge, however, you score only for those tricks which you have bid and made according to your contract. That is to say, if you get the contract at one no trump, you score in the trick score towards game for one trick only, no matter how many more tricks you should make in excess of your bid. But, for each trick you make in excess of your bid you score in the bonus column 25 points for each additional trick above your contract. Therefore, if in American bridge you bid one no trump, and make, for example, two tricks above your contract, your score would be 10 points for the trick you bid and made, and 25 points for each extra trick, total 60 points.

To express it in another way: In American bridge the player can only score those points which he has actually earned by his skill and ability as a player.

2. It is this difference which makes American bridge the better game, because it widens the scope of bidding, makes the auction livelier and gives the entire contest more action, thrills, surprises and results. It greatly relieves the monotony which at present is one of the features of auction bridge.

3. In auction bridge, there is no incentive to bid high, if you can secure the contract cheaply, but in American bridge there is, on the contrary, every incentive, because a low bid results in a small score, and only a higher bid will give you a high score.

Bidding Lively

4. It will be easily undestood, therefore, that on this account bidding in American bridge may be carried on at a lively rate, first the original bidder making a bid, then his partner may raise him, and he in turn may be carried on until the contract is finally secured at the bid which, in the judgment of the partners, represents the highest trick-taking value of their combined hands.

5. Such possible situations will very often lead the bidders too far, which opens the opportunity for the opponents to double, and even lead them into a bid of their own, which eventually may obtain the contract.

6. It is this lively bidding process which assures constant activity during the auction and calls for alertness, skill and ability, which characterizes the superiority of American bridge over the older game.

7. Honor cards have no scoring value in American bridge. This is a very significant feature of progress in the new game, because it makes the contest fairer and obviates the time-wasting discussions and controversies, after the hand has been played, as to who held the honors and how many each side held.

8. In American bridge only one side—the winners—score at the conclusion of each deal played. This makes for greater simplicity in keeping score, and in this respect American bridge is superior to all other forms of bridge.

Difference in Bids

The following deal, which the writer watched recently being played at American bridge, illustrates in a measure the difference in bidding at American and auction bridge.

In auction bridge, South, being the dealer, score love all, would open the bidding with one spade. West, with his seven-card heart suit, topped by K, Q, J, would bid two hearts, which North would overcall with two spades. This would close the auction and South would play the hand at two spades, making a grand slam for a score of 80 for honors, 100 for grand slam and 56 for tricks, total 236.

In American bridge, South, recognizing slam possibilities in his hand and knowing that he cannot score for a slam unless bid in his contract and actually made, would open the bidding with two spades, as an indication to his partner that his hand has not only possibilities for game, but even better. After West has stuck in his defensive bid at three hearts, North at once bids four spades. Had he bid three spades only, South would have gone to four, and the bidding might have ended there. But when North jumped West's three hearts to four spades, instead of three, he informed his partner not only that he had hearts stopped, but that he was extremely strong besides. With this information, South bid for a grand slam at spades, which was made, the score being 100 for grand slam and 56 for tricks, total 136, as in American bridge honor cards have no value in the score.

West opens the lead with the king of hearts.

Bridge Brevities

A copy of the second edition of American Bridge with its simplified system of scoring may be obtained by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to the Bridge Editor of the Sun-Telegraph.

Devotees of Contract Bridge will be interested in the fact that E. V. Shepard, the world-wide known authority on scientific bridge, has written a book called "Correct Contract Bridge." Shepard's system on bidding is characterized by a directness and simplicity that is easily comprehended and quickly acquired.

At the mid-summer tournament of the American Bridge League, which was held in Chicago recently, the board of directors decided to hold the third annual congress of the league at the Congress Hotel in Chicago from November 20 to November 23.

No matter what kind of bridge you play, whether it is auction, American or contract bridge, be sure to learn the rules. Without a thorough knowledge of that part of the game, bridge loses much of its interest and also considerable of its fascination.

It is remarkable how many players fail to observe the rule that before the dealer begins to distribute the cards, his opponent on the left should shuffle the deck, then place it face down before the dealer, who in turn places the deck before opponent on the right. The latter cuts the cards by lifting part of the deck from the top and placing it in front of the dealer, who takes the lower portion, deposits it upon the portion of the deck before him and begins the deal at his left.

Here is another rule which apparently puzzles many players. South, the dealer, opens the bidding with one spade. West bids two diamonds, North passes, East passes, South bids two hearts, West passes, North bids two spares and all pass. In this case, South has to play the spade contract, even though he bid hearts on the second round, because he was the original spade bidder, and the contract, when the auction is decided at a spade bid, goes to him and not to North, although the latter made the last and highest bid in spades.

MADELON'S MIRROR OF FEMININE FANCY

IT SEEMS to me beauty salons spring up over night, like mushrooms. Many of them are conducted on the order of a highly efficient factory, permanent waves and facials being turned out with machine-like swiftness. Refreshingly different and in striking contrast to "factory" beauty salons is the Graham Hair Shop, presided over by Mrs. Nancy Bryson. The shop is rather small, tucked away on a side corridor, 222 Jenkins Arcade—but when one steps into the charming little reception room, she senses the lack of rush and hurry, and instinctively relaxes. Perhaps it is because Mrs. Bryson herself is such a gracious and charming personality. She makes it a point to personally greet her patrons—one feels she is a guest whose visit will be enjoyed, rather than just another customer to be served and gotten rid of as quickly as possible. One can relax and enjoy the rites of beauty in such an atmosphere.

. . . Gilbert's—Furniture

TOMORROW will mark the opening of a place of interest to those who appreciate and want beauty in their homes. It is known as Gilbert's Fine Furniture, located at 632 Smithfield Street. If you seek the truly unusual in furniture, you'll be delighted with this shop. Among the authentic reproductions of fine period furniture are many real antiques that are priceless. Although every piece of furniture in the shop is distinctive, the prices are not exorbitant. Perhaps the most interesting department is the Oriental Rug Department, presided over by Mlle. Marie Youssoupoff, a rug connoisseur, who has spent many years in all parts of the Orient. They have a most beautiful line of Oriental rugs, and Mr. Gilbert's arrangement of buying direct from the looms eliminates all middlemen's profits, thus enabling him to offer valuable rugs at a much lower price than other Oriental rug buyers.

. . . A Cool Wave

THE Graham Hair Shop, 222 Jenkins Arcade, gives the perfect hot weather permanent—the Frigidine. The name itself implies coolness—and what an inducement that is during these boiling days. No heat can reach the scalp or radiate against the face; it is retained within the non-metallic heater. Not only does the Frigidine method of permanent waving insure comfort, but it creates a more beautiful natural wave. The heat is never sufficient to injure the hair, the curls are never exposed to dry heat, and it really improves the condition of the hair, adding new life and lustre. Rest assured if you go to the Graham Shop for your wave, it will be as nearly perfect as it is possible for a permanent to be, for if your hair is not in good condition, they will refuse to give you a wave until it has been restored to normal.

. . . Brother and Sister

CUTE and cool and comfortable—boldly brief and really quite bare—for suntan is healthy as well as fashionable—just enough clothes to be respectable, yet utterly adorable—that's the way the Jay Kiddie Shoppe outfits its Summer babies. Of course you know it is quite ultra to dress brothers and sisters alike, and the Jay Kiddie Shoppe has some perfectly adorable sets, in dimities, swisses, organdies, broadcloths and prints. The little dress and suit sketched above, in checked gingham, are darling. Then there are woolly sweaters to pull on over bare arms, brief bathing suits with beach coats to be worn over them. If you expect to do much traveling with the youngsters this summer, you'll be glad to know that the Jay Kiddie Shoppe—which is at 3007 Jenkins Arcade, Atlantic 5787—is selling all their Spring coats at one-fourth off. This is an opportunity to get perfectly stunning brother-and-sister coats in navy blues, tans, tweeds, with the hats and caps to match, at unusually reasonable prices.

. . . Perfection

I OBJECT to having Mrs. Lasner referred to as "the woman who makes corsets." (Mrs. Lasner, as you know, is the corsetier at 615 Clark Building who is being so commented on.) Rather I say she should be termed "the Miracle Woman who transforms figures." For without doubt what she does for women who have an abundance of flesh or who are ill-shaped as to hips or bust, smacks of the miraculous. The designing and fitting of a garment do not end her service—she refuses to be satisfied until her client is not only pleased, but enthusiastic, and until she herself feels she has achieved perfection. She refuses to accept a deposit—but insists that her customers first wear the completed garment and pronounce it satisfactory.

. . . "Mends-It"

WHAT is the saleslady saying to the other young lady? She is telling her if she had used "Mends-It" on that ugly runner when it was an infant in size she would have saved a perfectly good pair of hose. Miss Myrtle Bennett, at whose shop in the Jenkins Arcade I learned the story of "Mends-It," tells me that she has saved dozens of pairs of hose by simply applying a drop of this magic liquid around a drawn thread or incipient runner. Even large holes, such as are made from a supporter, can be kept from spreading by "Mends-It"—and it will not wash out. "Mends-It" comes in a small tube, at 50c—the price of having one runner mended at a hosiery repair place. If you'll send 50c to Miss Myrtle Bennett, 2202 Jenkins Arcade, she will send you a tube postpaid.

. . . Good Dispositions

UNCOMFORTABLE feet can do the most terrible things to one's disposition. Perfectly angelic ladies have been known to own to dark intentions of committing an ax murder on the next taxi driver who causes them to leap for a curbstone. There's nothing like a pair of Menihan Arch-aid shoes (sold by Ritter & Morrison, 501 Liberty Avenue), for brightening one's outlook on life. Menihan Arch-aid shoes are so constructed that the weak places in one's arches are correctly supported, and the soft light-weight kids simply cannot burn one's feet. Ritter & Morrison's have so many models in these good-looking, smartly-cut shoes, and they use such painstaking care in fitting one properly, that it is impossible to go out of their shop wearing a pair of Menihan Arch-aid shoes without wanting to do a furtive skip, just from pure foot joy.

. . . For Jaded Appetites

PERHAPS it is the wide expanses of the softly-lighted room, or the breeze one is always sure of getting from the many windows—but it seems to me even the ice water served at Reymers' Clark Building tea room tastes better than most places. Not only are the surroundings different, in that they are cool and restful, but the menus offered there are distinctive—not the usual heavy hot roasts and steaks (although one can have them if they like), but all sorts of delicious-sounding dishes for hot weather. The salads and frozen desserts are triumphs of ingenuity on the part of the clever cooks who try to tempt jaded appetites—cold cuts and sandwiches of unlimited variety are served, iced coffee and chocolate, punches, ices—everything possible to make eating a pleasure instead of a necessity, as it has seemed during these hot days.

. . . Tire Experience

IT ACTUALLY happened to me—just starting on a vacation tour, rolling merrily along at the rate of 50 miles an hour, 300 miles from home, and bang! A gorgeous blow-out! It came near being a real tragedy, for I had difficulty in keeping the car from rolling over an embankment—and it was a near-tragedy, because I had only as much money as I expected to need while away. We limped into the nearest garage, and by pooling resources, managed to buy a new tire. But that cured me—I'll never again plan a trip more than five miles out of the city, without having the car completely equipped with new tires—and from what I've heard about their service and safety qualities, I'll select General Dual Balloon "8s" at the tire shop of Campbell & Co., Bigelow at Bloomfield Bridge. I know several users who have gotten 40,000 miles on the General Dual "8s" and not even a puncture.

. . . Golden-Bronze

IT is bromidic to mention suntan any more—but I've learned a new angle on the suntan question. If you expect to go to the shore for your vacation, or anywhere that you'll be exposed to the sun constantly, be wise and take a few sun-baths at the Pittsburgh Natatorium before you give yourself over to the direct rays of Old Sol. These mild sun-baths will give you an even golden tan, without burning, and when you go on the beach or tennis courts in the real sun, you'll simply acquire a deeper even tan, without peeling or burning. And, remember, the Natatorium has the services of Miss Saville Struble, swimming instructress de luxe, if you want to learn to swim before vacationing. The huge pool at the Natatorium is emptied completely four times a week, and the pool scrubbed; and fresh water is constantly circulating all the time. Days set aside for women are Tuesdays, Thursdays, and they are permitted the pool Friday mornings also.

. . . Blonde or Brunette?

IT doesn't matter what color you hair is—a Professional "Hair-A-Gain" shampoo will give it the life, lustre and glints it had when you were eighteen. Was you hair gold—was it black as a raven's wing? A course of "Hair-A-Gain" shampoos at the Stanley Wardell Studios, 207 Clark Building (the only beauty shop that gives the real Professional shampoo), will restore grey or faded hair to its original color, give it lovely lights and glintings of bronze or gold, and make it as soft as the finest silk. Then, and then only, is your hair ready to take a beautiful permanent wave. The Stanley Wardell Studios give very lovely permanent waves—it would naturally be expected that specialists in the care of hair and scalp would be equipped to give the kind of permanent wave one dreams of but very seldom gets.

. . . Birthdays

THERE are a number of important birthdays in July—among them mine and the Parisian Bootery Shops'. (It doesn't matter how many years I've been around.) The Parisian Bootery Shops quite proudly celebrate their Fifth Anniversary, beginning tomorrow, by offering the shoes at the Hotel Roosevelt shop for $5.85 and $6.85. I shall joyously celebrate by purchasing a pair of those blue kid pumps I told you about some time ago; and a pair of black patent and gray kid combination strap shoes. They are both slenderized lasts, but you know, of course, that the Hotel Roosevelt shop carries the popular short vamps also, in pastel colored kids, shantungs, white kids, suntan kids, Deauville sandals, black patent and water snake combinations, etc. Your shopping experience has taught you that the Parisian Bootery Shops' shoes are always distinctive—and where else in the city will you find such values?

. . . Growing

J. C. CONNOLLY, the furrier at 207 Fifth Ave., is enlarging his shop, adding to the reception rooms and installing his repair department next door. Speaks well for the growth of Mr. Connolly's business, don't you think? Parodying the old saying that "Murder will out," a reputation for carrying quality merchandise in the city will become widespread. Mr. Connolly has some of the most beautiful fox scarves I've ever seen—even those who know very little about furs would have no difficulty in seeing that they are unusually beautiful. Yet his prices, when compared with the other fur shops for merchandise of a like quality, are unusual. And one likes to buy anything so valuable as a fur scarf or coat at a shop whose reputation is based on sincerity and good values.

. . . Vacation Tour

THERE probably is not a more delightful trip to be had anywhere than the two weeks' "Tour-Adventure" with Cosmopolitan, through the grandeur of the Canadian Rockies and the Yellowstone Park. Full information about this vacation tour can be had through the Union Savings Bank, in the Frick Building. You travel on the finest of special trains, go sightseeing in luxurious automobiles, stop at the best hotels—and for a minimum of cost. Many forms of entertainment are provided on the special trains—dull moments never come. You are on a pleasure trip with enjoyable companions, you have only to relax and enjoy the entertainment provided. If you want two weeks free from care, crowded full of pleasure and interest, get in touch with Mr. John Miller, in the Travel Department of the Union Savings Bank.

. . . The Lincoln

THE woman who drives a Lincoln car is instinctively regarded as possessing a flair for the "correct" things. When you see a Lincoln gliding along the avenue, you know the owner is a connoisseur of motor cars—and what woman doesn't get a huge thrill out of knowing that she is envied her possessions? It has a quality which sets it apart—a quality not easy to define, but you sense it. The luxury in a Lincoln is felt—not flaunted—because it is built into it, instead of on the surface. As a result, it never wears off. The Lincoln shares the quality of all fine things—it grows old gracefully—and it is in vogue, no matter what the passing fashion. I was looking at the late models at the Lowe Motor Company, 5124 Liberty Avenue, recently. If I were to be given my choice of a Lincoln car—any model—and a whole roomful of lovely clothes—I'd take the Lincoln.

. . . Master Waver

WHY not have your permanent wave done by a master waver—a man whose inventive genius in the realm of hair dressing has won him many gold medals? M. Lichti, of the Maison Frederic, has been especially successful in waving hair that has been dyed or broken and burned by unskilled treatment. His permanents given over gray hair are masterpieces of skill and artistry—the hair is left a beautiful soft bluish white, no discoloration or yellowing. One of the latest triumphs of the Maison Frederic (207 Fifth Avenue) is the Croquignole wave—a permanent wave which falls in large wide waves close to the head, the ends curling in a natural manner, the short hair over the ears and around the forehead growing in soft little tendrils. It is hard to tell it from naturally curly hair.

. . . For Motorists

THE McClements Company, 535 Wood Street, really deserve a vote of thanks from harassed shoppers who are looking for little gifts, remembrances for particular occasions, tokens of appreciation for their hostess. Their clever arrangements of fruits, candies, flowers, gift baskets, etc., are famous over the city. This week they are featuring a Travel Box—built specially to fit nicely on the floor of an automobile without taking up much space, filled with an assortment of fruits, crackers, cheeses, olives, pickles, candies, grape juice, ginger ale, etc. Certainly an unusual gift for friends who are traveling by automobile, or for one's own motor vacation. Boxes can be packed by the McClements Company for $5.00 and up.

Millions Spent to Educate Youths in Schools Here

NEW TEACHERS AND BUILDINGS AID PROGRAMS

Second Women's College Founded at Mt. Mercy; P. C. W. Opens Drive.

Bidding fair to become the focal point of learning in the nation with a dozen great universities, half that many women's colleges and scores of secondary institutions of learning for both men and women, Western Pennsylvania is laying plans for the 1929-30 school year with expenditures of millions of dollars in physical improvements. And added to that the time and effort of its leaders in educational and industrial life are being given to make the standards for instruction second to none in the world.

Already the giant skeleton that in a few years will be the Cathedral of Learning of the University of Pittsburgh, has reared its steel ribs to the sky. More than 20 stories of steel are already up, and the remainder will be in place by fall, its engineers predict.

CARNEGIE TECH

Carnegie Institute of Technology, holding down its enrollment, continues to attract to its chambers of learning leading professors in the sciences, engineering, industries and art. Its little theater, where experimental plays furnish its dramatic and writing students unbounded opportunities for practical theater work, continues to draw from gay Broadway noted playwrights and producers to watch and criticize and take part in untested productions. With new printing departments, Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of the schools, has asked a number of new instructors to the school, including visiting specialists from other universities.

Duquesne U., the fast-growing school on the Bluff, is also expanding, its enrollment mounting with both men and women students. The policy of accepting women students, inaugurated two years ago, has been successful, according to Dr. M. A. Hehir, president.

Pennsylvania College for Women is spending $500,000 on new buildings and plans to raise $250,000 more. A chapel and four lecture halls are going up. Miss Cora Helen Coolidge, president, announced that despite the enlargement of physical properties, the school enrollment will remain limited.

NEW COLLEGE

An innovation in school circles was announced with the change of policy at Mt. Mercy Academy. Beginning next September, this institution becomes a college, adding another major school to the list of the district. The Fifth avenue school will hereafter be known as Mt. Mercy College, and will offer instruction to women from the early graduates until they obtain degrees.

With Grove City planning a beautification campaign in an already beautiful institution, and with many other schools of the district offering new courses, new equipment, new staffmen and women to their faculties, indications are that nearly 5,000 young men and women will be in attendance in the major schools of the section in next September. Pitt last year had nearly 15,000, Duquesne 3,500, Carnegie Tech 2,500 day students and nearly as many night, and other institutions graduating downward.

Wickersham School Oldest Here, Claim

The Wickersham School of Music is presenting to the public the solution of the great problem of how to acquire a musical education. It has a large faculty of graduate teachers, its course is thorough and upon satisfactory completion of the requirements of the school a diploma is given. The fine leadership and friendly atmosphere stimulates the student to a fearless enthusiasm and happy preparation of lessons.

Under the guidance of a competent teacher, the harmony and composition classes are given much freedom to encourage artistic imagination and individual interpretation, two years of this work is required before graduation. The W. S. M. is the oldest musical institution in Pittsburgh, established over 25 years.

The school puts out no catalogue, but will furnish all information and gladly advise and co-operate with anyone contemplating the study of music.

Knotts Music School Opens September 3

The studio of Richard Knotts, in the Wabash Building, will open September 3 for the 1929-30 season. Mr. Knotts, a singer instructor and conductor, has appeared in concert in New York, Chicago and many other cities.

He began his life work at an early age here, later going to Europe to study with the famous master, Sbriglia. Since coming to Pittsburgh he has been baritone soloist and choir director of the Smithfield Methodist Episcopal Church, as well as director of four other churches in the city. In the school of music wi-h he conducts in the Wabash Building, students are prepared for church, oratorio and opera singing. He presents his pupils in concert and recital several times during each season.

Mr. Knotts has for an assistant and accompanist Homer C. Wickline, Jr., organist and pianist. Mr. Wickline is well known for his radio and concert appearances and is the organist and choir director of the Central Christian Church.

Rosa Raisa Will Open Concerts Next Fall; Book Spanish Dancer

Rosa Raisa, leading soprano of the Chicago Grand Opera, will be heard in recital in Pittsburgh, opening the Beegle concerts at Syria Mosque on Monday evening, October 21. The second concert in this series of eight to be given at Syria Mosque will be given by Giovanni Martinelli, the celebrated Italian tenor, Friday, November 8. La Argentina, Spain's greatest dancer, will be a Thanksgiving night attraction, Thursday, November 28.

A novel attraction of outstanding importance is the Boston Women's Orchestra, with Ethel Leginska as conductor and piano soloist. Tuesday evening, December 10. Jascha Heifetz will return on Tuesday evening, January 14. Sigrid Onegin, the contralto, Monday evening, February 17. Lawrence Tibbett, the leading baritone of the Metropolitan Grand Opera, March 21; Rosa Ponselle, will close the list of attractions for Pittsburgh, on Monday evening, April 7.

DUFF BEGAN SCHOOL HERE

Business is today scientized almost on a par with the professions. Fifty years ago, young men finishing their academic education, plunged into business without specialized training and served what might be termed an apprenticeship to business. All of this has been changed, and now training for business leadership is an accepted educational process. Today our youth train for business careers as definitely as the professional man trains for his profession.

How did this start? An American business pioneer had the vision to see his country become business-minded. The twentieth century proved his forecast. Peter Duff, the business man, started a mercantile college, wrote a bookkeeping textbook and thus gave to Pittsburgh the destination of starting business education.

From this seedling has grown our great system of commercial education in the high school, college and university. Outstanding in the field of business education and training is the private business school. High type schools of business administration enjoy a large clientele, which, unbiased educators and successful business men prophesy, will continue because of the directness with which private enterprise can conduct its affairs.

Duff's Mercantile College, starting in 1839, afterwards known as Duff's College and now merged with the Iron City College and the Martin Shorthand School under the corporate name of Duffs-Iron City College, gives to Pittsburgh an institution of national recognition. It began 90 years ago and has given to business over 100,000 men and women business trained. "Virtute et opere" was made the school's motto almost a century ago, and the constantly increasing patronage is evidence of the fulfillment of this precept in both spirit and practice up to the present day.

Reese Plans Summer Classes for Voice

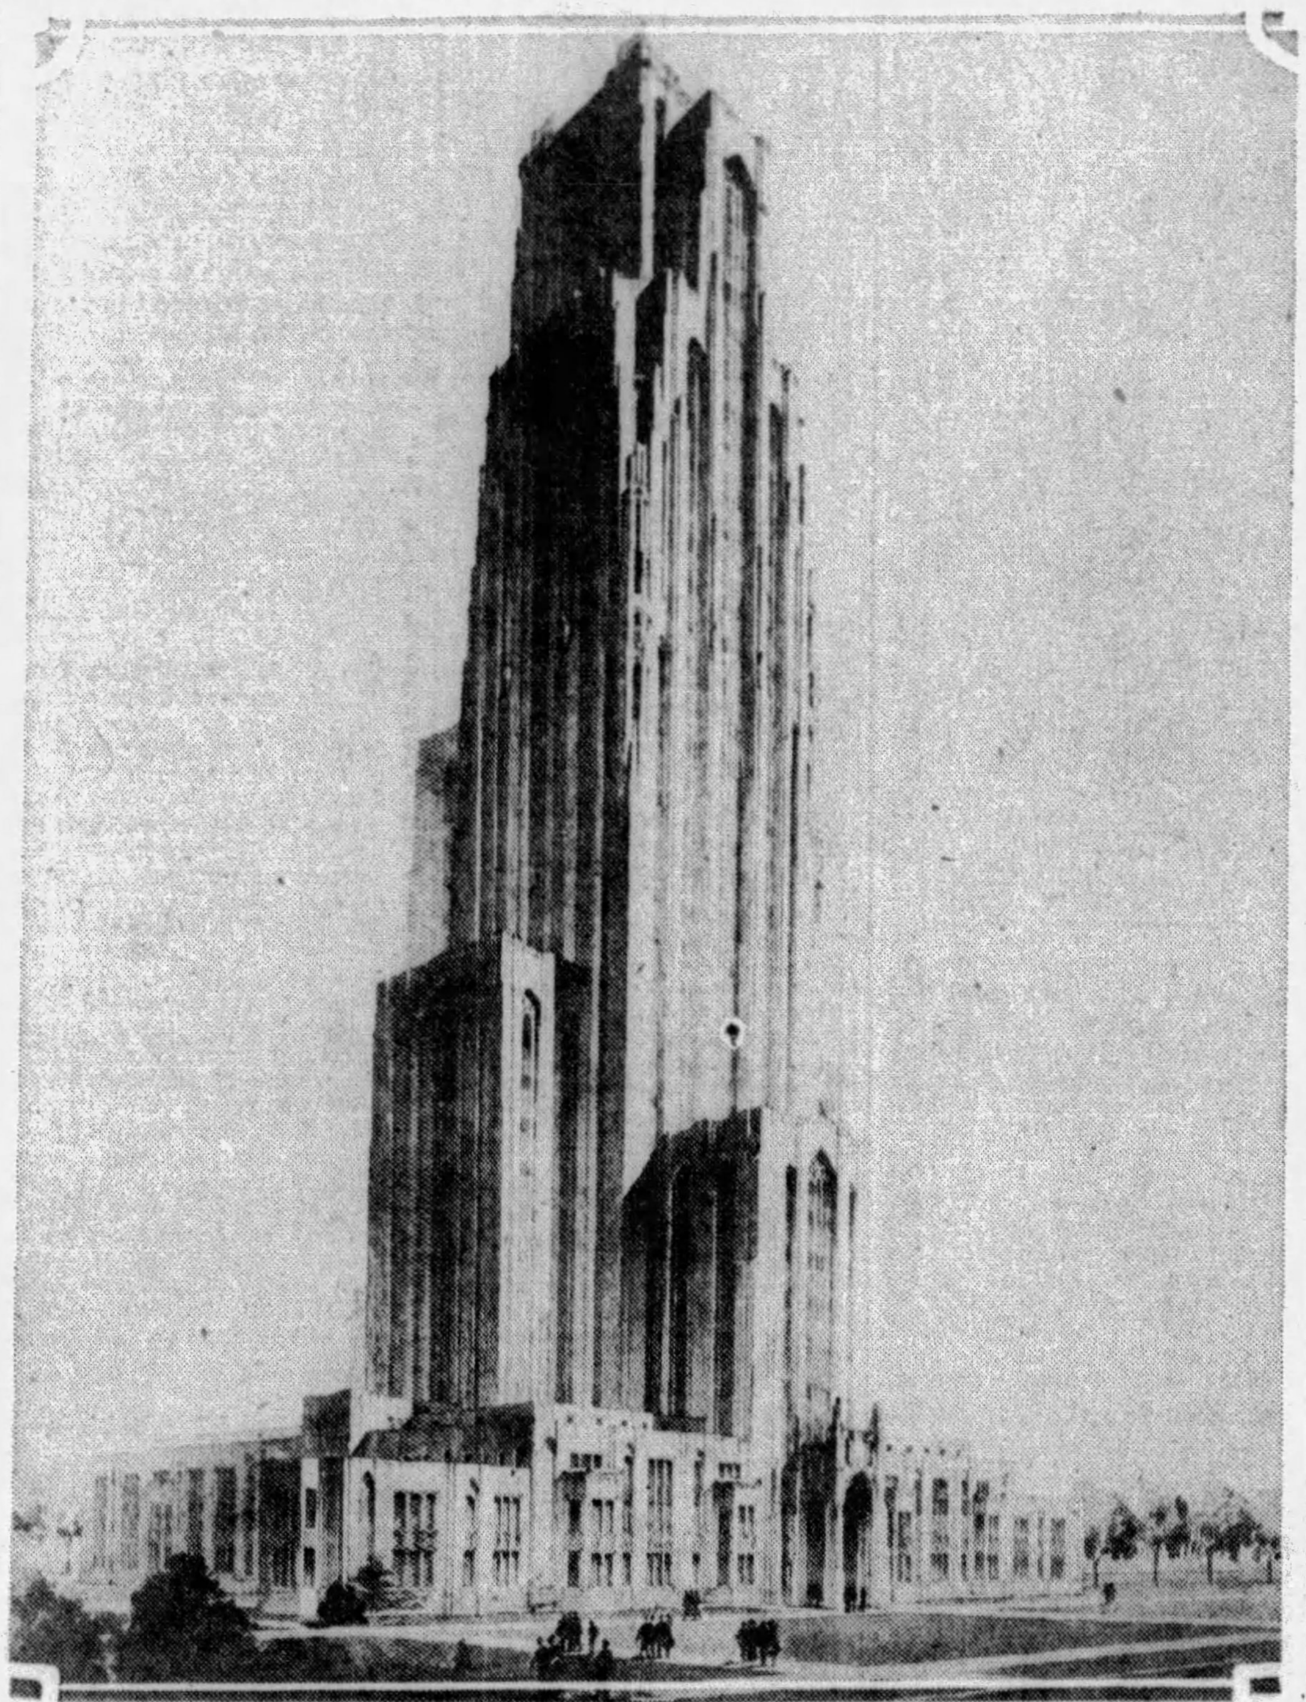
Reese R. Reese, concert baritone and teacher of singing, is an out and out Welshman. He was born of Welsh parentage in Ferndale, Glanmorganshire, South Wales. Mr. Reese has sung in the churches of Pittsburgh for 15 years, holding only the prominent positions in that field. He is at present member of the quartet choir of Christ Methodist Episcopal Church, always known for its splendid organization of prominent singers and director. He was trained and toured Europe in concert. During this European visit he tourned Italy with Madeleine Keltie, well known operatic soprano of both Nice and Paris. On this tour they also had important concert appearances at Monte Carlo, in Cannes and in Nice.

Mr. Reese will accept a number of earnest students. Spmmer course now on up to August 15. Fall season, beginning September 4. Many of Mr. Reese's students are now occupying prominent church positions in the city of Pittsburgh, Johnstown, Youngstown and Monongahela City.

LEADER

DIRECTS— When the Boston Symphony opens the orchestra season here in Syria Mosque, November 1, Serge Koussevitzky will be its conductor. He has aided that organization to expand its popularity and repute.

PITT CATHEDRAL GOING UP



LEARNING—Now beyond the twentieth story, the steel of the University of Pittsburgh's Cathedral of Learning is fast shooting skyward, and indicates that the new structure will be ready on scheduled time—somewhere in 1930 or soon after. The skeleton, now like a suspended cobweb, will look like the above when completed.

NEW COURSES AT THURSTON

Thurston Preparatory school, it is planned, will add two new courses to its curriculum, secretrial and domestic scince.

Commencement exercises were held June 5 in Calvary Episcopal churh. The Rev. Edwin J. van Etten gave the address and the Rt. Rev. Alexander Mann presented the diplomas to the 21 graduates. After the exercises there was a reception at the school, 250 Shady avenue, Miss Alice M. Thurston and the graduates receiving.

Thurston has stood as a leading school in the training of young women and is known in other communities as an institution of high standing.

The faculty consists of women of experience and ability whose own education was received in different colleges and normal schools of the country, and who have also followed special courses of study in their own departments. The principal, Miss Thurston, keeps abreast of the scolastic thought of the time and is a member of a number of educational associations.

Miss Marie Antoinette Anderson, for many years head of the college preparatory department, has been appointed associate principal.

King School Broadens Curricula to Include Dramatics, Fencing

The Byron W. King School of Oratory, Mt. Oliver, Pittsburgh, has extended its professional course to include dramatics, fencing, folk dancing and eurhythmics. The value of eurhythmics for cultivating physical expression as well as grace and rhythm in action cannot be overestimated. Phonetics receive more attention each year as a desire for standards in our language increases among educated people.

The swimming classes began this year have been very popular and the ambition of each member of the class is to obtain the Red Cross life saving certificate. The swimming classes are open to girls and women not enrolled in the other departments of the school.

The department of drama during the past year presented in the school auditorium seven plays sponsored by Pittsburgh churches, chapters of the Eastern Star and other organizations. Students have participated in programs and have furnished complete programs for clubs, lodges, churches and schools in all parts of the city and neighboring towns.

Our music department is well staffed. The department for all kinds of dancing will be extended this year to offer better advantages than ever before.

1,000 ATTEND SPEECH CLASS

More than 1,000 students have taken one or more of its courses since the Pittsburgh School of Speech opened five years ago. The Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, Philadelphia Company, Westinghouse Company and the Central Y. M. C. A. have engaged teachers from the school to conduct their work in public speaking. Freeman Hammond, dramatic director, has placed two play companies with the Coit Alber Bureau, of Cleveland, and the Neilson Bureau, of Pittsburgh. These companies filled lyceum engagements for these bureaus during the past year. Freeman Hammond, with his own company, will fill engagements with the Loar Bureau dring the summer months. Elbert R. Moses, president of the school, will fill a block of time for the Bureau of Fine Arts in the South during the coming winter season. Mr. Moses was recently chosen by the Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh to portray the character of Father Pitt in the weekly hour over station KDKA.

The Pittsburgh School of Speech offers courses in expression, public speaking, dramatic art, pageantry, story telling, corrective speech, voice, Shakespeare, and the dance arts. These courses may be taken at the school either during the day or evening. Much of the work may be done in private instruction periods should the student so choose.

Students are prepared to teach in public schools and colleges and to speak or entertain in public. Diploma courses cover a period of two years. Also short certificate courses may be completed in the evening instruction.

Two New Buildings Add To Allegheny's Beauty

The first impression made on a visitor to Allegheny College is one of great physical beauty. Its campus is said to be among the most beautiful in America, which is as it should be for a college of liberal arts. President Eliot used to say that a lovely environment is indispensable to the highest type of educational work. Because the campus itself is educative, authorities of the college have set themselves quite as deliberately to developing an attractive terrain as to providing necessary buildings or increasing the endowment. A visit to the 14 buildings on the campus leaves the impression that the college is now splendidly equipped to do the work it proposes to undertake. There is very little interest among trustees, faculty or students in a large enrollment. For example, two new buildings are now nearing completion at a cost of $425,000, but they will not make it possible to accept additional students. It will be possible, however, to serve ideally the present body of 600.

This physical equipment constitutes the tools of education which vary greatly, for the work of higher education is many-sided. The students must live in comfortable homes, and in an atmosphere congenial to learning, which is provided in the residence halls of the college, for both men and women, and in fraternity houses. The literary materials of education are assembled in the library building. Study of the sciences is pursued in the several science halls—biology, chemistry, physics, the Newton Observatory, etc. Physical education finds its tools in the gymnasiums, the athletic field, the swimming pool, and the tennis courts. And the chapel stands for religious education that must parallel education of the mind and body.

*The visitor soon comes upon an old and very honorable tradition at this college. It was founded in 1815, and its oldest building (a superior colonial type) was constructed in 1820. Here is a portrait of William McKinley, who studied in the college in 1861-62. There, east of the library, is a boulder with a bronze tablet commemorating young George Washington's journey to Fort LeBoeuf. At the door of the library is a letter in bronze written by Thomas Jefferson to President Timothy Alden concerning the famous library just acquired by the college. And the Alumni Register makes it clear that among the former students are many distinguished persons—senators, governors, eminent jurists, the greatest missionary bishop of modern times, the most eminent woman journalist of today, the foremost war correspondent, a notable company of educators, clergymen, physicians, and business men.

Long ago scholastic recognition was achieved by the granting of a charter of Phi Beta Kappa—the highest scholastic honor society in America. In later years the college has been admitted to every list of accredited institutions.

A training in leadership is the greatest thing a college can give to its patronage. The small college is especially qualified to render such a service. In athletics, in social life, in the Greek letter fraternities, in class organizations, and in the countless extra-curricular activities the undergraduate always finds in the small college a laboratory unrivaled by the larger institutions. In particular does Allegheny College foster all these fields for self-expression. The faith of the college has been justified through the years. Student initiative in directing undergraduate thought and organizing undergraduate social and living conditions promises much for the future usefulness of the college product.

BIG CATHEDRAL TO HAVE STEEL DONE BY FALL

Pitt Announces Record Enrollment of 14,712, Providing Facilities for Future

Including all divisions of the University of Pittsburgh, there were last year 14,712 students under instruction, according to figures that have just been issued by Gilbert J. Quick, University Register. This is an increase of 2,000 over last year, of 15.3%. In the past ten years, the enrollment has grown from 3,932 to 14,712. To accomodate this steadily increasing student body, the facilities that will be offered by the Cathedral of Learning, which is now up to the twentieth floor, are becoming a real necessity.

Students registered in the College numbered 2,495; in the School of Education, 1,690; in the Schools of Engineering and Mines, 547; in the School of Business Administration, 745. The Graduate School enrolled 1,464; the Downtown Division, 2,795; School of Law, 281; School of Medicine, 259; School of Pharmacy, 440; School of Dentistry, 339; Retail Training Bureau, 22. Johnstown, 803; Erie, 499, and Uniontown, 346. Extension students numbered 1,987.

Of the students enrolled, 34 come from 19 foreign countries; 5,044 come from Pittsburgh, or 39.6 per cent; 7,907 are from Allegheny County, or 62.2 per cent; 11,638, or 91.4 per cent, are from Western Pennsylvania, and 11,902, or 93.05 per cent, from Pennsylvania. Forty-five other states are represented among the remaining 789 students.

GET CLINIC

Among notable gifts which came to the university last year was the Falk Clinic, given by Maurice and Leon Falk as a free dispensary to be a part of the Medical Center of the university.

The Cathedral of Learning now has steel structure up to the twentieth floor, and John Weber, university engineer, states that the steel work will be completed by fall. Concrete floors and stairs will also be completed and elevators will be in operation.

Every effort is being made to make the building one of permanent quality as well as one of beauty. Certain unusual engineering problems have attended this adaptation of the Gothic to a modern building.

Kiski Head Writes On Boy Management

By DR. W. H. MacCOLL,
Vice President, The Kiskiminetas Spring School for Boys.

Many parents are greatly worried when their boys reach a certain age because the boys become headstrong, unmanageable, unwilling to study and impatient of discipline. The parents feel that this is due to defects in the boy, when more often it is from causes quite beyond the boy.

During this period the boy feels that he is a man. He wants to seem manly, to imitate men and develop his manly traits. His mother has by this time lost her position as the boy's ideal. The boy is studying to become a man, and men are, unconsciously, posing for him as models.

At this time his mother feels that she is losing her boy, and fails to understand. Many mothers try restraint, which makes the boy impatient and perhaps ugly. They next try indulgence, seeking to hold him by any means, regardless of the effect on the boy himself.

The father must realize these changes; his biggest job begins at this point. Unfortunately father's mind is often occupied by business affairs just at this difficult period when he should give a great deal of his time to his maturing son.

A boy at this period should be given for a time into the charge of men who will understand him, lead him, teach him. During this period in his life it will not be difficult for the right men to draw out the best that is in him. He is unconsciously searching for such leaders.

SONG BIRD

CONCERT—The famous soprano, Dusolina Giannini, will be one of the stars appearing here next season before the Art Society. Her concert will be March 14.

TRUSTEES AID GROVE CITY

At the annual meeting of the board of trustees of Grove City College, held on Tuesday, June 11, the report of the president indicated that the year had been satisfactory in every way. Those who were in attendance at the meeting from the Pittsburgh district were: W. L. Clause, president of the board; J. S. Crutchfield, A. M. Thompson, Esq.; Rev. Stuard Nye Hutchinson, D. D.; Dr. Harry E. Winner, Wilson A. Campbell, Chaunce O'Neil, John D. Meyer, Esq. Others present were J. Howard Pew, Philadelphia; W. S. McKay, Greenville; J. Melvin Miller, Mercer; Rev. D. A. Platt, D. D., Meadville, and Dr. E. J. Fithian, E. B. Harshaw, M. L. McBride, Esq., Mark W. Graham and Weir C. Ketler, all of Grove City.

A number of substantial improvements were authorized for the coming year. One of the important actions of the board of trustees was the appointment of a special committee on campus planning and beautification. The committee is composed of Dr. E. J. Fithian, Grove City; J. Howard Pew, Philadelphia; J. S. Crutchfield, Pittsburg; F. B. Hufnagel, Pittsburgh; Weir C. Ketler, Grove City. It is expected that during the coming summer the committee will formulate plans for the development and beautification of the campus and the athletic field. The board authorized the construction of new steel stacks for the library, improvements in the recitation building, and in the Colonial, the dormitory for women. Appropriations were made to cover the construction of three asphalt tennis courts, the purchase of additional stands for the athletic field, and other improvements.

Mt. Mercy Academy Changed to College

A new mark in the educational advance of the city wil be made next fall when the Sisters of Mercy open their new day college for women at Mt. Mercy Academy, add a second women's college to the city's institutions.

On September 25 Mt. Mercy College for the first time will open its doors to the girl graduates of 1929, and offer to them a modern education in an environment, which is in itself an inspiration and an aid to the attainment of the high ideals.

Mt. Mercy College is especially happy in its location, being in the very heart of the educational and civic center.

Courses leading to degrees in arts and sciences are offered and students are permitted to elect courses in art, music, library work, secretarial work, household economics and social service.

CARNEGIE TECH OFFERS COURSE IN AVIATION

Oakland School 24 Years Old; Now Has 2,500 Students; Standards High.

It has taken less than a quarter of a century for the Carnegie Institute of Technology to demonstrate that the progress of an educational institution is less a matter of years than quality of service. Twenty-four years ago the schools founded by Andrew Carnegie were opened to train serious young men and women to earn their livelihoods. In this short span of years Carnegie Tech has advanced to the point where it is now recognized throughout the world as one of America's great institutions.

That the Carnegie Institute of Technology is now a typical institution of national importance has been repeatedly shown in the past few years by the reports of its widespread enrollment. Last year, the 2,500 day-time students came from 41 states, the District of Columbia, Alaska, and 12 foreign countries. Its 4,800 students were equally representative. More than 70 per cent of the day students, it is also reported, came from outside of the city of Pittsburgh.

SCHOLARSHIP

What is probably one of the chief reasons for the development of Carnegie Institute of Technology is the high scholarship required of its students. It is something of a distinction to be able to enter this institution as a candidate for a degree. It is a much greater distinction to be graduated. The result of this policy of maintaining higher-than-the-average standards of class work has obviously increased rather than retarded the enrollment and, reports from the institution emphasize, the most important result of these standards has been the improvement in the general caliber of the students who now apply for admission.

An indication of the progressive attitude of its administrators and its willingness to meet the ever-changing demands of industry is shown in the announcemment that new short courses in aviation mechanics will be offered next fall, in addition to the four-year course in aeronautical engineering, which was established a year ago.

In line with a definite policy of the institute, the development of its research work has resulted in an almost complete tie-up of the institute facilities with outside industries. Various groups of industries and engineering enterprises in the Pittsburgh district, and in other parts of the country, are more and more calling upon the facilities at the schools to aid in research problems. This has contributed, naturally, not only to the advantage of industry as a whole, but to the students, to whom are presented practical problems in connection with their studies.

COURSES OFFERED

In the College of Engineering, the four-year courses leading to the degree of bachelor of science are chemical, civil, commercial, electrical, aeronautical, mechanical, metallurgical and mining engineering courses of physics, chemistry and mathematics in preparation for teaching or for research work are offered as well as graduate courses.

The college of fine arts gives degree courses in architecture, painting and decoration, music, drama and sculpture. The service of this college includes also a two-year courses in architecture and graduate courses.

The college of industries gives four-year courses leading to the bachelor's degree in building construction, works management, printing and industrial education. Short courses for day students are offered in automobile maintenance and operation, aviation mechanics, building, drafting, carpentry, electrical wiring, forging, foundry, heating and ventilating, masonry and concrete, mechanical drafting, patternmaking, plumbing, printing, sheet metal work, structural steel drafting and machine work.

The Margaret Morrison Carnegie College gives courses for women which lead to the degree of bachelor of science in costume economics, household economics, home economics, general science, secretarial studies, social work and library work.

St. Joseph's Install High School Course

A day school for girls will be conducted in the heart of East Liberty by the Sisters of Divine Providence, at St. Joseph's High School, 158 Lawrence avenue.

The new high school will consist of three departments:

Commercial—Intended for those desiring to follow a business career.

Music—Offering exceptional advantages in vocal, piano, violin, cello, harmony, counterpoint and orchestration.

Art—Offering advantages in object drawing, still life, lettering, charcoal drawing, color theory, oil painting, research work, china painting, outdoor sketching.

The sisters in charge will aim to give to those under their care a thorough Christian education, to develop mentally and morally the powers of the individual. Their highest endeavor will be to instill into the youthful minds intrusted to their care, the sterling virtues of Christian womanhood.

For further information write to the directress, or phone Hiland 2319.

TO BEAUTIFY CAMPUS

NEW BUILDINGS WILL ENLARGE P. C. W. SCOPE

Women's College on Woodland Road in Setting of Beauty; Builds Additions.

Pennsylvania College for Women found a most desirable and beautiful location when, in the year 1869, they purchased the Berry property in Woodland road. Since then the beautiful homes and grounds of wealthy citizens of Pittsburgh have gathered around the college campus, and the whole setting of the Woodland road neighborhood is a wonderful place for campus life.

At the commencement exercises this year, 70 students were graduated, the largest class in the history of the college. Four of these girls have received scholarships to continue their study. Miss Marjorie Stevenson has been awarded the Dreisler scholarship at Columbia University, involving a sum of $1,800, in order that she may continue her study of the classics. Miss Rachel Carson has received a scholarship in science at Johns Hopkins University; Miss Mary Louise Jones, a scholarship at the University of Pittsburgh for the study of journalism, while Miss Mary Louise Succop is to be sent by the International Students' Union to Geneva, Switzerland, as one of a group of 12 students from this country. The students will be present at the opening session of the League of Nations.

COMMENCEMENT

Each year a large number of the alumnae of the college return for the commencement activities. At the annual alumnae dinner, on June 7, announcement concerning the building fund were made by President Cora Helen Coolidge to the effect that the goal for the last year of $500,000, had been more than reached. The alumnae have set at their goal the sum of $250,000, which sum they will raise in honor of Miss Coolidge and of her services to the college.

The proposed building plan calls for an addition to Woodland Hall dormitory, now under way; a chapel, a library, a science building, a new heating plant and an alumnae building. A renovation of the old buildings is also planned. The proposed buildings will not necessitate the purchase of additional property as the campus is large enough to accommodate the new groups. One of the new buildings will front on Fifth avenue and gain for the college another entrance in addition to the two approaches so long used on Woodland road and Murray Hill avenue.

TRADETIONAL

This expansion will not, in any way, alter the object of the college. President Cora Helen Coolidge, in discussing the project, says, "The Pennsylvania College for Women does not expect to be a large institution—it does not wish to lose one of its best traditions, the daily living together of teachers and students in an atmosphere of familiar friendship, which is peculiar to the small college. But since its campaign for endowment enabled it to reach the financial requirements and the college has the standard of Class A, it desires now the equipment which will enable it to do its academic work in the finest way, and which will develop the college physically to harmonize with its rare location."

The Pennsylvania College for Women is most fortunate to have as its president, Cora Helen Coolidge, Litt. D, and as dean, Mary Helen Marks, A. M. Personal conferences with Dean Marks at the college may be arranged by telephone and the field secretary is always ready to interview anyone who wishes information concerning admission to the college.

DUQUESNE U. EXPANDS

BUILDING—The phenomenal development in enrollment has been met by a parallel growth in equipment and buildings at Duquesne University, the school on the Bluff. Here is shown one of the newer buildings in the construction program, and there are more being promised. The increase in students from the beginning, in 1878, is a hundred fold. It now has 3,500 students.

GROWTH BIG AT DUQUESNE

Duquesne University now has 100 times the enrollment that it had in 1878, the year of its opening, 3,500 students, both men and women, having been registered in all departments during 1928-29 and a teaching staff of 130 maintained. At the university's fifty-first commencement exercises held this year, degrees were conferred on 241.

Duquesne University was incorporated in 1881 and is operated by the directors of Duquesne University Corporation, who are aided by an advisory board composed of distinguished representatives of the community, irrespective of creed or political affiliation.

The university comprises a college of arts and letters, a college of science, a school of theater arts and dramatic literature, a school of education, a graduate school, a law school, a school of music, a school of pharmacy and a preparatory school. Preparatory courses for medicine, dentistry and law are also offered, and evening courses in higher accounting, finance, commerce, business English, social work, public speaking and dramatic art are conducted. Extension courses in educational methods and certain of the sciences are likewise maintained.

Located on the eminence overlooking the city of Pittsburgh and the Monongahela River, the administration building being at Bluff and Colbert streets, Duquesne University has all the educational advantages of a great city.

Best Symphonies Give Programs Here as 10 Concerts Are Slated

The Pittsburgh Orchestra Association will enter upon its fourteenth season next November, when the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Serge Koussevitzky conducting, will open the symphony season at Syria Mosque on Friday night and Saturday afternoon, November 1 and 2. Six evening concerts and four afternoons will be given by the world's greatest symphonic organizations. In addition to the Boston Symphony, the other orchestras to be heard include the Detroit, with Ossip Gabrilowitsch conducting, on November 15 and 16; the Cleveland Orchestra, Nikolai Sokoloff, conductor, on December 6 and 7; the Chicago Orchestra, with Frederick Stock, conductor, on Monday evening, January 20; the Minneapolis Orchestra, Henri Verbrugghen, conductor, on February 14 and 15, and the Chicago Orchestra again on Monday evening, March 31, with Frederick Stock conductor.

For the first time in a number of years, soloists will be introduced at these concerts. Elsa Alsen, distinguished soprano, will appear with the Detroit Orchestra; Josef Hofmann will be the soloist with the Cleveland Orchestra, and Yehudi Menuhin, boy violinist, will appear with the Minneapolis Orchestra at both the evening and afternoon concerts.

Olive White Visits Vierheller Studio

Olive Nevin White, soloist at Temple Sholem, Chicago, will be a guest teacher at the Miss Vierheller music studio during the summer classes. At present, there are two studio recitals a week.

Jean Wible Kavanagh has been engaged at the Epworth Memorial Church, Cleveland. A Wagner recital for the Sewickley Music Club, a program at the D. T. Watson home, were very successful. The sight singing class was conducted at the Sewickley home.

NEW GYM AIDS SPORTS SLATE AT SHADY SIDE

Physical Side of Education Carefully Watched as Youths Develop by Games.

With the completion of the Curry gymnasium a more advanced and comprehensive program in athletics and physical education will be developed, beginning in the fall of 1929, at Shady Side Academy.

Every student at the beginning of the school year is required to report to the director for a thorough physical examination; the academy physician is present during all examinations. A re-examination is given each student at the end of the school year, or more often if necessary, to note any changes. Records of these examinations are filed on charts and kept in the office of the director. Examination reports are sent to the parents twice each year, following these examinations, showing the physical condition and development, attendance record, athletic sports and exercise taken during the year. Physical defects are prescribed for and special body building and corrective exercises are given to correct any deviation from the normal. Good posture, symmetry, strength, grace of body and fortification against disease are constantly kept in mind.

EXERCISING

Every student, unless excused by the director, is required to take regular exercises throughout the year in the various branches of athletics, under the direction of a competent instructor and coach. The work in the gymnasium includes body building and corrective exercises, boxing and wrestling, light and heavy apparatus work, games and athletics, basketball and track, all properly graded and adapted to the needs and capacity of growing boys.

The best results in athletics and physical education are obtained only by judiciously supplementing gymnasium work and play with out-of-door athletic games and sports. It is the aim of the department of athletics and physical education that every boy physically fit shall participate in one or more branches of various athletic sports and he may select his sport.

Inter-school and inter-house athletics are encouraged and developed in all sports. Inter-house championships are held each year in every branch of sport.

PRACTICE GAMES

All academy students are eligible to try for positions on any of the athletic teams, but no student who is pursuing a course of study requiring less than 15 recitations per week, or who does not maintain a grade of scholarship that will entitle him to promotion, shall be eligible to compete in any contest with another school.

During the practice and games of the different academy teams, the greatest care is taken by those in charge of the teams to avoid excessive exertion or unnecessary exposure to accident on the part of the players. The deportment of the students at the time of all games, both at home and abroad, is constantly under the supervision of one or more members of the faculty.

Shady Side Academy is unusually well equipped with facilities for the promotion of an all around attractive sports program.

Tots' School to Open At Allison Park

Providence Heights Alpha School, Allison Park, formerly known as Mt. Immaculate Alpha School, and situated on Lincoln avenue, is now beautifully located in one of Pennsylvania's fairest spots on Babcock boulevard, two miles from Keown Station. The large campus together with the modern equipped buildings offers young children a splendid opportunity of comfort in every way, together with the opportunity for a thorough training in elementary subjects as well as in art and music.

The objective of the school is to cultivate refined, practical Christian character in the hearts of those entrusted to the care of those in charge.

For further information write to the directress, or phone Perrysville 232.

Arnold School Trains Youths for College

Arnold School will begin in September its seventh year on the seven-acre site at 400 South Braddock avenue, East End. It is the largest country day school within the city limits. Its steadily increasing enrollment counts pupils from the whole Pittsburgh district, from points as distant from the East End as Mt. Lebanon and Oakmont.

There are two department, junior and senior: a boy can receive there his complete education prior to admission to college, from the first grade up. The school is on the accredited list of the "Association of College and Secondary Schools of the Middle States and Maryland," and since its inception its certificate has been valid in every college and university in the country which admits without examination. On the faculty for the coming year there are, among others and exclusive of Headmaster Charles W. Wilder, five men who have their master's degree; two from the University of Pittsburgh, one from Ohio State University and two from Columbia, and the head of the English department, now the assistant to the headmaster, is an examiner for the college entrance examination board.

The school building proper is completely equipped with every mechanical aid to instruction of modern study.

CONCERT HELD BY PERKINS

For the last two seasons Lyman Almy Perkins has presented pupils from some one of his three studios, Pittsburgh, Kittanning or New Kensington, at the first Sunday afternoon organ recital of each month in Carnegie Hall, North Side. On several of these occasions the Choir Ensemble Society, of which he is founder and director, has also appeared, giving a concerted work with piano and organ and soloists. This activity has grown in popularity and brought increasingly large audiences to hear these programs.

The summer course of teaching, regularly carried through each season by Mr. Perkins, is now in progress in both New Kensington and Pittsburgh, and will continue until June 27. Two days later Mr. Perkins opens his third summer course in Norfolk, Va., where he goes for a three weeks' intensive daily lesson course at the earnest request of a group of students who have worked with him there for the past two seasons.

The season of 1928-28 for this busy Pittsburgh teacher has featured a series of monthly recitals given the first Wednesday evening of each month in the auditorium of the Congress of Clubs, during which period some 30 pupils have been presented, representing his three studios.

ACADEMY GETS NEW QUARTERS

With new and extensive quarters, equipped to give exceptional educational advantages to its students, Divine Providence Academy will open its fall term on Mt. Immaculate, Lincoln avenue. The school was formerly located at 158 Larimer avenue.

The academy is accredited by the State Board of Education and affiliated with Duquesne University. It offers the mollowing courses:

Academic, which prepares for college.

Home economics, which trains in the fundamentals of household economy.

Commercial or secretarial, intended for those who desire to follow a business career.

Preparatory department, intended for junior high school pupils.

Department of art and music, intended for those desiring to specialize in any one branch of either department.

Abundant outdoor exercise is offered and every provision is made for the health and comfort of the students.

The aim of the sisters is to give the students under their care a solid and thorough Christian education, to develop mentally and morally the powers of the individual.

VISITORS GIVE NEW COURSES AT SETON HILL

Summer School Menu Includes Harvard Lectures in Education and Psychology.

Seton Hill College's summer term will open July 1 and continue in session until August 9, offering thorough experienced instruction amid healthful and restful surroundings. All the work is regularly accredited by the Departments of Public Instruction of Pennsylvania, Ohio, New York and West Virginia. The physical discomfort of summer study is at a minimum. The campus of 190 acres has an elevation of 1,200 feet, is partly wooded, removed from the heat of the town, and furnished liberally with swings and benches for outdoor study or rest.

The curricula for the summer term is organized with three types of students in mind: the educational needs of those teaching during the year who wish to use their summer vacation to work for a degree; to give opportunity for special courses in education to elementary school teachers, and to give students regularly enrolled in the winter and spring semesters opportunity to expand their college course by taking special elective and education credits during the summer.

The faculty of over 30 members is composed in almost equal proportion of the regular staff and visiting instructors. The president, Dr. D. R. Sullivan, will give the offerings in sociology and western civilization; the vice president, Dr. J. A. Reeves, will give two psychology courses. Prof. J. S. Meares, of North Carolina State University, will give two courses in physics and Rene L. Herbst, M. A., Ed. M., of the psycho-educational clinic at Harvard and formerly director of research of the Lancaster schools, will give three courses in education.

Ursuline Graduating Class Numbers Nine

With Bishop Hugh C. Boyle presiding, the graduation exercises of Ursuline Academy, South Winebiddle avenue, were held at the school June 11, closing the fifty-ninth year of the institution.

After the processional, with the school chorus singing, the following graduates received their diplomas: Mary Catherine Brenneman, Anna Mae Crowley, Natalie Marie Diebold, Jean A. Henahan, Helen P. Hickey, Stella V. Mahaney, Mary E. McGrath, Alice I. Murray and Ursula M. Tracy.

The commencement address was given by the Rev. Dr. Michael A. Kelly, C. S. Sp., Msgr. Martin A. Ryan, Rev. Martin Hehir, C. S. Sp., president of Duquesne University; Rev. Paul E. Campbell, Rev. Joseph Leouissa, O. M. Cap., and many of the leading educators of the city attended.

TO SING

SOPRANO—Rosa Ponselle will be in Pittsburgh to sing Monday night, April 7, as one of the greatest of next season's musical attractions.

EDUCATION FOR MACHINE AGE

By JAMES F. GRADY, A. B.
President Pittsburgh Academy.

It is characteristic of each generation to regard itself as superior to past generations. Is this attitude unfounded—in fact, merely a mild form of what the psychologists call "megalomania?" Or are we justified in regarding ourselves as superior and, if so, in what respects?

The history of mankind is a record of growth and progress. Each age has built on the achievements of past ages, and in this respect our generation may justly consider itself more advanced and more fortunate than the men and women who lived before our "aeroplane-radio" era. But in a larger sense, the greatness of a man or of an age should be determined by the use to which material advantages are put and by the mental and spiritual development, of the individual and of the community, that results from the proper use of these mechanical aids. How many men and women today, enjoying the advantages of our scientific discoveries, excel Bacon, Shakespeare, Franklin, or Emerson in the richness of their mental qualities?

The year 1929, then, with its marvelous mechanical inventions presents a great opportunity and a great challenge to youth.

Art Society Presents Famed Musicians In Seasonal Schedule

Among the new attractions on the Art Society list for next season are Richard Bonelli, leading baritone of the Chicago Grand Opera, who will open the season on Friday evening, October 25. Other artists new to Pittsburgh are Hallie Stiles, soprano, and the Roth String Quartet from Budapest. Miss Stiles will be joint star with Hans Kindler, cellist, January 17. Other favorites listed are Maier and Pattison, in a recital for two pianos, November 19; Jacques Thibaud, French violinist, December 13, and Dusolina Giannini, soprano, who will be heard March 14.

CURRY COLLEGE FOR BUSINESS

A means to not only get the basis of a business career, but as well to increase earning power, is offered by the Curry College business course, now in their sixty-eighth year. The college, at Penn avenue and Stanwix street, is prepared to equip completely students intending to enter the business world.

Besides a summer school, there are all-year-round classes. In the school the aim is not alone to give the student the fundamentals of a commercial education, but as well to aid him in the mastery of English and supplementary subjects.

The shorthand course of study includes Gregg or Graham shorthand, touch typewriting, business English, spelling, dictaphone, letter writing, business ethics, billing, machine dictation, rapid calculation and office appliances.

The time required to complete the course of study depends on the amount of work done in grade or high school, the ability to concentrate and the time devoted to study outside of school hours. The average students gives between six and eight months.

In addition to the shorthand course there are the bookkeeping and accounting, the commercial, the secretarial, the business administration, salesmanship and advertising and machine courses.

The night school is in session on Monday and Thursday evenings.

Quality of Art Exhibits In Kennedy Galleries Better—More Variety

By WILLIAM B. M'CORMICK,
Universal Service Art Editor.

NEW YORK, June 29.

ONCE again the galleries of Kennedy & Co. are hung with a "comprehensive exhibition" of the work of living American print makers, an annual summer function now in its third season in these rooms. And "comprehensive" it really is, for, in addition to the showing the work of 100 artists—as against 61 in last year's exhibition—the quality of the exhibits is finer than ever before.

It will be of especial interest to summer visitors to New York with a taste for art, since it includes a marked variety of subjects; of mediums—copper, stone and wood, and notably for the fine impressions selected to hang on the walls. A feature of the exhibition is the number of new workers in graphic art included here for the first time in a general show.

Cowboys—Flappers

From California to New England the American scene is represented in these prints, together with those familiar European vistas so beloved by the conscious or unconscious followers of Whistler. There are cowboys and New York flappers, San Francisco wharves and Arizona deserts, haymaking scenes and the sophistications of MacDougal alley, fishermen at work and the skyscrapers in the building, and rural and urban views of England, France, Belgium, Italy, Ireland and down among the West Indies in St. Thomas and St. Kitts.

Among the architectural subjects there are Samuel Chamberlain's admirable "Hospital St. Jean, Bruces," with its entrancing atmosphere and line; Asa Cheffet's "Ramshackle Barn," illustrating a really brilliant use of blacks; the "Monticello," by Juliet White Gross, a technical achievement of the first rank in the use of a soft line; E. T. Hurley's night view of the "Monastery From Rockwood" in a bluish tone used with a superb effect, and William C. McNulty's alluring vista of "MacDougal Alley," with its lofty background of Mr. Corbett's skyscraper masterpiece, No. 1 Fifth avenue.

Notable Works

In this division may be included, for charm of scene and technical accomplishment, Martin Lewis's "Building of Babylon"; Robert F. Logan's gracious rendering of "Harvard Hall" and "Johnson Gate," at Cambridge; Bror J. O. Nordfeldt's "In Santa Fe," noteworthy for its utilization of whites, and the "San Gabriel Mission," by Frederick Robbins, one of these plates that show how, more and more, our artists are going to the West for their subjects.

Purely New York scenes are of so wide a range as Frederick T. Weber's highly sensitive renderings of two rooms in the Metropolitan Museum of Art; John Sloan's "Hotel Lafayette"; Anton Schutz's "The Four Bridges," the superb prospect of "Queensboro Bridge and Welfare Island," by Louis Ruyl, in which he combines the verities with a rare graciousness of treatment; William F. Matthew's "The Barge, Manhattan Bridge," made most impressive by the technique he employes, and Martin Lewis's enchanting presentation of "Rain on Murray Hill."

Reporting Roads Bad Does No Good

READING, Pa. June 29.—Reporting bad roads to county courts fails to get results, according to at least one Berks County constable, George H. Deysher. Among the 60 constables reporting on street and road conditions, as required by the law four times a year, Deysher, who lives in Albany Township, told the Berks judges in his report that one of the roads in his district is "very bad," and that another is "terrible." All the roads in Albany Township have been reported in bad condition periodically for six years, but the supervisors have done nothing about it, Deysher said.

Groundhog, Mascot At Airport, Stolen

LANCASTER, Pa., June 29.—(INS.)—"Tom," the groundhog mascot of the pilots of the Lancaster Airport, is mysteriously missing and the fliers are outspoken in their belief "Tom" has been stolen.

The groundhog was captured several weeks ago and responded readily to the affection lavished upon it, becoming a prime favorite among the birdmen.

While mechanics and pilots were at lunch the animal vanished. Investigation disclosed that the cage of the mascot had been forcibly entered and "Tom" had been stolen.

Athletes Seldom Arraigned in Court

CINCINNATI, June 29.—Athletes seldom are arraigned in criminal courts, according to Judge Edward Hurley, prominent jurist here.

Said Judge Hurley: "I've noticed this fact in the number of persons brought before me. The answer seems to be that participation in clean athletics builds self-reliance and character. A sound body usually begets a sound mind."

Friendship Club Honors Mrs. East

HONORING Mrs. Lyda K. East, of Bellevue, who is leaving soon for an indefinite stay in Mexico, the Friendship Club gave a luncheon in the Congress of Clubs. The president, Mrs. Louis Hockenberry, spoke in appreciation of Mrs. East's service and Mrs. William Sturgeon presented her with a purse on behalf of the club.

No. 11 Elk Women Hold Luncheon

LADIES of B. P. O. E. No. 11, held a bridge luncheon at the Willows on Thursday to close the season's activities. Fifty members and guests were present at the affair for which Mrs. Anna Decker, assisted by Mrs. Katherine Dipple, was chairman. Mrs. E. J. Graham is president of the organization.

14 Children Rush to Mother, 83, Ill

BLOOMSBURG, Ill., June 29.—Within four hours after word was sent out that the condition of their mother, Mrs. Mary Hess 83, was critical all of Mrs. Hess' 14 children were at her bedside. All of them live within a radius of 40 miles.

Quilt in One Family More Than 100 Years

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 29.—A quilt owned by Mrs. C. J. Hickman, of this place, has been in the possession of one family for 131 years. The quilt was made in 1798 by a sister of one of the founders of Uniontown.

Wilkinsburg Girl Weds In Church

WEDNESDAY night at 7:30 o'clock, in the Mifflin Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, the Rev. Charles J. Whitlatch performed the ceremony at the wedding of Miss Mildred West, daughter of William C. West, of Barnes street, Wilkinsburg, and Lucian Leroy Leape, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Leape, of Covington, Ky. The bride wore white crepe chiffon and taffeta with a tulle veil held with a coronet of pearls and lace, and she carried a shower of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. Her maid of honor, Miss Ellen Hootman, of Washington, Pa., appeared in pink chiffon and her flowers were pink roses. Audrey West, sister of the bride, was flower girl, and Miss Clare Brenneman, of Allequippa, sang.

Season's Smartest Hat Is Just Scrap of Velvet But It's Saucy, Dressy

By PEARL GROSS.
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 29.—Just a scrap of velvet and Agnes calls it a hat!

Agnes of Paris introduced the wicked little beret in this country, also the basque chapeaux and the poke bonnet model which is characterized by a drooping brim wider at the sides than front and back. This week she brings out the beret basque, the rage in Paris at this very moment.

Copies of this new millinery fancy have already arrived and are being displayed in the exclusive shops. The newest Agnes creation is chic and decidedly audacious, but alas, will probably be widely copied in cheap materials. This is the problem all smartly dressed women are up against nowadays. Everything is "copied."

The charm of the beret basque is the fact that it is for dressy occasions and not entirely for sports wear like the simple beret. It is made of "just a scrap of velvet"—according to Agnes' own description. It is worn with just the slightest, sauciest tilt over one eye and most enchanting of all is a wisp of veil reaching just to the tip of the nose.

American milliners are trying to bring about a renaissance of flower trimmings on hats. The Parisian headgear is notably tailored and untrimmed. The Spanish influence has crept into design, and it is especially noticeable on summer hats. Spanish are the wide-brimmed, drooping straws, edged and flounced with lace. Spanish, too, are those with a red rose tucked underneath one side of the brim.

Unadorned Models

Feathers, sprays of delicate flowers and colored ribbon soften a great many of the warm weather hats. But for all formal occasions, you will see only the severest, unadorned models framing the face. At the Ritz tea hour milady continues to look distinctly Parisian. Only for sportswear does she turn American and affect the newest in trig Fifth avenue millinery.

Nobody but the French designers, it seems, know how to drape a beret. Those in felt are not so difficult, but the velvet ones require the cleverest and most skillful twists and folds.

Right to the fore at the moment comes a fisherman cap-hat made of colored shantung to match sleeveless, one-piece dresses of the same material. These used to be draped on the head bandanna-wise, but now the milliners have rigged up a charming cap-hat with an elastic gering inside so that it will fit snugly.

Chenille Berets

Crocheted straw and chenille berets are holding their own, although there is a noticeable swing towards large hats in brighter colors for the warm weather.

Even now the milliners are looking ahead for next season—the fall when fair femininity clambers out of summer clothes and gladly adopts the more sober colors of black, gray or beige.

One thing is certain, it will be a big year again for the small hat—especially the tam-o-shanter models. Also, felts will not rule the roost, for velvet, satin, lace and hats of crocheted silks will be much smarter.

Some inkling of all this may already be gathered by a review of the modes now in process of being developed in the millinery salons. One famous young actress is known to have put in an order for 12 velvet and satin berets to match some of her street and evening frocks and a brilliant society matron, known as a trail-blazer in the fashion world, has declared that the small beret is the most becoming model for any and every woman.

HERE'S THE MODERN TOWER OF BABEL

YOU read in Chapter 11 of Genesis that the world was getting along fairly well, "the whole earth was of one language and of one speech." Everybody could talk to everybody else, which avoided bitterness and misunderstanding. Then came the building of the Tower of Babel.

"And they said, Go to, let us build us a city and a tower, whose top may reach unto heaven; and let us make us a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth.

"And the Lord came down to see the city and the tower, which the children of men built.

"And the Lord said, Behold, the people are one, and they have all one language; and this they begin to do; and now nothing will be restrained from them, which they have imagined to do.

"Go to, let us go down, and there confound their language, that they may not understand one another's speech.

"So the Lord scattered them abroad, from thence upon the face of all the earth; and they left off to build the city."—Genesis 11:4:5:6:7:8.

You know the old Bible story, how our foolish ancestors, drowned out, all but one family, got into mischief again as soon as they landed on Mount Ararat.

They traveled from the Eastern mountain where the Ark rested, and settled in Shinar, and immediately attempted the impossible, with their Tower of Babel.

So this nation not long ago attempted the impossible, decreeing absolute prohibition by a stroke of the pen.

Instead of achieving an easy way of reaching heaven, their language was confounded, they could not speak to each other, they quarreled and were scattered all over the earth.

Similarly, in place of the perfection that prohibitionists hoped for, perfect sobriety, beautiful peace, we have bootleggging, hijacking, highway robbery, murder on a scale never dreamed of in any civilized country.

We have the President of the United States denouncing the disgrace of our crime wave.

We have bootlegging financed to the extent of hundreds of millions a year, buying public officials.

We have closed ten or fifteen thousand saloons in New York City and opened 32,000 speakeasies, according to the statement of the chief of police himself.

The number of deaths from alcohol is increasing.

And worst of all, this great nation, which should be concentrating on its real problems, building roads, digging canals, irrigating deserts, discusses day in and day out the miserable problems of bootleg liquor, crimes that it produces, political feuds to which it gives birth.

Foolish people in ancient times tried to build a tower that would reach the sky.

Foolish people of our day try to construct a PROHIBITION tower that will reach to the heaven of perfect righteousness, and the confusion already existing is "worse confounded."

Legislation that was to stop deaths from alcohol has INCREASED deaths from alcohol.

Legislation that was to do away with secret drinking behind closed doors has given us, in our biggest city, New York, 32,000 hidden speakeasies in place of ten or twelve thousand saloons that, BAD AND VILE AS THEY WERE, were at least open to police supervision.

The old Tower of Babel has crumbled and gone. How long is this modern imitation to stand with its crime, bootlegging, hijacking and general villainy?

The Bible name of the Tower of Babel was taken from "Babal," a Hebrew word meaning "to confuse or confound."

Modern history says that Babel was the native name of the great City of Babylon, which in the Assyrian language means "Gate of the God."

Many Jewish traditions originated in Babylon, and in numerous cases the origin has been lost sight of.

One old Semitic legend says human beings were swept together by wind into a plain afterward called "Babil," and scattered again all over the earth.

Central America has its "Tower of Babel" legend. Xelhua, one of seven great giants that escaped the deluge, according to the ancient Aztec story, built the Pyramid of Chouchulula, intending to storm heaven and conquer it. The gods destroyed it and confounded the languages of the builders.

Many nations have legends about the confusion of tongues, and the building of a tower to attack the gods.

We know, of course, that the only true story is the one in the Bible. Now, to return to Mr. McCay's powerful cartoon of the prohibition Tower of Babel, we MIGHT well have taken warning from the original tower.

You can imagine what happened in the strange, ancient land, when, as told in the Bible, the Lord Himself came down personally "to confound their language, that they may not understand one another's speech."

Men suddenly could not understand a word that was said to them by their neighbors.

Workmen building the tower could not understand orders of those in command and those in command could not understand each other.

Fear fell upon them, quarreling broke out, bitter denunciation. Each thought he was talking the original language and the others were making fun of him.

They stopped building their tower, scattered over the earth, and that was the end of that attempt.

Much the same thing is happening here. Men got along well together before the prohibition question, with its crime, quarrels, intolerance and denunciations, became the dominating feature of what we are pleased to call our "civilization."

Some of the people decided to say to all of the people, "You shall not drink."

And that "You shall not drink" has caused a large part of the nation to forget an older and more important command, "Thou shalt not kill."

Killings in this prohibition era have become so common that nobody pays attention to them.

Crime, with the gigantic profits of hijacking and bootlegging, is organized as thoroughly as banking or industry.

Gangsters and criminals have their own codes of law, hold their own courts and have their own executions, with no reference to established courts, respect for established authority, or fear of it.

You read that a man is "taken for a ride," murdered, thrown out on the side street.

Today you see at work, a peculiar justice, established by this modern prohibition Tower of Babel.

A Federal Grand Jury investigating the activities of one among thousands of professional bootleggers is told calmly by important industrialists, bankers, and others, "Yes, we dealt with this bootlegger, found his goods reliable, think well of him."

The law was broken, the Constitution defied, and without shame.

Respectability says to this Government: "Make the laws for the little people, but DON'T BOTHER US."

Has this nation nothing more important to think of than the determination of a certain number of extremists to force their will on others, and the absolute pathetic helplessness of the Government in the face of a problem with which it cannot deal?

Nobody questions the good intention of the prohibitionists, in their original plan to construct this Tower of Babel and march up to perfect righteousness.

But everybody questions their common sense in persisting in a plan that more than ten years of experiment have proved an absolute failure.

Citizens guilty of no crime have been shot dead in their automobiles simply because somebody "suspected" that they might have liquor with them.

Gangsters that once would have belonged to the submerged criminal class, easily dealt with by the police, now dispose of millions of dollars, and murderers drive fine cars, living on the payroll of highly prosperous bootleggers and hijackers.

More and more contempt for the Constitution and the law, are taken for granted.

Jurors will not convict, where guilt is evident. And in occasional cases of conviction, punishment is ludicrously small, often a trifling fine, perhaps less than the net profit on a dozen bottles of bootleg whisky.

Men work their way slowly to perfection. They cannot climb to teetotalism or to heaven in an afternoon, or in a century.

One hundred and fourteen years ago, Thomas Jefferson, who wrote the Declaration of Independence, recommended to the Legislature of Virginia, a Captain Miller, whom Thomas Jefferson recommended "as an honest and useful man."

Writing to Charles Yancey, Thomas Jefferson, who could speak for many Americans even now, said of this Captain Miller: "He is about to settle in our country and to establish a brewery, in which art I think him as skillful a man as has ever come to America. I wish to see this beverage (beer) become common, instead of the whisky which kills one-third of our citizens and ruins their families. He is staying with me until he can fix himself."

Jefferson certainly knew something about the American people, since he wrote the Declaration of Independence and helped them to establish their country, and then as President, to manage it.

Jefferson knew the difference between whisky and light wine and beer. In a letter to William H. Crawford, Jefferson speaks of "the loathesome and fatal effects of whisky, ruining the fortunes, and bodies, the minds and the morals of our citizens."

In an address to the Indians, in 1809, Jefferson said: "I have not filled you with whisky, as the English do, to make you promise or give us what is against your interests when out of your senses."

Jefferson never knew the modern whisky which has come with prohibition, the bootleggers' whisky, sometimes containing wood alcohol, sometimes poisonous stuff, partially redistilled from denatured alcohol bought at gasoline stations.

Concerning light wines, which he imported from France for his own use (and Jefferson was no drunkard), Thomas Jefferson wrote in 1818:

> "I think it is a great error to consider a heavy tax on wines as a tax on luxury. On the contrary, it is a tax on the health of our citizens. It is a legislative declaration that none but the richest of them shall be permitted to drink wine and, in effect, a condemnation of all the middling and lower conditions of society to the poison of whisky . . . Surely it is not from the necessities of our treasury that we thus undertake to debar the mass of our citizens the use of not only an innocent gratification, but a healthy substitute instead of a bewitching poison."

To Monsieur de Neuville, Thomas Jefferson wrote:

> "No nation is drunken where wine is cheap; and none sober, where the dearness of wine substitutes ardent spirits as the common beverage. It is, in truth, the only antidote to the bane of whisky."

* * *

Earnest prohibitionists decided that prohibition was the thing, that it was feasible and would be beneficial.

This picture shows how badly mistaken they were.

Thomas Jefferson told them more than a hundred years ago that you can improve conditions, not by extreme measures, but by common sense.

Jefferson urged that light wine and beer be made substitutes for whisky by encouraging their sale.

Prohibition has arranged to make poisonous bootleg whisky, worse than any of Jefferson's time, the only beverage within easy reach of the people.

How long will it take the people to tear down the tower based on fanaticism, and ignorance of human nature?

While the Play Censor's Away Let's Tell Just What We Think Of His Most Weird Activities

By GEORGE SEIBEL

THIS is a week of humor, sweet and wholesome variety, in the Pitt, where George Sharp's Players will revive "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." The censor can go to sleep during this engagement, or run down to Atlantic City to criticize bathing suits. For Mrs. Wiggs wouldn't offend anybody, not for the world. The censor knows that—so he's probably on his way to the seashore, knowing our morals will be in no danger during this week.

While the censor's away, is a good time to talk about him behind his back. He is a person who is becoming more and more of a nuisance in American literature and drama. He wears different kinds of clothes in different places—in Boston he masquerades in a policeman's uniform; somewhere else he may be found as a stately club woman; in many states he's just a plain politician who needs the money. Wherever he is, he's a deplorable incident out of place in a real democracy.

George Seibel

Heinrich Heine, the great German poet, was always having trouble with the censor. He got even in one of his most popular books by writing a chapter about the gentleman. The chapter contained only four words. It opened with the phrase, "The Prussian censor—" the rest of the chapter was entirely blacked out, as the censor was in the habit of doing to books he did not approve—but near the end of a chapter a single word remained standing, the word "blockhead."

The trouble with censorship is that there are few people wise enough and good enough to set up as mental dietitians for their fellow men. People have different political and religious opinions; one man's orthodoxy is the other man's heresy. In all such matters individual prejudice is bound to color the censor's decision. And that's the thing which in a democracy ought to be avoided.

Mountain Coming To Mohammet Is Routine of Stage

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

MOHAMMET, it is related, once commanded a distant mountain to come to him, to prove his miraculous powers to some snooty skeptics. The mountain budged not an inch. Mohammet may have been vexed but he was not downed. He said they all should be thankful his command was not obeyed since, if the mountain had moved it would have fallen on them and crushed them. Then he gave vent to his famous wheeze—"If the mountain will not come to Mohammet, Mohammet will go to the mountain," or words to that effect, thus establishing the custom of making the inevitable appear to be a concession.

Mohammet, the original, was a piker. Every week his modern successor, as represented by Pitt audiences, have the mountain brought to them. Not only the mountain, but cities, palaces, hovels—all of the heterogeneous objects, geographical and architectural, that make up the entire world. They move to the theater as if by magic and depart from it just as mysteriously. Neither time nor place, peasant nor king, has the power to disobey the summons of the modern Mohammet when it is bidden to come.

Thus on Monday when "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" comes upon the scene occupying the same area in square feet where once stood a king's castle, there will appear a section of Louisville, Ky., U. S. A., locale of "the cabbage patch," made familiar to millions through Alice Hogan Rice's book. Where a Montague scion erstwhile wooed fair Juliet Capulet on a Veronese

Play-Hunting in Summer No Sport for American

By GILBERT W. GABRIEL,

Universal Service Dramatic Critic

NEW YORK, June 29.

LIKE the tents of the Arabs, the plays depart. Up and down the side streets of the Forties you look upon the bleak, summer-sealed doors of so many vacated and vacationing theaters. And you wonder what's wrong with the public (may its tribe increase!) which long ago decided that it will not go play-hunting in the summer time, and which has clung to that decision through thick, thin and all Broadway's despair.

PAULINE MacLEAN, leading woman with the George Sharp Players, will help with the comedy in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," new attraction in the Pitt.

America seems to be about the only drama mart in the world which inevitably shuts down three quarters of its playhouses against warm weather. In the European capitals, come summer, they may indulge in more popular priced and more familiar repertory

Spring Gala Talent Here

By J. FRED LISSFELT.

AFTER the recent great spectacle, the health demonstration in Forbes Field for the public school children of Pittsburgh, we are reminded once again of the opportunity we are ignoring by not using these children and their musical talents towards a gala spring festival. Musical journals report enthusiastically of the results of festivals by hundreds of amateur and professional clubs in all parts of our country, but Pittsburgh is content to let die a movement that was once so notably begun.

Whoever has not yet heard the orchestras and the various choruses of our public schools would be amazed to find the quality of their music so very high. It is almost phenomenal how quickly these groups, with necessarily ever-changing personnel, accept their training. Their unison playing and singing excels not only in rhythmic effects and clarity, but also in their unusual feeling for the historical and esthetic quality of the works performed. The younger children soon show talent that is never lost sight of until their graduation from the high schools.

No Lack of Music

There is surely no lack of music which students of all ages could sing and play. With this nucleus we could proceed.

Pittsburgh and its neighborhood affords rich raw material for pageantry. Some years ago, a production of Hiawatha at Guya-

Eleven Comedies Among Plays Broadway Likes

By WARD GREENE.

NEW YORK, June 29.

NOBODY arriving in New York Monday should have much mental agony over picking shows to attend. The summer slump in the theater is a stark actuality. Only 25 houses on Broadway are burning lights, and three of these go dark. With only one new production booked to arrive, the menu simmers down to 25 available choices.

Francine Larrimore

Of the 25 productions now playing, 11 are comedies, six are serious plays and eight are pieces with girls and music. Let's look at the 11 comedies.

The best of these, "Little Accident," will depart for the road after a 10 months' run. This is the frivolous dramatization of Floyd Dell's novel, "The Bachelor Father." It is a very funny piece about a father who elopes with his baby to make the world safe for radicalism. Thomas Mitchell has been in the lead. If it hits your town, see it. Among the other sticking comedies is the Guild show, "The Camel Through the Needle's Eye," a trifle as a play but excellently performed; "Let Us Be Gay," an amusing farce, with Francine Larrimore; "Jonesey," a lively piece about our young collegians, and John Drinkwater's English comedy, "Bird in Hand."

All Have Had Runs

All of these attractions had excellent runs on Broadway, and all continue for some weeks yet. Newer arrivals among comedies have not hit the pace of their predecessors. We note "The Tired Business Man," "Nice Women" and "Borrowed Love," all recent productions, but not recommended by this correspondent for a warm summer's evening.

You will find fewer but some-

Reynolds Sees No Menace To Stage in Talk Films

ACCORDING to a statement made by John B. Reynolds, representing the Shubert interests in Pittsburgh, including the Alvin and Pitt, he sees no need of apprehension over the "talkies," which have progressed, in his opinion, far enough to indicate that they are helpful to the legitimate theater in more ways than one.

He holds these pictures to be a distinct advancement over the silent ones, and have created a new class of theatergoers, whose interest has been revived in the play interpreted by the flesh and blood actors, and that the coming season will undoubtedly see a decided increase in the demand for musical shows and the spoken drama.

Mr. Reynolds has just returned from New York, and makes the announcement that the following list of attractions will be seen in the Shubert theaters next season:

"Night in Venice," "Pleasure Bound," Walter Woolfe in "Red Robe," "Broadway Nights," "Music in May," "Boom Boom," "Blossom Times," "Gay Paree," "Greenwich Village Follies," "Duches of Chicago," a new Shubert musical play; revival of "Blue Bird;" new Shubert musical play; Marx Brothers in "Animal Crackers;" Schwab & Mandel's "Follow Thru," "New Moon," "Good News" and "Desert Song."

Aarons & Freedley's "Hold Everything," "Spring Is Here; Arthur Hammerstein's "Good Boy," Joe Cook in "Rain or Shine," Ethel Barrymore in "Love Duel" and "Kingdom of God," "Bird in Hand," Irene Bordoni in "Paris," Janet Beecher in "Courage," Helen Menkin in "Congai," Kathrine Cornell in "Age of Innocence," "Chauve Souris," Jane Cowl in "Jenny," William Faversham in a new play, William Farnum in "The Idol," Richard Bennet in "Jarnegin," Arthur Hopkins in "Holiday," Helen Hayes in "Coquette," Fay Bainter in a new play, Gilbert Miller's "Journey's End," Otis Skinner in "100 Years Old," William A. Brady's 'Street Scene," Florence Reed in a new play, "Little Accident," "Mr. Pickwick," Kibitzer," Mae West in "Diamond Lil," "After Dark," "Mima," revival of the "Black Crook," American Opera Company, Harry Lauder, "Harlem," Sir John Martin Harvey, "Skidding," Thurston, a revival of "Temperance Town," Isadore Duncan Dancers, San Carlo Opera Company.

Cowboy Hats Swamp Ken

KEN MAYNARD lives in the center of an endless chain of cowboy hats! Hats going off to the cleaners. Hats coming home from the cleaners. Boxes of new hats arriving from the hat maker.

Ken buys them by the dozen.

They are all of white beaver. With a 4½-inch brim and a 6½-inch crown.

Ex-President Calvin Coolidge admired the style and shape so much when Ken paid him a visit at his vacation camp one summer that Maynard had one of his own sent to the then Chief Executive.

Although few people know it, the actor is an artist and designs practically all his screen cowboy outfits.

Maynard has finished "The Wagon Master" and is at work on his second film for Universal. He is producing as well as starring in his own pictures.

Vidor Gets Berlin Tune

IRVING BERLIN will be represented in King Vidor's Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer all-Negro picture, "Hallelujah," with two new songs especially for this production. They are "Swanee Shuffle" and "The End of the Road," and are being used in the Southern "honkey-tonk" scene of the picture, where Daniel Haynes and Nina Mae McKinney, who have the leading roles in the film, first meet.

Eighteen-Day Dieters In Hollywood Relate Results of Experiment

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
(Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.)

LOS ANGELES, June 29.

A MONTH ago I would have boastfully admitted my chief occupation outside of admiring my dog was furnishing bits of movie news on Hollywood to the outside world. Today, more in embarrassment than in anger, I have to confess that no article ground out of my typewriter has created one-half the interest that the 18-day Hollywood diet, published two weeks ago, has aroused throughout the country.

Louella O. Parsons

If only I had known how eagerly the world has been waiting to get a recipe for growing thin I would have specialized in dietetics and come to the rescue of suffering womankind. Letters from Pittsburgh, anxious inquiries from Atlanta, hopeful queries from Washington, messages from New York, Chicago, Milwaukee, Omaha, Boston and all other towns where the 18-day diet was published, have written pleadings for interpretations of the food permitted.

Nothing would give me more personal satisfaction than to sit down and write to Marie M. and explain it is far better to eliminate all sugar on her grapefruit in the morning or to suggest to Paula that she poach the egg, and if Melba toast is allowed she serve her poached egg on toast.

What Melba Toast Is

Perhaps I'd better explain right here just what Melba toast is. Since strange as it may seem, there are many people to whom the name Melba means nothing. Melba toast is the thinnest sliver of bread possible, toasted. The bread is cut so thin that it almost curls up when the fire touches it.

I should enjoy enlightening Ruth on the tomato question by saying that either stewed or raw tomatoes are allowed, and I would get a real kick out of writing to Jane and to explain that butter is not permitted and that it is far better not to add cream or sugar to her coffee. I don't mind in the least saying that the cheese used most frequently on the day pot cheese is prescribed is cottage cheese, because that is not fattening, and all other cheese is fatal to the figure.

Carries Her List

I should write to all these girls gladly if I only had time. Not having the time, let's see how Hollywood is figuring out Ethel Barrymore's diet.

First of all, if Helen Ferguson, who lunched with a group of girls last week, and ate six slices of cucumbers and a poached egg, had left her diet list at home she needn't have had to worry. Several leading Hollywood cafes furnish the 18-day diet list. One enterprising cafe owner advertised that his restaurant makes a specialty of the 18-day diet.

Ben Lyon's mother believes that salt is fattening, so she has cut down all condiments. In eight days she has lost well over six pounds and when she made her appearance at the beach in a bathing suit her figure was greatly admired.

Mrs. B. P. Schulberg admits the diet doesn't go so well with her because she picks out the days that have a generous luncheon and dinner. She craves lamb chops when the menu gives her lettuce,

Three Lees Are Ponies

ONE of those things that is strange but true is in the combination of names of three of the chorus girls appearing in the natural color Follies revue sequences of the talking-singing-dancing production, "The Dance of Life." Gloria Lee, Lee Kinney and Bee Lee dance side by side in the first row of ponies in the "Flippity Flop" number.

ON REGIMEN

HELEN FERGUSON, screen actress, is one of the many flickerites who take the 18-day diet seriously. Wherever she goes, a copy of the diet goes with her.

John Wray Tries Films

JOHN WRAY, Broadway stage star who played the role of the villainous Joe Prividi in "Tin Pan Alley," will portray the same role in the Norma Talmadge all-talking picture that Lewis Milestone is directing.

Gilbert Roland, who was to have portrayed the villain, now will enact the part of the leading man, a type of role he has filled in three Norma Talmadge pictures. It has been intended that Roland should play the part of the villian, but John W. Considine, Jr., production executive on the picture, decided on the switch when he found John Wray available to play in the film the role that he created on the stage.

Mr. Wray is en route to Hollywood. A script of the picture was airmailed to Kansas City, to be delivered to him for study during the rest of the journey to Hollywood. John Wray is one of the authors of the play, "Nightstick," from which Roland West made "Alibi," and in that play he created the role of Chick Williams, which his close personal friend, Chester Morris, enacted in the film.

ACADIAN MAIDEN

DOLORES DEL RIO is Evangeline in the film version of Longfellow's poem, which is to be the screen attraction in the Penn. She also will be on the stage.

Questioner Gets Witty Reply From Barrymore

By JERRY HOFFMAN,
(Universal Service)

HOLLYWOOD, June 29.

"WOULD you play 'Hamlet' in modern clothes?"

"No! But I'll do 'King Lear' in the nude."

John Barrymore smiled grimly as he answered the inevitable question. It has been asked hundreds of times, and on each occasion Barrymore's ready wit has found a new reply. Undoubtedly, he must be tired of answering requests for what he thinks of talkies, and whethet he would like to play the melancholy Dane in a talking motion picture. Yet, as I pointed out to the brother of Lionel and Ethel, an interviewer hasn't the scope for questions in speaking to a Barrymore that he has with ordinary actors.

John Barrymore

"Ordinary?" queried John. "And am I supposedly extraordinary?"

"Yes, in this respect, John Barrymore, or a Mary Pickford, or a Fairbanks are no longer individual persons to the fans. They have become living traditions and must be treated as such."

Barrymore puffed his pipe quietly. "Sounds very dreary," he murmurs.

"How does it feel to hear your own voice in the movies?" I asked.

"Why, it was simply like the first time you saw yourself on the screen. Except did you ever hear of the time Mary Pickford convinced Henry Miller, the producer, to appear in a short picture with her?"

I confessed my ignorance.

"Well, they made this reel. After seeing it, Henry Miller cried: 'Great heavens! I do all the things I've been firing actors for doing for years!'"

Eastern Picture Studios Quiet; Equity Is Blamed

By BLAND JOHANESON.

NEW YORK, June 29.

FAINT percussions of the Actors' Equity trouble finally have reached New York. The local movie studios, turning out talking dramas and vaudeville acts, use Equity players almost exclusively. But an actor has been pulled out of the Pathe production, "On the Stairs," at Pathe's Park avenue studio, and the company has decided to transfer production to the coast.

The actors around Broadway have been frankly impatient with their Equity's attempt to "close shop" the movie studios. More than half of them have been out of work since the talkers worked such demoralizing woes on legitimate show business. And a few well-known stage names are frankly down and out.

The sad condition of legit, the heat wave striking with such paralyzing force at the movie theater box offices, out-of-work actors, languishing supper clubs, and Broadway is anything but the gay summer playground the Chamber of Commerce will ask you to believe. It's the season of heartache ballads, bean-bag games among the gangsters, and one-way tickets to the beaches.

Mary Eaton Leaves

Mary Eaton and Millard Webb, the director, have left the Paramount Astoria plant, bound for Hollywood. Webb and little Mary travel hand in hand, cooing sweetly. But we hear that the Eaton blonde's future on the coast presents a problem, as her personality hasn't photographed quite as Ziegfeld and Paramount had hoped.

Helen Morgan and her 50 beef trust beauties, straight from the burlesque fortresses of One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, are hard at work on "Applause." It will be finished next week. Richard Dix's last Paramount talker, "The Boomerang," had been scheduled for Astoria, but the Equity situation has made eastern production a day-to-day affair. Nobody is hurrying to bring movie talent East for a jam up with local union forces.

Radio's Gramercy studies are running on a series of comedy shorts. Bryon Foy, over at Warners in Brooklyn, is turning out short subjects on a Ford production basis, geared up to six a week. Vaudeville acts are tumbling in and out of his plant as fast as the microphone can catch them.

Conventions have drawn most of the executives to far flung cities. And no Hollywood visitors have appeared to inspire the

Cocoanut Parade And Longfellow Poem for Screen

By MILDRED FILLMORE.

THE two movie Doloreses—Del Rio and Costello—are to be with us this week. Senorita Del Rio is coming to the Penn screen in "Evangeline" and to the Penn stage in person. As for the other Dolores—Mrs. John Barrymore, you know—she is to appear in the Enright picture, "The Madonna of Avenue A."

"Evangeline," as you no doubt presume, is the movie idea of the Henry Wadsworth Longfellow poem. And it isn't the first time the movie-makers have focused their cameras in Mr. Longfellow's direction. It wasn't so very long ago that they wrecked his Hesperus on the screen.

Edwin Carewe did the megaphone act for "Evangeline." Yes, he is the same gentleman who directed numerous other Del Rio flickers, "Resurrection," "Ramona" and "Revenge," for example. The same gentleman also who was getting romantic with the dark Dolores in real life. But that's all over now. Edwin has returned to his first love—his wife.

Outstanding in support of Miss Del Rio in her newest picture is Alec Francis and Roland Drew. Little need be said of Mr. Francis. He is a veteran where the cameras grind. Also is he an ACTOR. As for Roland, he is handsome to the eye and has been with Miss Del Rio in two other films. When he first went to Hollywood his name was Walter Goss, or something like that. But his bosses thought his name should have more romance in its sound, so they called him Roland Drew.

Oh, by the way, we understand the screen Evangeline sings a song or two.

Some Movie Gamblers

Well, fans, the comic convict, Mr. George Bancroft, who laughed his way along one-way street to the chair in the Stanley last week, is being replaced by another of those Wall Street dramas, this time "The Gamblers." It is a sound and talk picture, and features Lois Wilson, H. B. Warner and George Fawcett. The production, we understand, includes some high and flighty finance and a jealous husband. Which causes us to remark you never can tell what will happen when there's a jealous husband about—especially in the movies.

We are happy about "The Gamblers" because it affords another opportunity to see and perchance to hear Mr. Fawcett. He's one of our favorites—has been ever since his big mansion toppled about him years ago in "His Children's Children." Also we still remember him as he appeared in "Crisis." And that was a long way back. The parents of Mr. Fawcett never intended he should be an actor. They sent him to the University of

Laura Likes Comic Roles

By ROSEMARY GREY.

LOS ANGELES, June 29.

WONDER what these movie people do with their spare time?

It was 7 o'clock in the evening, and Laura La Plante was due on the set in less than half an hour; she was frantically hurrying on her make-up, telling Yvonne what to do to the silver-tinseled bodice of a deliciously frothy pale pink frock that she ruefully admitted would probably be in shreds before the picture was finished; answering telephones, making appointments for photographs, and being interviewed.

She had been going all day long, standing patiently while dressmakers did things with pins and shears, rushing to conferences, trying to squeeze in some shopping—because there's a new house away down in the solitudes beyond Malibu Beach and new houses demand all sorts of furnishings—and memorizing lines.

And she was getting ready to work all night.

Wants Week's Sleep

"I'd like to go home and sleep for a week, and wake up and listen to the waves, and go back to sleep again—but first I'd take the alarm clock out and drown it," she said.

It isn't chance or luck that put Laura La Plante where she is today—fourth, they reckon her, in "Box office draw" among comedi-

Movie-Go-Round

BY LOUELLA O. PARSONS

LOS ANGELES, June 29.

COMPLAINTS are registered that uninvited guests descend upon the beach houses of the film stars and make themselves comfortable. Clara Bow is guarding against any such intrusion with a big sign plainly stating "only invited guests allowed." Clara goes in strong for signs. She has placards all over her house at Malibu. One of them reading, "Ladies' bath house to the left, gentlemen's to the right" and other similar instructions. Last Saturday night Miss Bow entertained. Instead of the usual bridge game, a game of darts was played, with the losers being invited to take a jump in the ocean. The signs in front of the Bow house are apparently not as ominous as they sound for one of her guests tells of calling on Miss Bow and being greatly embarrassed when Clara could not remember the names of most of her guests.

MODESTY is a virtue. It should be, it is so rare in the film business. Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, who are two of the funniest comedians on the screen, I think, were overcome at the honor conferred upon them when they were invited to take part in "The Hollywood Revue of 1929." "We felt we were quite out of place," confessed the plump members of the team. "You see with all those big stars like Marion Davies, Jack Gilbert, Lionel Barrymore and Norma Shearer we didn't know whether we did right in accepting Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's invitation." Not only did they do right, but they furnished one of the best numbers in the entire "revue." I hope Laurel and Hardy will always give us slapstick in the obvious, hilarious way that has made their comedies one of the joys of picture-reviewing to this scribe.

New Damita Romance

THE latest romance of Lily Damita is being written around the colorful personality of Harry Richman. Lily was reported engaged to Prince Ferdinand, grandson of the Kaiser, before his family sent an SOS and insisted that he leave Hollywood pronto. But Lily didn't wear her heart on her sleeve. She liked the Prince very much, but what was a poor movie star to do when Grandpa insisted that the young man leave immediately. Besides, there are as good fish in the sea as have ever been

*THE COCOANUT squad—the Marx Brothers, you know—are in the movies now. They appear in "The Cocoanuts," movie version of their stage production, which is the Grand booking. ## Movies Talk About Stage

IS the new talking picture menacing the legitimate stage?

Invasion of New York legitimate theaters, such as that of the Sam. H. Harris Theater by "Madame X," and similar situations in other large cities, as for instance the Columbia in San Francisco by "The Broadway Melody," are taken by many to indicate the waning of the legitimate under competition by the talking screen.

But famous producers, stars and directors seem to think that the stage still will exist, though, in many cases, reforms are held necessary.

Louis B. Mayer, in a recent address before the Western Association of Motion Picture Advertisers, declared that the stage, to endure, must not only change its creative methods, but must discipline itself. Indecent shows, he held, have done more to injure the legitimate than pictures. "I love the theater," he says, "but there are many shows I would hate to take my family to. The stage needs a Will Hays right now."

Cecil B. De Mille, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer producer-director, holds that "the stage must radically change its product, and get away from timeworn methods to keep up with the new art," but believes that it will be able to do so.

"The stage and screen have separate functions and one will always aid the other. There is room for both." These are the views of Tod Browning, noted director of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer mystery stories. Lionel Barrymore, famous director of "Madame X," also holds that the spoken drama will never die, but will, perhaps, have to adjust itself to new competition. "Originality and art," he says, "will save it, of course."

While the Censor's Away Let's Tell What We Think Of His Weird Activities

tend his point of view, in order that justice and truth may have an opportunity to be found. Pilate's question, "What is truth?" has never been answered—and probably never will be answered. It is the quest for truth that counts, and political censorship or religious censorship always interferes with the ultimate good of society and church.

How the Censor Does Not Work

Usually, however, the censorship concerns itself with matters relating to sex. This is held to be the special province of the moral mentor. There can be no question in the mind of any decent person that there are some things that ought to be suppressed. The line between pornography, which is plain filth, and art, which must be free, is comparatively easy to define. There are some books even a policeman is competent to judge by their smell, and has ample authority in existing laws to arrest those that circulate them. But when classics like Voltaire are seized by the authorities, the authorities begin to make themselves ridiculous.

The latest field invaded by the censor is that of the talkie. You may have noticed, sitting in the Stanley or the Penn, that suddenly the talkie stopped talking. The lips of the characters kept on moving, but no sound reached your ears.

That, dear reader, is the work of the censor. There were sentiments which your ears are too pure to listen to. They didn't damage the censor, but you are too sensitive. There were words used which you ought not to know. The censor knows them, and that is enough.

So you sit there, and look at your neighbor, and think the machinery of the talkie has slipped a cog. You are altogether wrong—it is the censor's watchful surveillance of your morals. He gets about $3,000 a year to see that your soul is unsullied, and he's going to do his job thoroughly, so that no sapolio will be required.

Plenty of 'Don'ts' Yet Not Enough

Having once read that wonderful compilation of "Don'ts" which the Pennsylvania censor has made since he began censoring the movies, I feel that a Philadelphia lawyer and an Edinburgh logician would have to work together to interpret them properly. In fact there's doubt whether two such intellectual giants at their best could properly apply this fearful and marvelous code.

A year or two ago I visited a moving picture theater and saw a film utterly disgusting from start to finish. It did not contain any serious menace to anybody's morals—young people visiting the theater would not have seen the suggestions it contained—but it was such stupid muck as to insult the intelligence of the adult spectator, and an offense to his nostrils as well. Then was flashed upon the screen the legend: "Approved by the Censor," and I began to wonder what sort of censor had approved it and why. So I investigated. I visited the censor, asked him who had passed this particular film, and by what system of judgment it had been decided that it was fit for the public.

After a few days I was shown the censor's report. That particular film had been censored. They had made a few cuts of minor significance. That the whole film was uniformly foolish and offensive appeared to have escaped this censor entirely. The scenario should have been thrown into the garbage can by the moving picture people themselves. But mass production dulls the sense in that quarter, just as it blunts the judgment in the censor's office. In other words, it is mechanical routine, and every bureau of censorship after it has been running six months degenerates into a rubber stamp system.

The Censor In Other Lands

Audiences are the best censors. When the movies or the talkies become obnoxious, people will begin to stay away and will not take the younger members of their family. Then, automatically, the film factories will understand that their wares do not please, and will find out why.

In a few weeks I shall have an opportunity to meet that august personage, the British Censor, and shall ask him a few questions about one of his peculiar notions—which is that no biblical subject or character should be permitted on the stage.

Some years ago, when Stephen Phillips wrote a drama entitled "The Sin of David," he had to lay it in the time of Cromwell. Within the past year a play called "Potiphar's Wife," quite modernized, had trouble with the censor for other reasons. But the objection to the Bible behind the footlights seems to be the one that gives the British censor the most worries.

Curious, is it not, that to read a book about biblical characters should be considered elevating and instructive, but to see a play about biblical characters might be demoralizing and debasing!

The Passion Play Just Imported

It was not always thus in England. In the old mystery and morality plays, biblical characters figured extensively. Apropos of Noah's Ark, which has come upon the screen, an old-time play about the Deluge was very popular in the "spacious times of great Elizabeth." And that play was simply a farce—of which the great scene was Noah beating his wife to make her go into the Ark, after her shrewish tongue had made life unpleasant to him before the Flood.

The Passion Play was never presented in our country until a few months ago because of similar prejudice. This objection seems to date back to the days of the Roundheads in England, and to understand their peculiar mentality you must read the historian, Macaulay, who psychoanalyzed them perfectly when he said: "They objected to bear-baiting, not because it gave pain to the bear, but because it gave pleasure to the spectator."

Grown-up people are able to take care of their own morals, if they have any. If they haven't any, no censor is holy and high-minded enough to fill the vacuum. We had better get back to the fundamental principle of democracy, which is home rule in all concerns of private judgment. Coercion and suppression lead to espionage and tyranny—but, worse than that, because intelligence is a rare commodity, they lead to absurdity.

At the present time in America the censor is a joke. But the joke is on us. He has become the universal grandmother of the American people, who are tied neatly to his apron-strings and have to go where he lets them. They go there all right. While he is watching movies they go to the night clubs.

We can get along very well without the censor—he has made a laughing stock of himself over Ibsen, Shaw, and a dozen other writers of first magnitude. Perhaps he has helped to advertise some of them and increased their fame. Still we can do without him.

And of course he won't be needed during the coming week. Mrs. Wiggs in the Pitt, will see to it that nothing unseemly is said or done during his absence.

what better bets among the dramas. At least three demand your attendance—"Journey's End," still the best war play since "What Price Glory;" the Pulitzer prize-winner, "Street Scene," and "The Perfect Alibi," excellent mystery stuff, if your taste runs to this sort of thing. The only other mystery play on Broadway, "The Jade God," is feeble by comparison.

Among the musicals, Negro shows predominate and intimate revues easily are the most entertaining. "The Little Show" continues to lead the list for scintillant sophistication. Clifton Webb and Libby Holman, with their "Moanin' Low" number, are by way of becoming the theater's most-talked-about moment. "The Grand Street Follies," which opened to apathetic reviews, has had a house-cleaning. They do say the eliminations and additions have vastly improved it.

Some Suggestions

We suggest the Ziegfeld show, "Whoopee," with Eddie Cantor; "Follow Thru," a whizzy and tuneful production; "Hold Everything!" and "The New Moon," an operetta, as excellent entertainment, with the Shubert fantasy, "A Night In Venice," as a close runner-up. "Hot Chocolates," the latest colored revue, is not up to standard, and "Keep It Clean," a hodge-podge of vaudeville and night club people out of work, is just that. Only its dirt will make it last, and of that it has plenty.

Two very promising candidates for summer honors open this week—Earl Carroll's "Sketch Book" and Ziegfeld's "Show Girl."

A great many people know "Show Girl" either from the columns of Liberty Magazine, where it ran as a serial, or from J. P. McEvoy's book. It's a fast and furious tale of Dixie Dungan, hoofer in a Broadway night club, her fiery Argentine suitor, and her boy friend, the greeting card salesman.

Ruby Keeler in It

With such material to start with, Mr. Ziegfeld must have done well. The transition into a musical show was done by William Anthony McGuire, with music by George Gershwin, ace of the blues rhapsodists. Ruby Keeler (Mrs. Al Jolson) will be Dixie Dugan, and the cast will include Clayton, Jackson and Durante, Eddie Foy, Jr., Barbara Newberry, and Duke Ellington and his orchestra. Ziegfeld may have another "Show Boat" here—watch it.

The Earl Carroll "Sketch Book" has been widely advertised as the product of Eddie Cantor's brain—a fact which has peeved Mr. Ziegfeld no end. This does not mean that Mr. Cantor will appear in it; he only wrote the book. The cast will include Will Mahoney, William Demarest, Patsy Kelly, the Phelps sisters and Eileen Healey. Mr. Carroll is so enthusiastic over the "Sketch Book" that he already announces he will do a "Sketch Book" every year. But then, Mr. Carroll has been pre-enthusiastic before. Maybe he will have more luck after his disastrous "Fioretta."

Spring Gala Talent Here

suta station demonstrated how well the Indian element in our history could be managed as musical entertainment. Both land and water industries round about us are sufficiently picturesque as background for the songs of our people. Carl Sandburg has them ready for us in his "American Songbag." They are songs of the street, the circus, the mills and the public house.

Three of our best known American composers, Stephen Foster, Ethelbert Nevin and Charles Wakefield Cadman, belong to Pittsburgh. About their lives, we could easily build the festival spirit, for they all offer us settings again for our pageantry—the plantation, the wigwam and the prairie, the mauve decade.

Let us look at our foreign population. Whether its members come from the East or the West in Europe, they bring with them the music of singing nations. They are acquainted with art as well as folk music and dances. One's imagination is dazed with the color of costume and music that the Pole, the Italian, the Hungarian and people of the lower Balkan nations would contribute to our festival.

Rich in Material

If we should concentrate on folk exhibition exclusively, and include our country fiddlers, renew our social dances—the quadrilles, Harvard gavotte, the redowa and schottische—invite some Pumpkin Center brass bands, we then could find something in music, rich and genuinely American, as well as entertaining and instructive to the younger generations.

Neither should our university band and the Tech Kilties be omitted, and they should be asked to play only the rowdy marches that hail a Pitt or Tech football victory.

Now, should we turn classical for an evening or two, for such a festival we have a large athletic bowl that would house grand opera under reasonably quiet conditions. We could unite our professional and amateur choirs, we could enlist our new Pittsburgh orchestra and find endless possibilities for our success.

But alas! Pittsburghers have not yet learned to employ her natural musical resources. Until that fruitful time when it has however, we shall not cease our pleadings.

Koch Ends Organ Recitals Sunday

THE last free organ recital of the season will be given in Carnegie Hall, North Side, at 3 o'clock this Sunday afternoon by Dr. Caspar Koch. Helen Metzger Johston, soprano, will be the guest soloist. Lyman Almy Perkins will play the accompaniment. Dr. Koch's transcription of Mendelssohn's overture to "A Midsummer Night's Dream" will head the program.

Enright Stage Has 'Bang Bang'

"BANG! BANG!" will be the attraction on the Enright stage this week. Dick Powell will be in his usual capacity as master of ceremonies. The entertainers will include the Collett Sisters, songsters and dancers; Martin and Mayo, in a comedy adagio act, and Milo, the mysterious. On the screen Dolores Costello will be featured in "Madonna of Avenue A."

Stanley Stage Gets 'Vanities'

"VANITIES" is the title of the revue Charlie Melson will offer on the Stanley stage this week. The performers will include Helen Kennedy, songster and dancer, and Frank Melano and company. On the screen will be "The Gamblers," an all-talkie. Dave Broudy and Bernie Armstrong have arranged another musical novelty, "The Spirit of the Fourth."

Play-Hunting in Summer No Sport for American Too Heated for Thinking

pieces, but they go on playing. What's more, they go on playing to large houses.

They don't see any necessity to ice the temperature or to serve cold lemonade between acts, either. True, a good seidel of Muenchner does help out considerably in the midst of "Die Meistersinger." But, beer or no beer, nobody dreams of staying away because of such a frivolous, friendly thing as the heat. Ten times pleasanter to perspire in the goodly company of actors and fellow audience than to keep tepid at home.

Thought Is Feared

The great fear from which we suffer is evidently one of doing too much thinking in the summer time. Not that Americans like to do too much thinking in the theater in any season, rain or shine, hot or cold. But particularly when it's hot. Then we seem to threaten ourselves with nothing less than apoplexy, melancholia and a rash of mental measles if we dare make our brains turn over twice.

Learned gentlemen—not at all in the employ of the theatrical interests—have written volumes to the contrary. They have proven, via gimlet and X-ray and indisputable deductions, that the human brain is really never so spry as when the sun shines strong upon its casing, and when the air which gives it fuel is in a state of strong sizzle.

Summer time, in short, is man's best thinking time. It is the time when we Americans might even come to understand Strindberg.

But Strindberg, Ibsen, Kaiser & Co. (the standbys of modern repertories abroad, no matter what the thermometer confesses) are not for us in warm weather. Our Midsummer Night's Dream is a dream of glorified girlies. Of these and nothing else. Having reached that point in middle age where a man is allowed to wonder a bit about this subject, I take the liberty of wondering why.

No Tax on Noodle

A summer show is a show which (in America) not only guarantees no tax on the machinery of the noodle, but which promises to substitute no end of song-and-dance excitements, long lines of young leggery, swift fusillades of wisecracks amid the setting-up exercises of the great make descendi.

I trust I am not growing too personal when I ask you to consider the thermal effects of such an entertainment on your normal constitution. For my own part, I know of nothing warmer to behold than a pony ballet in action in that warmest of costumes, the well-nigh nothing-at-all, on a July night. I can think of nothing more akin in its effect to the spiced wine that ancient royalty used to drink on their wedding eve than the vision of an over-hilarious beauty-bevy squdging through the routine romp.

There is, I'm sure, a place for these girlicues. I think it lies somewhere in February or March, somewhere around that time of year when bundling used to be most popular among our so-called Puritan ancestors, and when the sap of spring is just beginning to hammer in all boughs. But in midsummer I'd ten times rather watch some coolly dressed and quiet mannered gentlefolk sit sensibly still, and hear them say things which have weight enough to take my mind off the weather.

In brief, let's exchange seasons. Let's have little shows for Christmas and Ibsen for Independence Day. Then, maybe, the theaters will stay open and stay filled all year.

meowing of the Broadway pussycats.

Even the cash customers have been clinging to their fire escapes and beach chairs, instead of checking in at the Times Square box offices. "Broadway Melody," that smash sell-out of the Astor, represents the public interest in the movies with a slump to $13,000 from its consistent $20,000.

"On With the Show," with its $16,000 at the Winter Garden, is rated a hit, though a fair winter figure for the theater is $35,000.

New Barthelmess Hit

The Roxy has managed to hold up most of the Broadway business, with a gorgeous refrigerator, Lou Holtz on the stage, and "Four Devils" on the screen. It grosses $110,000, a big percentage of all the movie money spent on Broadway.

"Drag" has come into the Warner Theater. And once again Richard Barthelmess has turned out a hit. George Bancroft's "Thunderbolt" at the Rivoli also has received enthusiastic comment.

Most of the two dozen movie attractions on Broadway are anaemic. "Four Feathers," "Broadway," "Broadway Babies," "Bulldog Drummond," "Madame X," all technically hit pictures, fail to show it at the box office.

Beer gardens are the only Times Square attractions which can do capacity business during a heat wave. They may not have electric signs on Broadway, but the local amusement seekers will pass up a 24-sheet heralding Clara Bow for the faint scent of free lunch liverwurst from the beerstube around the corner.

Find Sally At Studios

SALLY is found at last! She is out in Hollywood, ready to invade the talking pictures.

She is, of course, Marilyn Miller, favorite of the footlights, who is to make the screen version of "Sally," her most successful stage play, for First National-Vitaphone Pictures.

Miss Miller has just arrived in the film capital, and is already intrigued by the studios and the unusual routine demanded of screen players.

John Francis Dillon is to direct the star in her first screen offering, and Alexander Gray, popular young leading man of the stage, will appear opposite her. Others in the cast will be Joe E. Brown, T. Roy Barnes and Ford Sterling. Pert Kelton, clever ingenue, also will have a role in the picture, which goes into production soon.

Dolores Del Rio On Penn Stage

DOLORES DEL RIO, star of the screen, will make her first personal appearance in Pittsburgh on the stage of the Penn Monday. Miss Del Rio also will be heard from the screen in her new film, "Evangeline." Although Miss Del Rio is not a part of the regular stage unit, "Circus Cabaret," she will be introduced by Wesley Eddy during the presentation of that show. Other attractions in the show will be Walzer and Dyer, comedians; Walter and Betty Reddick, dancers; Fink and Ayers, roller skaters; Vera Van, prima donna, and the Foster Girls Ensemble. There will be a Dick Leibert organlogue and an Elias Breeskin overture.

West View Plans Fireworks Display

A PROGRAM of special events in West View Park on the Fourth of July will include a baseball game at 2:30 p. m. between the Stowe Civics and the Pleasant Valley Smilers. The night feature will be the "Battle in the Clouds," a fireworks spectacle, which will take place at 10:15 o'clock. Izzy Cervone and his band will be heard in concerts this Sunday.

Same Hero For Norma

NORMA TALMADGE is preparing to launch work on her first all talking picture, "Tin Pan Alley"—and Gilbert Roland again will play the lead opposite the United Artists star. Originally it was planned to cast Roland as the villain in the screen version of the New York stage success, but just before rehearsals started, John Wray, New York stage star, was signed by John W. Considine, Jr., general production executive, to handle the heavy characterization, thus releasing the popular leading man for the hero's part.

Roland and Wray, with Lilyan Tashman, Roscoe Karns and Mary Doran make up the notable supporting cast for Miss Talmadge's dialogue feature to be directed by Lewis Milestone. Wray rushed to Hollywood from New York on such short notice that a script was sent to him via air mail, reaching him at Kansas City, and he was ready for rehearsals when he arrived in the film capital. Wray incidentally created the same role in the original stage production of "Tin Pan Alley" that he will portray on the talking screen.

"Tin Pan Alley" is Miss Tashman's second United Artists all talking picture, the actress being one of the featured players in Ronald Colman's "Bulldog Drummond." Karns was the star of "The Front Page" on the stage and is also well known in pictures. Miss Doran has won prominence on both stage and screen.

"Tin Pan Alley" was chosen by story experts of the Joseph M. Schenck organization from a field of 20 available plays, novels and originals as the ideal vehicle for Miss Talmadge's first talkie. The story is laid in present-day New York and is said to be crammed with romance, drama and comedy.

In switching Roland to the romantic lead, United Artists gives him his fourth consecutive role opposite Miss Talmadge. He achieved his initial success in "Camille" and followed with "The Dove" and "The Woman Disputed."

Laura Likes Comic Roles

ennes. Officially she is still a comedienne in spite of the fact that Magnolia in "Show Boat" is really a dramatic role and her next part and the next after that will give her dramatic scenes.

Good hard work had a lot to do with it, and ambition to try something new.

"I'm still scared of dramatic roles," she admitted. "I haven't succeeded in convincing myself yet. I watch myself on the screen, and I can't help feeling that I have a lot to learn. You see, I've never had any training for anything but comedy—and as for the talkies, I just go ahead and talk; all the rules about voice production and so on are so much Greek to me.

Tries to Be Natural

"I try to be natural, that's all. If it comes out right, that's so much the better. If it's wrong, I have to learn by experience."

If all comedians are supposed to cherish secret ambitions to play Hamlet, comediennes are traditionally believed to yearn to play Lady Macbeth or something like that—but not Laura La Plante.

"Comedy is too much fun," she candidly admitted. "I enjoy making people laugh. Besides, I'd be a terrible flop in tragedy. What I really like is a comedy role with something real behind it—a part like Magnolia. She was a joy to play—if she did have me scared at first."

Every time that Laura La Plante can steal a few minutes from directors and dressmakers and photographers and other people like that, she runs away and goes shopping for her house.

The house is away down by the ocean, nearly 40 miles from Universal City—yes, she drives back and forth every day—and eight miles beyond the film colony that is growing up on the far side of Malibu.

"It's the most beautifully quiet and lonesome place you can imagine," she said.

"And there isn't any telephone," she added, as the bell of her dressing room telephone rang for the fourth time.

She is attending to the furnishing of the house herself—when she gets a chance. It was suggested that Husband Williams Seiter might help occasionally.

"I don't let him," Miss La Plante announces firmly. "That's my job."

Coming of Mountain To Mohammet Regular Routine of Stage Art

balcony of artistic and romantic beauty there will appear the humble abodes of the poor. Where last week there was tensity, complexity and drama, there will be comedy and simplicity and sentiment. Where Shylock formerly cursed his enemies Mrs. Wiggs will beam in kindness and in hope.

Thus does the mountain come and depart in the theater, which knows no earthly boundary. Thus do characters come and go, roaming, unsettled people with no fixed abode save in the hearts of those who summon them to appear in visible form for a while and then to retire to make room for others.

What a place is a theater stage! Mrs. Wiggs—who typifies her? An actress. Who made her live many years ago? A different actress. And what of Miss Hazy and Mr. Stebbins of now and of other times? The characters are changeless while those who play them become different persons each week, another indication of the subjection to the modern Mohammet. Mountain, come to Mohammet. There is no fear that you will fall and crush those who summon you now.

Nightly the stage is a vivid part of the world, ancient or modern, near or remote, and nightly it is the far bank of the Styx, along which are the ghost cities and spectral forms of those who people them when the footlights gleam. When the curtain rises on "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" Monday night we shall be in old Looeyville.

When it descends we shall return to our homes in Pittsburgh. The stage will be darkened, Louisville will disappear in the blackness. All will be quiet. Voices will have been silenced, romance and comedy, tragedy and its masks, the stage, itself, and its strutters will be invisible, even though one remains in his seat after the play is finished. Then on the succeeding night it recreates itself as part of romance land, the alternation continuing until Mohammet calls for another mountain.

And so it goes on, week after week, in the theater. This week, Mrs. Wiggs—next week, a different play, different characters, who, in their turn, will trod the boards for their little while and then join the ghostly conclave on the far bank of the Styx.

Besides Mrs. Wiggs, the stage offerings for the week are the presentations accompanying feature photoplays in the Penn, where Dolores Del Rio is to be a special attraction, Stanley and Enright.

Comedy in Pitt Is 'Mrs. Wiggs'

ANOTHER comedy, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," is to be presented by the George Sharp Players in the Pitt for a week, beginning Monday. This old play, which reached the stage as a result of the great popularity of the book of the same title by Alice Hegan Rice, was one of the hits of the period of its original production and its popularity has been continuous. It has been revived many times by stock companies throughout the country and its drawing power has been proved to be of the most durable quality. It is peopled with characters of simple, homely mold, set in poor surroundings and unfolding a charming story. At the conclusion of the Saturday matinee there will be a party on the stage for children.

Excursion Boat Bookings Many

ABOUT ready to go into commission, the excursion steamer Greater Pittsburgh, formerly the Homer Smith, has been scheduled by a number of outstanding organizations of the Pittsburgh district for their annual outings. Joseph B. Shaw, booking agent for the Greater Pittsburgh, has listed trips beginning July 1, with the outing of McKinley Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star. Thereafter, throughout the month, there will be outings each week day. July 23, in the afternoon, the Allegheny County Council Boy Scouts of America, will be on board as guests of the owners.

Kennywood Park Gets Aerial Act

AN aerial act, the "Sensational Jacks," is the new free outdoor attraction in Kennywood Park. The Westinghouse Band will play two concerts this Sunday. Izzy Cervone's Band will render the concerts on the Fourth. The Kennywoodians, dance orchestra, has replaced the Playboys at the dance pavilion.

tea and grapefruit, so she refuses them and sticks to the lamb chops. That is one thing no dieter can do and succeed. Bess Meredyth, at the end of four days, lost five pounds and immediately started having her clothes made smaller.

Ha, One Failure!

Mrs. Larry Wheat, at a bathing party at Buster Keaton's house last Sunday, said she hadn't lost a pound. So far as I know she is the first one to try the 18-day punishment and not to get rid of a few superfluous pounds. Mrs. Peg Talmadge, who questioned her, decided that Mrs. Wheat drank too much water with her meals to make the diet practical. There is something wrong somewhere, for every man and woman in Hollywood who has stuck to the diet for a week has lost a noticeable amount of weight.

George Bancroft, who is vacationing at the moment between pictures, is eating anything his appetite craves. His friends, who saw how much weight he has added during the few weeks he has been idle, asked him how he would get rid of his extra poundage.

"Simplest thing in the world," said George, striking a pose in his bathing sut. "I shall have to go on the 18-day diet 18 days before I begin my next picture."

At Maliou Beach, where a large colony of film stars, including Clara Bow, Ruth Chatterton, Lila Lee, Evelyn Brent, Allan Dwan, Herbert Brenon and others, spend their time during the heated season, the 18-day diet is the principal topic of conversation.

Four Days Too Long

One of the 18-day dieters writes that she has lost 10 pounds in two weeks and from that day until the end of her diet she was unable to drop another pound. Physicians would probably say that some of Miss X's fat was bloat and that perhaps she had lost all the proper superfluous flesh. An acid condition following this diet was noticeable. One of Hollywood's most reputable physicians, among whose patients are numbered some of the well-known film folk, says a teaspoonful of citro carbonate three times a day will counteract the acid condition.

Different folk have had different experiences, and it will be interesting to know how other of our readers are faring. The film folk, for the most part, are getting splendid results, but the grocers and the restaurant owners lament that whoever started this 18-day diet fad, is ruining their business.

DESERT

"Cocoanuts" On Screen

Virginia. He got his degree and a head full of Latin and Greek. And then what do you suppose he did? He went to Baltimore and started acting in stock productions. And he's been at the emoting game ever since.

"The Dummy," which isn't dumb at all, being a 100 per cent talkie, is the new film booking in the Aldine. Stage and screen players are in the cast. These include Ruth Chatterton, Frederick March, Mickey Bennett and John Cromwell. There's a boy hero in it who masters the deaf and dumb language so he may become a detective. Thus, the picture's title.

The Cocoanut Parade

The big cocoanut parade is on! All of which is another way of saying the Marx brotherly aggregation is in town. Yep, all four of them—Groucho, Harpo, Zeppo and Chico. They make their screen debut in "The Cocoanuts,"—movie version of their comical and musical stage show—in the Grand. Naturally, the production is one of those all talk, song and, we suppose, dance pictures.

"High Voltage," starring William Boyd, is to be seen and heard in the Harris and Sheridan Square. It is an all-talkie. The story is that of six human beings who face death in a deserted meeting house—marooned from the outside world by snow; heaps of it, if we judge our movies correctly.

This fellow Boyd has done some climbing since he first became a part of world affairs as a grocery clerk and automobile salesman. From grocery and motor car peddling, he tried oil drilling. But that wasn't so much fun, so he trekked out to California and pictures. His big chance came in "The Volga Boatman." He made good and has been busy in the studios ever since.

And here just a word about Dolores Costello's "The Madonna of Avenue A," which we mentioned in paragraph No. 1 as being Enright bound. It has sound and talk. The cast includes Grant Withers and Louise Dresser. Grant is the fellow who displayed a swell head, but won the girl anyway in "The Time, the Place and the Girl." As for Miss Dresser, all fandom knows her as a talented character woman.

Other picture bookings of the week include Jack Holt in "The Donovan Affair," in the Regent; Paul Page and Lola Lane in "Speakeasy," William Penn and Mt. Oliver; John Boles and Carlotta King in "The Desert Song," Liberty, Colonial and South Hills, and John Barrymore in "Eternal Love," Garden.

Movie Go Round

BY LOUELLA O. PARSONS

caught. Yes, indeed, and Lily admits she has found Harry Richman most attractive. They are at the moment Hollywood's most interesting pair. How long it will last is a matter that need not concern us.

GILDA GRAY takes her pen in hand to say that she will soon be in Hollywood. But she doesn't give this information without expressing her extreme annoyance over an article in this column. "Since I left Mr. Boag I never looked and felt better. Just to contradict your 20-pound story, I now weigh exactly 127½ pounds. If that sounds like 20 pounds heavier, then you and I don't know each other.' She goes on to say "The Devil Dancer" has grossed over a million dollars. Well, I am not surprised. I have seen worse pictures make money. There is no accounting for taste.

Movie Casualties

THE casualties in the film colony this last week have ranged from a broken toe to a blackened eye. Sounds like a fight, but it's only an accident. Ruth Chatterton's beautifully blackened optic was caused by a beach umbrella which toppled over and hit her in the face. Ruth Roland broke her toe while she was rehearsing for a sketch at the Writers' Club. I might mention a few good sunburns. Rose Pelswick out in Hollywood writing movies for the New York Evening Journal has been literally burned to a crisp. Her shoulders are so blistered that she can neither sit nor stand in comfort.

SIDNEY BLACKMER, having spent four hours away from Lenore Ulric, decided he'd better telephone her and find out how she was getting along. He found that she had left the studio for the Beverly-Wilshire Hotel, so he telephoned her, saying: "I love you, I love you, I love you." When he received no answer he said, "Why don't you speak?" A voice on the other end of the wire said, "It sounds very nice, but who loves me?" It was Ruth Elder to whom Blackmer was giving this outpouring of affection. Excuse mistake, please, wrong number!

Marion Nixon to Wed

THE little girl who married Joe Benjamin one day when he was a champion fighter is about to become the bride of a wealthy young Chicago man. Her name is Marian Nixon, and she is the type men love and seldom leave. Marian could have married any one of a dozen young men the last year. In fact, she spent most of her days denying that she had any matrimonial intentions. Then came Edward Hillman, Jr., into her life. As the son and heir of one of the wealthy Chicago merchants, Eddie had entree into our most exclusive film circles, but he took one look at Marian Nixon and no other girl had a chance. Their marriage is only a matter of a few months.

THE Lido has nothing on the Santa Monica and Malibu beaches. Pajamas are worn in place of sport dresses. Any hot afternoon you might look around you and imagine you were at the famous Italian resort instead of on the edge of the Pacific Ocean. These pajamas range in materials from gay silks to cotton fabrics. One particularly effective suit was worn with a bright red blouse and coat with tan trousers. The stars who have been working too hard to enjoy the beaches have lounging pajamas in their wardrobes. Marion Davies, Evelyn Brent, Norma Talmadge, Lila Lee and others of our screen beauties find these garments not only smart but comfortable.

Aldine Screen Has 'The Dummy'

A 100 PER CENT talking picture, "The Dummy," will be shown in the Aldine for a week, beginning Monday. Ruth Chatterton plays the feminine lead. Others in the cast include Frederick March and John Cromwell, both Broadway players. Another player is Mickey Bennett, who appears as the boy hero who masters the deaf and dumb language to become a detective. Movietone and Vitaphone sound, acts and the Fox Movietone News will complete the bill.

'The Cocoanuts' Film in Grand

"THE COCOANUTS" is the new photoplay in the Grand. It is the all-talking version of the musical comedy and, like the stage production, stars the Four Marx Brothers. The cast of the film also has been augmented by Oscar Shaw and Mary Eaton. The picture locale is Florida. Groucho and Zeppo of he Marx family are seen as hotel owners, while the two remaining brothers, Harpo and Chico, are irresponsible guests. The musical comedy has been transformed to the screen practically intact, it is said.

Menjou Has Singing Role

ADOLPHE MENJOU'S singing as well as speaking voice will be heard in his new, and first, Paramount all-talking picture, "Fashions in Love." Victor Schertzinger, director of the photoplay, also composed the music for the song that Menjou will sing: "Delphine," the words for which were written by Leo Robin, well-known lyricist.

Miss Costello Star in Enright

"MADONNA OF AVENUE A," talking picture starring Dolores Costello, will be the feature attraction in the Enright this week. Dolores plays a girl who has for years attended a fashionable boarding school, but who realizes at length that the compelling force of heredity has brought to her various unconventional traits. The cast includes Grant Withers, Louise Dresser and Douglas Gerard. On the stage, Dick Powell will present "Bang! Bang!"

Liberty, Colonial Get 'Desert Song'

"THE DESERT SONG," Vitaphone version of the stage operetta, will be the attraction in both the Liberty and the Colonial this week. John Boles has the leading role. The cast includes Carlotta King, Myrna Loy, Louise Fazenda, Johnny Arthur and John Miljan.

Mt. Oliver Books Monte Blue Film

"SPEAKEASY," talk film of New York life, will be presented in the Mt. Oliver on Monday and Tuesday. The picture Wednesday and Thursday will be "Trent's Last Case." On Friday and Saturday Monte Blue's "From Headquarters" will be offered.

'Eternal Love' Garden Picture

"IN OLD ARIZONA," with Warner Baxter, will be the photoplay in the Garden the first three days of this week. The picture Thursday, Friday and Saturday will be "The Donovan Affair," an all-talkie, starring Jack Holt.

Penn Photoplay Is 'Evangeline'

AFTER an absence of nearly a year, Dolores Del Rio, who makes her first personal appearance on the stage of the Penn Monday, will be seen on the screen in "Evangeline," her latest picture for United Artists. Dealing with the romance of Evangeline and Gabriel, Longfellow's immortal lovers, and the tragic days when the Acadians—a peaceable people settled at Grand Pre, Novia Scotia—were torn from their home and deported to various sections of the United States, "Evangeline" is said to offer a soul-stirring dramatic tragedy and a romance marked by enduring love and willing sacrifice. The stage show will be "Circus Cabaret."

'The Gamblers' Stanley Talkie

THE Stanley screen this week will present "The Gamblers," first attraction of "Greater Talkie Month." It offers the activity that marks the external life of Wall Street. Lois Wilson, H. B. Warner and George Fawcett are cast in the leading roles. The plot revolves around the "borrowing" of $5,000,000 by the officials of the Emerson Trust Company and used by them in their operations in the stock market. They are discovered by a government prosecutor, the jealous husband of young Emerson's former sweetheart. On the stage, Charlie Melson will present "Vanities."

Boyd Talkie for Harris, Sheridan

"HIGH VOLTAGE," all-talkie, will be presented in the Harris all this week. The picture also will be offered in the Sheridan Square for three days, beginning Monday. William Boyd is the star and the story background is the snow-bound Sierras in California. The cast includes Owen Moore, Diane Ellis, Carol Lombard and Phillips Smalley.

Movie Operetta In South Hills

"THE DESERT SONG," movie operetta, will be offered in the South Hills on Monday and Tuesday. The film Wednesday and Thursday will be "careers," With Billie Dove. Friday and Saturday will bring Corinne Griffith's "Saturday's Children."

Mystery Fad Grips Movies

ANYONE who can forecast the fickle public's taste in screen entertainment is worth a million dollars in Hollywood. Ask a producer who has failed to follow the trend. Fortunes are lost this way, overnight. Change comes quickly.

Today, the mystery story is in favor. Lenore Coffee has been assigned the adaptation, continuity and dialog of "The Bishop Murder Case," to be made by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The box office gives favorable reports of other mystery plays.

"Vicarious thrills are always most interesting," says Miss Coffee. "Mystery plays are not ordinary. We do not live them ourselves, and the public always likes the unusual. I feel that the trend toward this type of story will be stronger than ever after 'The Bishop Murder Case' is made into a talking picture."

'Donovan Affair' Regent Booking

"THE DONOVAN AFFAIR," all-talking mystery, will be the attraction on the Regent screen Monday and Tuesday. The plot of the story concerns the murder of one Jack Donovan at a dinner party. Jack Holt is cast in the leading role.

Two Talk Films In William Penn

MONDAY, Tuesday and Wednesday the William Penn will present "Speakeasy," an all-talkie of New York life. Thursday, Friday and Saturday the picture will be "Mother's Boy," with Morton Downey. This is a talking and singing feature.

ROPING the NEWS - by Will Rogers

Mrs. Hoover Knows Her Business, Will Says

WELL all I know is just what I read in the papers. Lets just run over a few of the high spots that have jammed up the press in the last few weeks. A week or so ago there was quite an attempt to try and make something out of the fact that the colored Congressman's wife got so far in the White House that she got three saucers of tea before anybody knew it.

Now wait a minute, lets get this straight. If there is one thing that this Country has been especially happy in its been the fact that we have been continually blessed with some fine charming Women in the White House. Some of the men might have been able to stand a little overhauling, but I tell you there has never been a chirp of regret out of anyone about the Female occupants. Its all right to say the Coolidges, the Hardings, the Wilsons, and all those dident do it, but the opportunity was not put up to them. There was no colored Congressman in their time, Dixie hadent reached Chicago.

Now Mrs. Hoover knows what she is doing. If it was a custom for the First Lady of the White House to entertain all the Congressmen wives, then when a colored one come along there was nothing else to do. When he was elected and ready to be seated there was no one in a position to say they wouldent sit with him in Congress. No, it was a custom and nothing was thought of it. So thats just about the way that Mrs. Hoover looked at it Neither party refuses their votes, and you got to give em a little consideration.

SO that blew over pretty quick and we were in the throes of some other scandal. Some Bird made arrangements with the French Government to Stowaway and prevent their plane from making France. Suppose Lyndberg had taken somebody along for Publicity to write the Story of the trip. Pretending to hide on an Aeroplane trip strikes me as having about the same value as to jump on some friends back and ride them when they were in a foot race. Thats about the amount of aid you would be to them.

Well then that had no more than quieted down till some Professor (I guess it was Harvard, we always look to them for the freak things) he made the Boys a talk about not aiming too low. Said instead of marrying the Stenographer aim for the Bosses Daughter. Now wait a minute. Have you seen ALL the Bosses daughters? You look 'em over and it will take quite a sacrifice to give up the Stenographer and take The Daughter.

COURSE when he advised the Boys to be as "Snooty" as possible and do anything they could to advance themselves, why that raised a yell that went round the World. Well there was no use howling about it. It was nothing but "An Old English Custom." Englishman have been working that system for years. They always aim above em. What really hurt was that the old Professor really had about the dope on it. He dident have to tell em to do that, they are doing it already.

Looks as If Wales Will Stay Single

Higher education is doing more to teach it to them than all the professors that would tell them to do it.

Course everybody broke into print and said it shouldent be that way. But there was so much truth in the old Professors advice that it had em winging to answer it. Whats the use kidding ourselves? What makes em high hat any quicker than education? They got to be high hat to keep up with the rest of their gang, and mabe its better that they are. Its pretty tough on us but we just cant have the children do like we do. We are always drilling into them, "When I was a Boy we dident do that." But we forget that we are not doing those same old things today. We changed with the times, so we cant blame the children got just joining the times, without even having to change. We are always telling em what we used to not do. We dident do it because we dident think of it. We did everything we could think of. We drove a horse and Buggy but we dont drive one now. So we just got to sit and watch em go, and I tell you they got to go some to keep up with us. If anyone of us had a child that we thought was as bad as we know we are we would have cause to start to worry.

WELL now I got Youth all set and old age on the run, lets see what our Government has been doing. Well it was the funniest thing. It commenced to get hot in Washington and they wanted to go home and they started to "passing." Say, they would pass anything. They would have cancelled the debt if it had come up when the thermometer was hot enough.

Now they go home for two months, and that will give em enough time to think up some devilment. They dident get the tarriff fixed; they are leaving that. They go home and wait for offers, see which side will do the best by them.

Mr. Dawes opened his Campaign in England before the boat had docked and it looks like him and that Labor Government will hit it off pretty well. They havent got a laboring man in England that can do more work than Charley. We havent sent anybody to France yet. Thats a good idea, about the best way to get along with them is to stay away from them.

PRINCE OF WALES marriage is declared off, which means I suppose that it will happen, thats generally about the type of strategy that they always use. Thats called Diplomacy, doing just what you said you wouldent.

Owen D. Young (AND A DEMOCRAT) is back, after a fine record in Europe. J. P. Morgan was with him over there. But kinder in the capacity of Vice Pres. See where Mr. Coolidge is going to write for some magazine.

Thats just about all there has been lately in the papers. Unless you want Murders, and those of course you got to order. Whatever kind of murder you want why just write to your favorite tabloid and they will, if you get ten signers, have the murder for you.

Great Modern Doings

By Stephen Leacock

"Next War May Not Happen"

ALONG with a great many other people, I begin to feel that it is time that something was done about the "Next War." The public are constantly being too much alarmed about it, and it is fitting that someone should undertake to reassure them.

I am well aware of the terrific prophecies that are being made. I know that Maj. Gen. Fitz-Bung, the great artillery expert, has told the press that in the "coming war" the range of guns will be a hundred miles; that Admiral O'Breezy has declared that in the next war submarines a quarter of a mile long will be pitted against battle ships 500 feet high; that the great chemical expert, Herr Schwefelstink, says that in the next war poisonous gas will pour over the whole civilized world and especially on civilians, women and children, hospitals, homes for incurables, and golf clubs. The aerial experts, I know, offer to let loose a bomb that will lift London into the North Sea.

I am quite aware that the military writers all agree that the war after the next will be a corker, and that the next war but two will probably be about as bad a war as the world will see till the fourth war, in which the entire human race, if they have any luck at all, will be exterminated.

Personally, I take no stock in it at all. It's not going to happen. The mistake that people like Gen. Fitz-Bung and Admiral O'Breezy make is that they are unaware of a whole lot of new influences that are coming into the world. Let me show what I mean by looking forward about 20 years, and then backward about 19, so as to show in retrospect just what happened, and why it was that the "next great was" never happened.

THIS war was to have been as between England and the United States. It was all set and staged to break out early in the summer of 1930.

The precipitating cause, that is, the cause that should have precipitated it, was one of those high-class diplomatic "incidents" which no self-respecting nation can tolerate. An American sailor was thrown out of a saloon in Singapore right onto the sidewalk on the mere ground that he had been in the saloon long enough.

The newspapers on both sides of the Atlantic were immediately filled with the "incident." All America agreed that the affront was one that no high-chested nation ought to take with equanimity. The British retorted that the right to throw anyone out of a British saloon at any time was a fundamental part of the British constitution, which no determined, self-respecting, bull-necked people would ever allow to be curtailed.

But just at this stage there intervened the opening of the second annual international dog show in London, in which the first prize for Belgian police dogs was carried off by an American dog from Idaho. The enthusiasm and excitement over this, on both sides of the Atlantic, was such that the Singapore sailor was entirely forgotten. When the incident turned up again, America agreed that the sailor probably needed throwing out anyway, and British people urged that at least the sailor ought to be put back again in the saloon and stood up at the bar at the expense of the British government.

BUT right after that came the international chess match in Vienna, and then the tour of the Welsh choir in the United States—two hundred voices at a pressure of fifty pounds per inch—and the whole episode was forgotten.

This looked a fine war. It was to have been between England and France with the United States purely neutral and sinking the ships of both. It should have been ready as of June the first, but just at that very moment Alphonse Jules de Marigny won the golf championship of England in the great three-day competition at Scarborough, and on the very same day, by an odd coincidence, Hoke Peters, of Pie Corners, Oklahoma, won the golf championship of all France at Deauville; Edward Beauclere de Montmorency (a direct cousin of the Earl of Hasbeen won the American championship at Paterson, N. J.; and Angus Macpherson Macrae, of Dumfoolish, the great Scottish expert, issued a challenge to play off against all winners at ten cents a hole, cash down before hitting a ball.

This upset the whole war. As the President of France said over the radio that evening, "Is this a time for making a war?" and the United States minister to Great Britain, speaking over the telephone to Siam, assured the world that golf had replaced all other forms of argument.

THE 1933 war was spoiled by the Oxford and Cambridge boat race. It ought to have been a real peach, and indeed all through February and March it looked as if world-wide destruction might be let loose at any moment.

The incident—it is not recorded just what it was—was admitted to be one of the nastiest, dirtiest incidents that had turned up in 10 years. The American Secretary of State had written a dispatch in which he said that if the incident turned out in the way he was sure it was going to turn out, his government would have to consider the matter as one of those matters they would have to consider. This brutal language almost carried war with it. And the situation was made even worse when the British Foreign Secretary replied that His Majesty's government was not prepared to admit that anything had happened, but that the whole circumstances would be investigated and if when they were investigated they turned out as he knew they would turn out, His Majesty's government would feel themselves compelled to take whatever steps they felt they ought to take.

This open and direct threat brought war to within 48 hours, and set up a feverish activity in all the paper factories, rubber factories, and gas companies of two continents.

Then that very afternoon came the astounding news that Oxford had at last beaten Cambridge in the annual boat race, and that the principal factor in the victory undoubtedly was that the Oxford boat contained five Americans, whereas Cambridge, very foolishly, had only four. The wild enthusiasm and the celebration of this event in London, Denver, Saskatoon (Saskatchewan), Phoenix (Arizona), and other great boating centers, dissipated all thought of war.

THE collapse of the British-American war of 1933 was followed by several years of despairing quiet. For a little while it looked as if there was a chance of getting Serbia to fight Czechoslovakia, or of working up something as between the Latts of Latvia and the Slats of the Dantzig corridor; with good luck this might have started a conflagration that would have spread through all Europe, and sideways through Greenland to Canada and the United States.

Experts openly declared that only a spark was needed; unluckily during that very summer a main motor highway (London to Bagdad) was opened up via Latvia and Slatvia and an influx of American tourists poured into the country. The president of Latvia telegraphed at once: "This thing is too good to spoil, let us be friends," and all chance of war was gone.

A last blow was struck in 1940. This year was to have witnessed the great Europe-Asia conflict, which all military experts had for 20 years declared unavoidable. But at the moment when the war was about to burst, a famous American explorer returned from Central China with a dinosaur's egg—very old, but as good as new—and a British geologist returned from Western Mongolia with a robin's nest in a perfect state of preservation and a French scientist discovered in Cochin China, what was evidently one end (hard to say which) of a prehistoric megatherium, which must have been dead—which evidently had been dead—for over a million years.

And so, if one may point a moral too obvious to need pointing, the world gradually began to realize that there was something else in it as well as high explosives.

One of those high-class diplomatic incidents which no self-respecting nation can tolerate.

Mutter and Mumble

By J. P. MEDBURY

We're Almost Off on a Trip Across the Big Drink

MUTTER—Well, Mr. Mumble, if we're going to Europe we'd better get ready.

MUMBLE—Yes, I've been to seven travel agencies this morning.

MUTTER—That's plenty; remember that old saying?

MUMBLE—What old saying?

MUTTER—Too many cooks spoil the tour.

MUMBLE—Have you bought your luggage?

MUTTER—Sure, I purchased three trunks yesterday.

MUMBLE—What do you want with three trunks?

MUTTER—One for my clothes and two for the folders.

MUMBLE—I suppose you got your passport all fixed up?

MUTTER—Not yet; I've got to get a birth certificate.

MUMBLE—That ought to be easy; you know where you were born, don't you?

MUTTER—Sure. St. Luke's Hospital.

MUMBLE—Yes, but when?

MUTTER—I think it was a Tuesday.

MUMBLE—You'll have to be more definite than that.

MUTTER—I can't. I don't remember much about it, I was so young at the time.

MUMBLE—You'll have to give them a lot of information bout your parents. Who was your mother before she was married?

MUTTER—She wasn't.

MUMBLE—She wasn't what?

MUTTER—She wasn't my mother before she was married.

MUMBLE—Is your father an American citizen?

MUTTER—Yes, he was born in Canada, but he's been neutralized.

MUMBLE—You have to have a passport to get off the boat at Plymouth.

MUTTER—Is that so? I thought they used a gangplank.

MUMBLE—What about your wardrobe; you're taking a dinner jacket, aren't you?

MUTTER—Sure, a pajama coat.

MUTTER—It is if you eat in bed.

MUMBLE—We're sailing on the Ile de France, and everybody dresses on the boat.

MUMBLE—Nobody but millionaires travel on the French line.

MUTTER—That's all right. They're as good as anybody else.

MUMBLE—I hope you'll remember where you are and try to act like a gentleman.

MUTTER—I'll probably give as good an impersonation as you do.

MUMBLE—Are you taking any steamer rugs with you?

MUTTER—No; I thought they had carpets on the boat.

MUMBLE—I'm talking about deck robes; don't you think you'd like to lie under a blanket?

MUTTER—No, I'm used to sheets.

MUMBLE—That's got nothing to do with the daytime; at night, everybody sleeps under sheets.

MUTTER—You're crazy, my brother doesn't.

MUMBLE—Why not?

MUTTER—He's got insomnia.

MUMBLE—He could cure himself by reading a book when he goes to bed.

MUTTER—He tried it, but he couldn't stay awake long enough.

MUMBLE—While I think of it, are you going to take a letter of credit with you, or travelers' cheques?

MUTTER—Which is the best?

MUMBLE—Well, you can buy travelers' cheques for 75 cents a hundred.

Answer to Last Sunday's Puzzle

ONCE OVERS by O. O. McIntyre

Here's a Few Things That Columnists Learn

A FEW things you learn after years of writing a newspaper column:

Never reply to an ill-tempered letter or the poke of a contemporary.

The friendliest and most encouraging letters come from church members and church heads of all denominations.

The nastiest letters come from college professors.

Never repeat a joke you have once printed. They'll catch you 10 years later.

Most everybody likes to read a description of a tempting dish.

Never expect a "thank you" letter from an actor on the stage or screen. They accept praise as their due.

The most intolerant of all professions to criticism is the medical.

The friendliest attitude toward writers is on the west coast.

The severest critics are in Boston.

Every columnist has several anonymous correspondents who ring his mistakes in red and boo his efforts at intervals.

Also one or more pathetic correspondent who babbles incoherently from an insane asylum.

People who would hesitate to insult a confessed baby poisoner do not hesitate to send long distance insults to columnists.

Only two people have ever convinced me they were sincere in never wanting to see their names in print.

Publicity seekers are in two classes—those who want to be favorably mentioned and those who do not care so they are mentioned.

Never read a manuscript. Sooner or later you will find yourself accused of plagiarism.

The biggest kicks about the government deal with those who believe the income and inheritance taxes are unfairly imposed. Ninety-nine per cent of correspondents seem to think this.

The most uncomplaining letters come from shut-ins and those whose days are numbered.

Eastern Negroes protest when called "darkies." Down South they do not care.

Any story about a dog is always the inspiration for many letters.

No person receives so much epistolary advice as a columnist.

IN our town, Gallipolis, O., is another columnist, W. G. Sibley, who writes a daily piece that appears in Chicago and other big city papers. He is a conspicious example of the specious reasoning a writer must go to the city "to be discovered." Sibley attracted attention writing editorials for a four page daily and has authored several successful books. In my birth place, Plattsburg, Mo., there lives J. Breckenridge Ellis, who has been confined to a wheel chair since he was eight years old. He has written more than 30 full length novels, several of which have been best sellers. The most important thing about writing is "the urge to write." With that, no writer can be stopped.

IT is often said so-and-so is entering newspaper work as a stepping stone. I never knew anyone motivated by this idea to go far in journalism or any other calling. Writing is not a temporary makeshift. It is a career.

* * *

SHORT SHAVINGS: Hector Fuller, a dramatic critic, has refused an offer to become a tabloid columnist..The former Irene Castle is said to spend one-third of her income to further the protection of dumb animals......Bill Steinke, the jolly Bill of the radio, was never in a night club....Rudy Valee is said to have put $250,000 in safe securities already.... A girl who lived in a Fifth avenue hotel last summer is now living in Chinatown. Poppy!....One of the summer shows is titled 'Chippies."....And got an awful panning....Liberty magazine has enough manuscripts on hand to last it two years....Three New York millionaires won't own automobiles because of garage gypping .... A. M. Andrews has a home on Long Island, a yacht in the Hudson, a home in Pasadena and maintains a five room hotel apartment the year round.... The famous Jaques Bustanoby is to re-open a restaurant this Fall.. ..Cherry pie is the most popular of all pies in New York cafes.... Fashionable Newport is reported slightly passe this season .... Gene Fowler is back in newspaper work after a trip to China.... Mayor Walker "no like" jokes any more about being late ....The campaign is near.

THE stage names of American players have so little that smacks of reality any more. Leonore Ulric sounds as though it might be a medical term. And such as Lynn Fontanne, Francine Larrimore and Trixie Friganza you just know are thought up out of somebody's head. Very few professional names have the charm and simplicity of Mary Anderson or Denman Thompson.

WHEN only 15 of his professional friends attended the funeral of Ed Gallagher, a theatrical organization head excused the dereliction with: "It is because they are actors, all children and more or less irresponsible." That is a lot of hooey. It is because the average actor is interested in no one but himself. They are not so childish either. Most of them are adult enough to get more money for less work than the shrewdest bankers.

ONE of those half-sloshed pests with a night club pallor was annoying a diner in a Broadway cafe. Finally exasperated the diner queried: "How much will you charge to go haunt a house?"

* * *

THIS is the dull pea of the dramatic season when critics begin selecting the best current plays. If I were picking them, they would be listed:

No. 1—Journey's End.
No. 2—Street Scene.
No. 3—The Little Show.

NOTHING is, of course, hoodooed. It merely happens to play a part in a chain of coincidences. Nevertheless I have a cane I do not care to carry again. One day in London Frazier Hunt gave it to me saying: "Take it, it is a Jonah." And thus it proved. Something untoward always happens when I carry it. The ferrule has been broken off three times in hotel revolving doors. The last time I carried it I got into one of those childish quarrels with a total stranger because the cane tripped him in getting out of a theater seat.

THE advice to the graduating class of an Eastern college to follow Harvard and be snobbish if they wished to succeed may be all right. But it doesn't explain to me why three Harvard graduates in the last year sought my feeble assistance in getting jobs.

ON the other hand a young man from my forks of the creek, who had to quit high school in his second year to make a living, came to New York two years ago and with no assistance got a job as dish washer in a chain of restaurants. He was not too snobbish for this humble task. Today he manages 17 restaurants with a salary I'm certain tops the combined salaries of the Harvard boys. So there you are. Snobbery has never paid. The Kaiser was a snob.

BETWEEN US GIRLS

By Lloyd Mayer

Gerald Is a Bit Late With His Romance

TO Gerald Flingpudding romance came late. He didn't have the definite pronoun, third person single, neuter gender; but, on the other hand, neither did he have halitosis, an itinerant Adam's apple, nor flat feet.

But he did have a terrible inferiority complex, dating from early childhood, when little girls at dancing school used to run away, screaming, from his timid advances. That made Gerald think he wasn't attractive to women, and as he grew older and got nothing but the razz from the young ladies at whom he made amorous passes, the consciousness that there was something wrong with him strengthened until it became an obsession with the poor oaf.

He had himself psychoanalyzed and was told he ought to run to checked waistcoats and bright neckwear, and to eat liver or something. Gerald was debating suicide as an alternative to this drastic program when he met Sandie, who had been moving in so many circles, exclusive and otherwise, that she was actually getting nowhere, but just going round and round.

SANDIE was pretty dizzie as a result, and perhaps that is why she fell for Gerald at a speakeasy in the oul sma' hours, when swains keep their girlies yessing.

Actually, she picked Gerald up—from under a table.

"I LOVE you!" she murmured softly, as she managed to get him on his feet.

"All my life," said Gerald unsteadily, "I have been waiting for a wonderful girl to say that!"

"And I for a WONderful MAN like you!" she whispered throatily as they necked each other.

"Oh, excuse me," she continued contritely, turning to her escort, who was lowering at Gerald in an ugly way. "Do you two KNOW each other! I've forgotten your NAMES at this point?"

"You gigolo, you!" remarked Sandie's escort nastily.

"Gigolo yourself!" Gerald came back at him. He was no coward.

"PLEASE take me HOME, my dear!" whispered Sandie, appealing to him.

"No girl has ever asked me to do that before!" he confided to her wistfully.

"Kiss me, my FOOL!" breathed Sandie as they climbed into a taxi. Gerald, needing no second invitation, complied.

From then on Gerald moved like one in a dream. The only reality that existed for him was Sandie. He was completely soggy about the girl.

"You are the only woman I've ever loved!" he blurted one day when they were riding around in the subway.

"Dear me, I WISH you'd had a little more exPERience!" shouted Sandie exasperatedly, wondering if she'd made a big mistake in taking up with this odd yokel.

"Why do you love me, Sandie?" inquired Gerald fatuously.

"Heaven only KNOWS, my dear!" she sighed.

"I mean nobody ever has before," pursued Gerald in hot pursuit.

"I WISH you wouldn't be so naIVE or something," old horse!" exclaimed Sandie pettishly.

"YOU liked by naivete at first, darling," complained Gerald. "You liked everything about me at first, you did!"

"Will you go on a Diet, my dear?" she asked suddenly.

"What for, for gosh sakes?"

"Well, because you're TOO darned FAT at this point, Gerald!"

"Well, I like that!" he retorted aggrieviedly. "You fell for me when I was just like I am, and now you want to change me. Gee, Sandie, I——"

"Don't WHINE!" she snapped rudely.

"Do I have to go on a diet?"

"I don't give a WHOOP-de-doodle whether you do or NOT, my dear, but I'll tell you ONE thing, old horse—I'll never marry a FAT man!"

So Gerald went on the Hollywood Diet to please Sandie. All he was permitted for breakfast was a half a grapefruit and black coffee. All he got for lunch was an orange and a cup of tea. All he had for dinner was a slice of melba toast and three radishes.

AT the end of a week he couldn't kiss Sandie without fainting dead away.

She was simply livid. "Don't you LOVE me any more, Gerald?" she demanded furiously.

"I do, I do!" he protested desperately.

"Well, then why do you have to ColLAPSE in a SWOUND every time you KISS me, you OAF!"

"I'm so weak, darling!" gasped Gerald, gnawing on a radish he had horded from last night's dinner.

"That SETtles it, my dear—I could never POSsibly marry a WEAK man!" declared Sandie, breaking their engagement over his head with a careless laugh.

I LOVE JULY by Donald Ogden Stewart

Inside Dope on Signing The Declaration

I LOVE July.

For example, July 4 comes in July—at least, it always has, so far. And on July 4, as I recall it, the Declaration of Independence was signed.

I can see it now—that historic little hall in Philadelphia. I can see those signers, too.

"Gosh, it's hot," says Thomas Jefferson, wiping his forehead.

"Awful," agrees John Adams. "It was 98 in my room last night."

"I didn't sleep a wink," says Button Gwinnett. "I heard the clock strike eleven — twelve — one—."

John Adams moves over to the thermometer.

"I think it's out of order," he remarks. "It can't be 100."

"It can't, eh?" says John Hancock. "Boy, you ain't seen nothin' yet."

"I've seen all I want to," grumbles Adams. "Of all the towns—"

"Yeah?" remarks John Hancock. "I suppose you think Boston's just the world's greatest resort. Let me tell you, brother, I spent a night there last June at the hotel—and I never want to spend another. And the food—beans!"

"What's the matter with beans?" demands Adams, a little resentfully.

"Oh, beans are great," replies Hancock. "Just dandy. Nothing like a good plate of beans on a hot night."

"Boys, boys!" scolds Jefferson. "Listen—we've got to get this thing signed, and the quicker we get to work the sooner you can go home."

"Get what thing signed?" demands Gwinnett.

"You know—the Declaration of Independence," replies Jefferson.

"Oh, that," says Hancock. "Isn't that signed yet?"

"No," replied Jefferson. "There were some minor changes—and Mr. Adams had one or two suggestions—"

* * *

"WHAT suggestions?" demands Gwinnett. "Now look here—if he's gone and put a lot of his high falutin' drivel into the thing, you won't see my name on it."

"That is, presuming, of course, that you can write your own name," sneers Adams.

"Say, listen, Beans—" begins Gwinnett.

"Now stop it!" commands Jefferson. "I know it's hot—and I didn't get any sleep either—"

"Say, speaking of that, I heard a good story last night," interrupts John Hancock. "It seems that a Irishman wanted to borrow some suspenders from a Scotchman and the Scotchman says—"

"Yeah, that's a good one," says Gwinnett.

"Have you heard it?" asks Hancock.

"Sure," replies Gwinnett, "but [illegible] it to Adams."

"I've heard it, too," says Adams [illegible]ckly.

"Well, did you hear the one—" [illegible]ins Hancock, but Jefferson interrupts.

"[illegible]f Mr. Hancock will kindly [illegible]pone his interesting narratives [illegible]lk life—"

"[illegible]ear, hear!" says Adams.

"—we shall take a look at the [illegible] draft of the Declaration of [illegible]endence and see how we [illegible] it."

"How do you mean—final?" demands Gwinnett, a little belligerently.

"Oh, for heaven's sake, Button," says Hancock. "Do you want to stay here all year?"

"I certainly do not," replies Gwinnett, "but at the same time—"

"Well, then, let's hear it, anyway," says Hancock. "Go ahead, Jeff. We're all with you, kid."

Thomas Jefferson takes a sheet of hotel writing-paper from his pocket, looks at it, puts it back in his pocket, and searches through his coat.

"Where in the world—" he mutters. "Adams did you see where I put the Declaration of Independence?"

Adams starts searching through his own pockets.

"Gosh, if I've lost that again—" says Jefferson, perspiration rolling off his forehead.

"Maybe it's in your brown suit," suggests Hancock.

"Oh, good heavens!" saqs Jefferson. "I sent that to the cleaners this morning."

"And about time," mumurs an indistinguishable voice.

"Let's adjourn," yawns Gwimnett. "It's too darned hot, anyway."

"We can't," says Adams. "There's a meeting of everybody up here at 11, and we've got to have the thing ready for them then."

"Wait a minute," cries Jefferson. "I think—" and with that he rushes over to a portfolio from which he extracts several sheets of paper. "Ah," he exclaims. "Here we are. Now—"

He clears his throat.

"'MY dear Ethel,'" he reads. "No, wait—that's a letter—here—'When in the course of human events—'"

"Ethel who?" demands Hancock, grinning.

"You know," says Gwinnett. "That one on Eleventh street."

"The blonde?" asks Hancock, and Gwinnett whistles appreciatively.

"It is not," denies Jefferson. "Ethel is my cousin in Hartford."

"Yeah?" says Gwinnett, "and I'm King George."

"It's 99 and a fraction," announces Adams at the thermometer.

"Come on—let's get going," says Hancock, looking at his watch. "We've got only about 15 minutes left."

"Well, if you had been here on time——" begins Gwinnett.

"Say, I've been on time for more meetings than anybody else," snaps Hancock. "How about last Thursday? Didn't we wait three-quarters of an hour for you? Didn't we?"

"'When in the course of human events——'" begins Jefferson.

"And how about Monday? Who was here promptly at 9:30?" demands Hancock.

"Oh, shut up," growls Gwinnett, wiping the perspiration from his neck. "It's too hot."

"It's a hundred," announces Adams. "I'll bet that's a record for this early in the summer."

"OH now listen, gentlemen," pleads Jefferson. "Please!"

The room gradually becomes quiet.

"'When, in the course of human events,'" he reads, "'it becomes necessary——'"

His voice drones on until the finish. After the last word there is a minute of silence.

"Well," says Jefferson at last, "how do you like it?"

Button Gwinnett squirms uneasily in his chair.

"I tell you, Jeff," he replies, "I think the ideas are there all right—it's just that they don't quite come out. What do you think, Hancock?"

"I think it'll do," says Hancock.

"Of course, it isn't exactly the way to go into that now. How about you, Adams?"

Adams slaps at a fly on his neck.

"I tell you," he says. "Let's try it on them, anyway."

"Gosh," remarks Jefferson. "You boys are certainly encouraging. I stayed up practically all night——"

"Oh it's all right, Jeff," says Hancock. "I think it'll get by. Most of them won't understand it, anyway. What do you care?"

A clock overhead, booms the hour.

"I'm slow," remarks Gwinnet, consulting his massive timepiece. "See anybody coming?"

"Yes," replied Adams at the window. "Here comes Ruthledge—and that Georgia fellow—and there are four or five others just coming out of Tony's."

"Well, we might as well get to work," remarks Hancock, picking up the secretary's book and opening it to a blank page. "What is today, anyway?"

"The fourth," replied Gwinnett.

"July fourth," repeats Hancock and writes it down.

"By Gorry," says Adams. "It's 101."

Hints for Brides

By Elsie Robinson

Some Girls Start Early With Their Love Making

GLADYS is fifteen—AND IN LOVE!

Madly, devastatingly, heart breaking in love.

No puppy love, this—

It's the Real Thing—

In vain mamma weeps and aunties argue and family friends wring their hands—

And if she isn't allowed to marry him at once she'll completely die.

All of which is raising a lot of ructions in the Jones Family.

But here's a letter from an outsider that may make young Gladys pause.

Peggy also was in love—

LOTSA LOVE!

AND here's what she has to say about the lovers of yesterday.

Dear Elsie—

I'm always interested when I read the letters from young girls who are going through their first love affair. I am not very old myself, but I can already look back on various mad infatuations and see where they would have led me if I had had my way.

If I had married the boy with whom I was in love at 16, at present I would be married to a taxi-driver.

If I had married the man with whom I was infatuated at seventeen I would have found myself spending those warm, sunny days when we like so much to be playing tennis or hiking, in a kitchen with a grumpy husband, 12 years my senior.

IF I had married the boy I met a little late, and grew very fond of, I stood one chance in a hundred of being happy. A good boy—but no brains.

Then a dreamer came along. A fellow with high ideals but who lacked ambition. Of course, he told me I inspired him, but I wanted the fellow I married to need no inspiration.

And now I am twenty. I look back at those boys who in truth I very nearly married, and am thankful I shook myself loose.

At present I am engaged to a finer fellow than any of them, but I had to meet the others and know them, to realize what I do now. Viewpoints change.

PEGGY.

THE men you loved—

Why did you love them?

BECAUSE THEY ANSWERED SOME HUNGER IN YOUR OWN HEART—

Let's suppose you're a normal, healthy American girl just awakening to womanhood. A girl of fifteen—

You are blindly seeking a mate as every young animal seeks a mate in the springtime of its life. You are filled with a wild calling for that mate—moved by strange, sweet dreams of love—

But your mind isn't yet grown up. It is grown up enough to live in the African jungle but it isn't grown up enough to live in Boston or New York or Kansas City or San Francisco in the year 1929.

It is filled with all sorts of crude, unfinished desires, attitudes, tastes, interests.

You like athletics, you love dancing, you are crazy about babies, you are beginning to be interested in good books, you are hungry for adventure — curious, courageous, timid and lazy—all at the same time.

AN unfinished little girl mind in an almost finished woman body—and a dream of love sweeping you along like a sweet, furious tide.

Then you meet a man—

And SOMETHING in that man attracts you—

Attracts PART of you—

Perhaps he likes books—

Or athletics—

Or dancing or gypsy vans—

WHATEVER IT IS YOU FEEL AT ONCE THAT HERE'S THE ANSWER TO A MAIDEN'S PRAYER!

You're positive that if he likes ONE thing you like he'll like everything you like.

And if you only can take the trail together you'll be happy ever after.

YOU know it—your blood sings it—you long to dance and shout and tell the world—

"THERE'S A RAINBOW ROUND YOUR SHOULDER"—YOU'RE IN LOVE.

And usually all the family are throwing pink fits.

They can't see anything wonderful or remarkable about your young man—

Usually he seems to them the most undesirable specimen of human nature—

And they know you'll wreck your life if you marry him.

They needn't worry — the chances are just about 999,999 to 1,000,000 that you won't marry him.

Yes, he still likes athletics—

But why does he have his hair cut in such a funny way?

And how terrible it is that he never read a good book.

And if only he WOULDN'T say "I come" and "I done"—

* * *

OF course, when you're snuggled close beside him out in the moonlight, with your head on his shoulder, you forget all these odd, irritating things and you're quite sure again that he's The Only Man—

But the next day the fears and doubts come back again—faster and harder—

And then, all of a sudden, you wake up to find that you're not in love at all—

That, in fact, you're VERY MUCH OUT OF LOVE AND THANKING YOUR LUCKY STARS YOU DIDN'T MARRY HIM.

Then for a little while you grow bitter and cynical—

You wonder if there isn't something strange about you—

Perhaps you are one of those strange, abnormal women who will never know Real Love—

Don't fear, little Sister—

YOU'RE as real as the Spring butterflies and the blue skies and the song of the birds—

And when you're ready the right love will come—never fear!

First love usually passes because, first love doesn't answer the deep hunger of our hearts—

IT ANSWERS ONLY ONE LITTLE PART OF THAT HUNGER.

We see our first lovers through a wonderful glamor—

The glamor of that dawning dream of love—

And if they prove to have one taste in common with us we're sure they were our Twin Souls—

But they're not!

They're just common mortals who fit the need of the moment.

And when the moment has passed and we have grown a little older and wiser and more certain of ourselves, we'll drop that first love out of our life as we dropped our baby teeth.

BABY TEETH ARE ALL VERY WELL FOR BABIES, BUT YOU CAN'T CHEW GROWN-UP FOOD WITH THEM.

AND FIRST LOVE IS ALL VERY WELL FOR CHILDREN, BUT YOU CAN'T GET A GRIP ON LIFE WITH IT.

MY STORMY LIFE By LEON TROTZKY

Exile Who Once Ruled in Russia Writes Dramatic Story of His Amazing Career

MILITANT—At left a profile study of Leon Trotzky, typifying the fighting qualities that characterized his long struggle as a revolutionist.

DOMINANT—A closeup of Trotzky in his office in the Kremlin in Moscow at the time when he and Lenin were the most powerful figures in the new Bolshevik Government.

AT THE HEIGHT OF HIS POWER—A striking new portrait study of Trotzky as he looked when he was Soviet Russia's Minister of War and head of the Red Army. Drawn by George Kienzle of the March of Events art staff.

'I'M NEITHER DEFEATED NOR DISCOURAGED,' HE AVERS

"My Present Deportation to Constantinople Is Not the Last Chapter of My Life," Writes Exiled Apostle of Bolshevism.

THE HEARST NEWSPAPERS begin today publication of the dramatic autobiography of Leon Trotzky. In this vivid human document he tells the detailed story of his amazing career which led him from a remote farm in Russia through years of struggle against Czardom to the pinnacle of power when the Bolshevists seized control of the government in Russia.

Son of a Jew farmer, Trotzky became a revolutionist at seventeen. He spent four years in various Czarist prisons. Twice he was banished to Siberia and twice escaped to renew his revolutionary agitations. Deportations, arrests, and exile in various countries, including the United States, punctuated his activities.

Then came the revolution of 1917 that overthrew the Romanoffs and Lenin and he emerged from the historic upheavals as the dominant figures of the Soviet Republic. They became world famous personalities.

Now at fifty he is again in exile, deported from Russia by the Stalin forces that control the Bolshevist government he helped to create. From his present refuge in Constantinople, where this extraordinary autobiography was written, Trotzky vainly sought permission to visit Germany. A few weeks ago he applied to the newly-formed MacDonald government for admission to England. More recently he was reported seeking admission to the United States.

By LEON TROTZKY.

CHAPTER I.

A LITTLE while ago I read, not without interest, how before the war I worked in a Norway fishery, cleaned codfish very skilfully, abstained from alcoholic drink and by dint of hard work put by 800 kroner. It even appeared that the author of these picturesque reminiscences subsequently met me in Soviet Russia, where I conversed with him in perfect Norwegian, and showed him around the Kremlin.

Such accuracy is most pleasing. Nevertheless at the period mentioned I was living in Vienna, never having visited Norway excepting on my way from a British concentration camp in Petrograd. With the Norwegian language I am, alas, as little familiar as with the craft of cleaning codfish.

An American medical man, who really did know me in my youth, has dedicated to me a book of his recollections wherein he has endowed me, inter alia, with epilepsy.

Is Opposed to Sale of Vodka

Considers Criminal the Russian State System Of Trade in Intoxicants

Friends who have followed all that has appeared about me in the world's press assert that there is hardly a restaurant or a cafe in the Old or in the New World where I have not left without paying my bill.

I have mentioned these few cases taken at random in order to make some observations and draw some conclusions. The author of the Scandinavian saga concerning me has recorded quite truthfully that I never had any taste for strong drink, even though I never had occasion to exhibit that virtue in Norway. I consider criminal the system of state trade in vodka introduced in Soviet Republic after the death of Lenin. I need not enlarge upon the point that the genuineness of my "dry" views, notwithstanding, I considerably differ from Mr. Hoover on a number of questions.

I have never suffered from epilepsy.

If I have never gained my living by physical work, on the other hand I have never led the life of a Bohemian. Visits to cafes or restaurants in my youth were the exception and not the rule. I most emphatically assert that there does not exist anywhere a waiter or cashier having an unpaid bill of mine.

I cannot deny that the course of my life has not been entirely humdrum.

I had begun to work at my memoirs at Alma-ata, where I lived in exile for a year—during 1928. That work has not, however, made very much progress. In spite of the great distance separating it from Moscow, Alma-ata was not entirely cut off from political life, and after the first two months of my exile I was again taking an active part in the struggle. My memoirs had to give way to the writing of theoretical political articles and letters.

My deportation abroad interrupted that work. Not for the first time in my life do I find myself at a bivouac patiently waiting for further events. The pause or entr' acte thus intervening is a most suitable occasion for throwing at least a few cursory glances backward before resuming the march onward.

Let us begin with an external frame to strengthen chronologically the further tale. I was born October 25 (old style), 1879. I shall therefore be 50 years this fall.

My birthday coincided with the day of the October revolution. I myself did not notice this curious coincidence until three years had passed after the October revolution.

Until I was nine I had lived without interruption in a remote little village. I was arrested for the first time one year after I completed my course of study in the school of the type of the German "Realschule" (Comparable to an advanced American high school.) The only university I ever visited was prison, deportation and later exile.

Punished Often

Imprisoned Four Years, Deported Twice

Of the Czarist prisons I was an inmate for two periods, totaling about four years. I was deported by the Czar's minions twice. Twice I escaped from Siberia.

As an emigrant abroad I have lived two periods totaling about 12 years—in various countries of Europe and America, two years before the revolution of 1905 and, after it was crushed, almost 10 years.

During the war I was tried in absentia and sentenced to imprisonment in Hohenzollern, Germany, (in 1915).

In the course of the following year I was deported from France and from Spain, where, after spending one week in the Madrid prison and one month under police supervision at Cadiz, I was deported to America.

It was there that the Russian revolution of February, 1917, found me. On my way from New York I was arrested in March, 1917, by the British, who kept me a month at a concentration camp in Canada.

1917 Revolution

Had Charge of Brest-Litovsk Peace Parley

I took an intimate part in the October, 1917, uprising, and was subsequently a member of the Soviet government. As People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs I had charge of the peace negotiations at Brest-Litovsk with the delegations of Germany, Austria-Hungary, Turkey and Bulgaria.

As People's Commissar for War and of the Navy I devoted about five years to the organization of the Red Army and the rebuilding of the Red Navy.

The principal activities of my life, however, if I except the years of the civil war, have been party and literary. The State Publication Department began the publication of my works in 1923. It has so far published 13 volumes.

In January, 1928, the present Soviet government sent me into exile, and I spent a year near the Chinese frontier. In February, 1929, I was deported to Turkey, and I am writing these lines at Constantinople.

Not at all for the sake of a paradox, but because it really is so, I have to say that I hate disorder and destruction. During the years of the civil war, when, in my train, I traveled a distance equal to many times round the earth, I took pleasure in noticing every new shanty made of fresh pine boards. Levin, who knew that "foible" of mine, often chafed me about it.

Well written books have always been for me, and are now, the most valued and cherished fruits of civilization. Many times in my life I have had the feeling that the revolution was interfering with my systematic work.

Not Discouraged

'Deportation Not Last Chapter in My Life'

Nevertheless nearly a third of a century of my conscious life was entirely filled with revolutionary struggle. And if today I had to begin to live my life again I would not hesitate to go the same way.

I must write these lines in enforced emigration, at a time when my closest friends are filling places of exile and the prisons of the Soviet Republic, in the creation of which they took a decisive part. Nevertheless, I feel neither defeated nor discouraged.

Are these memoirs to be looked upon as a summary and stock-taking of a whole life? Yes and no. I shall endeavor to tell conscientiously all that had taken place so far, but I do not mean thereby that I consider my deportation to Constantinople as the last chapter of my life. May I be allowed here to repeat the words of Mark Twain to certain men who tried to bury him alive: "The rumor of my death is greatly exaggerated."

Fateful Struggle

Born in Year of First Blows Against Czar

The year of my birth was the year of the first dynamic blows against Czarism. The Terrorist Party of "The People's Will," which had been formed a little earlier on August 26, 1879—two months before I was born—issued the death warrant against Alexander II. The fateful struggle began which ended in the assassination of Alexander II on March 1, 1881, but which at the same time led to the destruction of the "People's Will."

But neither parliamentary debates, nor diplomatic acts, nor even explosions of dynamite, spread any echo to the village of Yanovka, where I first saw the light and spent the first nine years of my life. The limitless steppes of the Province of Kherson and the whole of New Russia were a realm of wheat and sheep which lived its own peculiar life.

My father was a farmer, at first a small holder, but later

'NEW REPARATIONS PLAN MAY PUT GERMANY IN ECONOMIC PERIL'

"Huge Surplus of Imports Over Exports And Enormous Foreign Loans to Be Repaid Portend Danger of Financial Collapse in Meeting Paris Annuities."

By WILHELM MARX,
Former Chancellor of Germany.

(By Cable.)

BERLIN, June 29.

THE die is cast. After several months of continuous, difficult and complicated negotiations the economic experts have formulated their decision. The report now submitted will be for all time a testimonial to solidly founded and farsighted practical knowledge which, also in the judgment of their contemporaries, marked the conomic experts assembled in Paris.

In many places in the report, one sees the stubborn conflict of varying opinions. One notes also the strong and eminently practical influence of Owen Young—the manner in which with the resoluteness and endurance that characterizes him, he understood how to compel these varying opinions to take a common course and thus bring about a practicable result.

Up to Diplomats

Will Have to Erect Permanent Structure

It is now up to the politicians and diplomats of the states concerned. A government conference, taking the foundation laid by the economists, will now have to erect the structure that will be for many years to come be of decisive importance not merely for the economic and financial development of Europe alone.

I can only repeat as my firm conviction what I have at various times before said concerning the annuities fixed by the experts. I am still unable to see how Germany can pay these yearly sums, even though they are somewhat less than those of the Dawes plan, out of the surplus of her trade balance as it was the express intention of that plan that they should be paid. That there is and will be no lack of good intentions on the part of responsible German circles need not be asserted again. But in view of the balance of trade which still in 1928 shows a surplus of imports over exports of many billions, and in view of the fact that the payments under the Dawes plan thus far have been made in full by Germany

HOW TROTZKY, JEWISH FARMER'S SON, WON MIGHTY POWER

Revolutionist at 17, Sent to Many Prisons, Twice Banished to Siberia, And Escaped Twice; Exiled for Years in Long Struggle to Overthrow Czardom

HIS HELPMEET—Mrs. Leon Trotzky, who shared in her husband's stormy rise to power and who now is the comrade of his exile.

on quite a big landowner. As a boy he left his little native Jewish township in the Province of Poltava, whence his family went to seek its fortune in the free steppes of the south. He learned to read in his old age. He had remarkable strength of purpose and a great capacity for work. My mother was not his equal mentally, but as regards work was his true helpmeet all her life.

At the time of my birth they already owned a farm of 120 hectares (300 acres) and a steam flour mill. In addition, my father farmed more than a thousand hectares (2,500 acres) of leased land. At the time of the October revolution he was almost wealthy.

Menaced by Whites
Persecuted Father Because of Son

My mother died in 1910, but my father lived to see the advent of the Soviet power. When the civil war was raging in the south of Russia, entailing an incessant change of "governments," the old man of 75, as a large landowner, had to trudge on foot hundreds of miles to find a temporary refuge in Odessa. He was in danger from the Reds. The Whites were persecuting him as the father of Trotzky.

After the south had been cleared of the Whites by the Soviet troops my father was able to settle in Moscow. The October revolution, of course, had deprived him of all he had acquired during his long life. He died of typhus in the spring of 1922.

The village of Yanovka was 23 kilometers from the nearest post office and 21 miles from the nearest railway station. The receipt of a letter was an event, a telegram was a catastrophe. Here life was completely regulated by the round of farm labor. All the rest was a matter of indifference. All the rest—save the price of grain.

Notwithstanding the comparative prosperity of my father at the time, our family lived until the end of last century in a low clay house with a roof of thatch, in which any number of sparrows nested. The walls showed crevasses with cracks on the outside walls into which adders found their way. When the rains were particularly heavy the thatch leaked and cups and other vessels were placed on the floors to catch the water.

During my last school vacation, which I spent at Yanovka, I drew the plans of a new, roomy house with an iron roof. When it was built I was already in prison.

Our family was not religious. My father was not a believer at all and spoke freely about it. My mother preferred to be discreetly silent.

Was Fifth Child
Parents Strained to Educate Children

I was their fifth child. My arrival was not likely to have been a very joyful occasion for the family. Life was too much occupied by heavy toil. Of eight children only four lived. But my parents strained every effort to give them an education.

The first year of which I have a distinct recollection was 1885. I was then six. The time for learning had arrived. The only school was that in the Gromokli colony, whence my parents came when they bought their first bit of land. A ravine divided the colony into two parts: German and Jewish.

In the former the houses were substantially built, with tile roofs, the horses were large, the cattle of good breed. In the Jewish part there were half ruined cottages, miserable cows, abject poverty. On Sunday my father brought me to the colony and left me to live with my aunt. I was to learn the Russian language, arithmetic and the Hebrew Bible. The teacher was a thin man, not at all strong. During the classes his wife would rush into the room carrying a handful of flour. "Just smell," she would say to her husband, "I don't think the flour smells right." When the teacher bent his bird's nose to her hand, she scattered the flour into his face. That was her little joke. My stay at the school lasted a few months only.

Learned Early
Became Acquainted With Peasants' Lives

On the whole I was left to my own resources. Reading, drawing and writing poetry. After I learned too write and to reckon I was sometimes entrusted with weighing up the peasants' grain, and figuring out how much was due for milling it, or I would assist my father in paying the laborers' wages.

The village life thus acquainted me with farming, with the horse and the bull, with conies and scorpions, with the lathe and the American binder. It disclosed to me also the gradual economic downfall of the gentry and the ways the capitalists coined money.

After difficulties with my brother and sister during their years of apprenticeship, my father placed all his hopes in me. At nine I was taken to Odessa and lodged with relatives. Mr. F——, the head of this young family, was engaged in publishing. His wife, F. M., was principal of a state school for Jewish girls. They were a likable family of brain workers. I owe them much. They were fond of literature and particularly of the theater.

Little by little I was bent to a gentle but strict discipline. I was made to understand that I must never be late, that I must go to bed at 9 o'clock, that I must thank the servants when they fetched something, that I must have clean nails and never cut my bread with my knife. The charms of classical literature and the enchantment of the theater were destroying the old attraction of the farm. I was becoming a city boy.

Bright Scholar
Early Punishments Foreshadowed Future

I was sent to the preparatory classes at St. Paul's school. The school was half German. The protestant spirit went well with the police methods implanted in Russia.

On my first day in school I obtained the highest mark, five, three times. I was choking with joy when I got home. From that day until my studies were finished, I was always first in my class. I do not recall receiving a serious reprimand in all my school days.

Yet one day I was suspended from school and on another occasion was locked up for 24 hours and threatened with final expulsion. Those two events, which were in the nature of school mutinies, to a certain extent foreshadowed my later life.

First 'Revolt'
Teacher Regarded Pupils As Enemies

The first "revolt" was directed against the French professor. M. Burnard was a bilious Swiss. His digestive troubles caused him to regard his pupils as his worst enemies. I enjoyed his good will, but the German boys had much difficulty in learning French. Burnard persecuted them doubly. His principal victim was a certain Wacker.

Wacker was a poor enough student, but on this occasion Burnard very unjustly gave him a mark of "one." Wacker began to cry. The professor went on raging, and munching indigestion tablets. "One's" and "two's" rained down on the class like stones on the city of the wicked.

I felt revolt growing in my breast. "Let's raise a row," murmured a few students, with evil in their eyes, among whom was myself. Was I the ringleader? It would be hard to say. As soon as the professor picked up his recordbook, as a sign that the class was over, there was a unanimous chorus of howls that followed him to the door.

Burnard turned upon me with hatred in his eyes and cried out, with his arms raised in imprecation: "The first pupil in the second form—is a moral monster!" I was banished from the class.

The second clash came three years later. At school I divided my enthusiasm between literature, history and mathematics.

In the fifth form a number of students were rivals in the literary studies. Yet our literature professor, a myopic, spiritless man, had gone through a third of the year without returning our corrected themes. After the class had asked for them numerous times, there began to be discontented protests. This time they took the form of coarse buffonery of unmistakable meaning.

Quits Classroom
Professor Becomes Disgusted at School

The professor, taken by surprise, disgustedly quit the classroom. As a consequence two pupils, of whom I was one, were locked up for 24 hours and a third for 12. That was the second tragedy of my school days.

Looking back at myself as I then was, I see a little lad with plenty of pride, surely, but timid and not altogether easy to get along with. Upon entering school this child felt no sort of superiority over his fellow pupils, but when he had captured first place he probably felt that he was abler than the rest.

Such a state of things could not help affecting his character, and yet he was not free from self-criticism. He was furious when he caught himself in a lie, and, what happened still oftener, when he discovered that there were many things he did not know.

My political attitude or moods at school were vaguely oppositional, but no more. The famine of 1891, it is true, stirred somewhat the deadly bogs of the reaction. The "intelligentsia" showed some signs of life, and among the university students the first Marxists began to appear.

There was as yet no talk at school of revolution. Among the people with whom I came in contact there was grumbling against the regime. The most daring enthusiasts, however, only hoped for a constitution in Russia in some scores or dozens of years.

When, on finishing my school, I came to the village, thirsting to spread propaganda for democratic government, my father was not only frightened but hostile. He said to me: "This won't come about for another three centuries yet." He was certain that my aspirations were doomed to failure and feared for the personal consequences for his son.

Gigantic Strike
Strong Movement Took Place in 1896

The year of studies spent at Nikolayev—1896—was a year of transition. It was a transition, too, in the history of the country. In St. Petersburg there was a strike on a gigantic scale. Groups formed to study Marx now became revolutionary organizations.

A remarkable fact: At first I was a strong opponent of "socialistic utopias." I pretended to be a skeptic who had already overcome and gone beyond all that. But in reality it was merely an unequal struggle for my independence. I still lacked the governing central idea. The unequal struggle lasted but a few months. The ideas which were floating in the air about me were stronger than I was. In addition to some young people who were gravitating toward Marxism I met for the first time at Nikolayev some men who, on their return from exile as political criminals, were living under police supervision. These were second rate men from the declining period of the Populist movement. The social democrats were not as yet returning from exile, they were just being sent there. The two movements in meeting formed eddies. Into these eddies of ideas I soon found myself immersed.

I made the acquaintance and became familiar with a gardner named Swigovski, a Czech by origin. He was the first workman I met who subscribed to newspapers, was able to read German, knew the classics, and was able to take a part in the debates between the Marxists and the Populists.

His cottage, which consisted of a single room, was the place of meeting of undergraduates spending their vacations at Nikolavey, former exiles, and the local youths. The progress of German socialism, national conflicts in Austria, or the elections in the United States were more real to us than our personal surroundings.

I began to have the feeling that I was becoming a small link in a great chain.

Stormy Session
Gave Up All of Family's Assistance

My father came to Nikolavey to sell his grain and heard of my latest friendships. We had some rather stormy interviews. The upshot was that I gave up all material assistance from my relatives and went to live with Swigovski, who had taken the lease of a larger garden having a larger cottage.

It was there that six of us went to live and founded a "commune." We lived like Spartans, had no bedding and fed on vegetable soups, which we made ourselves. We wore blue blouses and carried black sticks. People in the town thought that we had joined a mysterious sect.

We were already thirsting to act, but were not yet quite sure how to begin. We collected contributions of money from sympathizers, bought cheap editions, but did not know how to distribute them. The garden had one hired laborer and a boy apprentice. The laborer happened to be a gendarme in disguise, who was specially sent there to spy on us.

I remeber his name to-day, Cyrille Tchorzewski. He managed to make of the boy apprentice another tool of the gendarmes. The youth seized a bagful of our "people's books" and took them to the colonel of the gendarmes. The beginning was distinctly not a success.

'Creditors Must Not Destroy Germany's Economic Status,'—Wilhelm Marx

only because of the tremendous loans granted by foreign countries and which could be employed for such payments—loans, moreover, that will also have to be repaid in the period in which the annuities are being paid—it must be acknowledged there is good reason to cherish grave misgivings as to whether Germany can actually make the yearly payments demanded of her without incurring the danger of economic collapse.

Protective Means
Conference Will Have to Develop Plans

It will be for the coming political conference to consider what means Germany possesses for hindering this consequence of the heavy economic sacrifices lasting many years, a consequence desired by no one. The report itself contemplates, a number of protective measures, but these, in my opinion, will have to be still further developed and assured by the political conference. The Paris proposal represents without doubt a certain lightening of the Dawes burdens. The yearly payments are reduced, although not to an important extent. The so-called prosperity index has been abandoned and it can now be accurately calculated what is the total sum that Germany will have to pay—a circumstance which assuredly is of greatest importance and an easily understood advantage for the course of her economic life.

Heavy Burdens
Future Generations Will Have to Pay

But despite all this we have here burdens of an extent heretofore unknown in the history of mankind, burdens that are to be borne by future generations of German citizens, burdens for whose discharge several generations will be required. It must be and can be expected that at the coming political conference the creditor states shall also realize it is to their own interest not to destroy Germany's economic situation, but on the contrary to strengthen it.

The proposal to establish a world bank for international payments, for which the report has already drawn up very far-reaching plans for organization and operation and whose purpose is explained in a well thought out formulation, is probably the most important, and it can be hoped, the most promising of the results of all the proposals in this, in every respect, excellently formulated report. If in the conduct of this bank regard be had not alone to economic affairs, but also to the world-wide and historical importance of such an institution, it can represent an inestimably great forward step toward fulfilling the tasks of the nations today—the reconciliation of peoples, justice and peaceful adjustment of all difficulties. Here, too, the political conference can and must improve the plan in many respects.

Must Approve
Parliaments Will Have to Uphold Work

After the conference shall have finished its labors, the parliaments of the different states involved will have to set their seal of approval on the work in its completed form. The manner in which the German nationals are already taking their position against the decisions of the conference is false. Opposition in the form which it assumes in the decision of the German National Party of June 15 is not the opposition that accords with the democratic constitution of the state, it is not the opposition that voices valuable criticism of current governmental and parliamentary issues and that could serve the best interests of the state even though the critics did not agree with the government in power.

It is opposition that makes matters easy for itself by simply negativing everything. But it can become fateful and destructive for the situation in its own country and can in any event lay no claim to the flattering phrase of national activity. But when it is publicly proclaimed that the German nationals have decided to present a motion, based on Article 72 of the German Constitution, to delay for two months the going into effect the law required for approving the decisions of the conference, and when they intend to bring about a popular referendum in order to reject the Paris proposals this is no longer justified opposition in the service of the nation but is a comedy of a petty political sort and one is deeply ashamed to see it enacted before the eyes of foreign nations.

The German people realize their situation much too clearly to make it possible for them to be driven into a panic ruinous for their own country. It can already be asserted that a referendum along the lines referred to will be defeated by the sound common sense of the German people. Of course, the Germans must have the right to expect that at the coming conference all existing and justified misgivings against the possibility of carrying out the Paris decisions must be done away with. But when that shall have been done it will be to the interest of the German people that the lightening of their burdens brought by the proposals of the experts shall go into effect as soon as possible.

Favors London
Believes Conference Should Be Held There

I regard as a favorable omen for the future the fact that Ramsay MacDonald, as Prime Minister, is again at the head of the English government. Personally, I should like to see the coming conference held in London like the conference of 1924. I should regard it as a happy dispensation of providence if it, like that in 1924, could be carried out under the wise and thoroughly objective and purposeful leadership of MacDonald. At that time American Ambassador Kellogg, later secretary of State, although not himself taking part in the conference, performed valuable services as an expert and an unprejudiced observer, and it will be a most happy continuation and complementing of the happenings of those days if the present American ambassador takes part in the London conference of 1929 in the same manner as did Ambassador Kellogg five years ago.

For this ambassador, as I am happy to be able to state, is Gen. Dawes, whose name is connected for all time with the solving of the reparations problem and the report of 1924. Ambassador Dawes may recall still the last hours in Berlin in which we came together not as politicians but merely as men and talked freely of our opinions as to the future of our peoples. The names of Gen. Dawes and Owen Young are bound up for all time by fate.

'JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER—COLOSSUS OF MODERN BUSINESS'

'He Mastered Art of Making, Saving, Giving Money'—Says Dr. Henderson

'He Developed the Technique Of Scientific Philanthropy On a Scale Unparalleled In History'

WHO are the Twelve Most Vivid Living Personalities?

A committee of well-known Americans was invited by Dr. Archibald Henderson, noted author, scholar and educator, to collaborate with him in choosng 12 world figures to be the subjects of a series of articles he is writing for the March of Events Section.

Last Sunday Dr. Henderson wrote of King Alfonso. In his article herewith John D. Rockefeller is his subject.

By ARCHIBALD HENDERSON,
Noted Author, Scholar and Educator.

A QUARTER of a century ago it was the fashion in the United States to charge John D. Rockefeller with the most outrageous business practices and the most outrageous financial dealings. Today he is rated as a genius and one of the half dozen greatest Americans.

Archibald Henderson

Says Emil Ludwig:

"There are few ethical thinkers like Lincoln and Masaryk in the seats of the mighty, and no one yet has tried to see if he can become the richest man in the world by following in their footsteps. But Rockefeller did not gain his power by lack of scruple; he won it above all else because of his spirit of emprise and his imagination.

"He who undertakes single-handed so mighty a battle with the state and society, he who comes off victor in such a struggle against the people, cannot be simply the adventurer and corrupter whom Roosevelt vainly tried to drag before the bar of justice. Such a being must rather be a man of great combining genius and flashing penetration, who bursts upon the darkness and suddenly illumines it."

No one who studies deeply the career of this emperor of finance or reads his "Random Reminiscences of Men and Events" can fail to be deeply impressed with his shrewdness, simplicity and modesty. There is not a boastful word; not a single exhibition of vanity; no note of triumph over the vanquishing of adversaries.

Simple Style
Nothing to Suggest Ideas of Muckrackers

The style of the man is simple, straightforward, direct; there is no suggestion of Machiavellian subtlety which the muckrakers persistently attribute to the builder of the Standard Oil Company. The principles of business and finance are set forth lucidly and effectively, without a superfluous word. The morality which underlies these principles, as set forth, is unimpeachable.

If one knew nothing of Rockefeller save what is to be gleaned from his own personal confessions, one could not fail to hold the author in high admiration as a man of high character, sound understanding of men and events and large vision in both business and philanthropy.

In considering the personality of this extraordinary character one need not concern himself with analysis of the steps by which he obtained his colossal fortune. It would be able to assume that many smaller competitors were not injured or even ruined by the onward progress of this great financial juggernaut. Rockefeller was intent upon a colossal, a herculean task, the efficient organization of a huge business in the most efficient manner possible.

In business he was a supreme realist, who saw things as they were and dealt with them with a masterly shrewdness and amazing acumen.

Unlimited Vision
Imaginative and Courageous in Business

The man's vision was unlimited. He was imaginative and courageous in business, too a degree seldom if ever attained hitherto in historoy. He took great chances for great rewards, and was extraordinarily successful in winning over the doubting Thomases among his partners and associates.

He possessed the two-fold quality so essential to great success in business: the imagination to divine the promise of a great opportunity, and the sound common sense which enabled him to analyze in advance that opportunity and weigh all the reasons for ultimate success.

He devoted his financial genius undividedly to attaining his vast designs—so much so that even the coldest and most ruthless of his contemporaries in big business called him money-mad. The truth of the matter is that he was money-sane.

He knew better than any man of his time what money could do and what money couldn't do. Grant all the evils which were imputed to the Trusts—crushing of individual competition, conspiracies in restraint of trade, the vicious system of interlocking directories, secret debates in violation of public sentiment, and other abuses—it still remains to be said that Rockefeller, more successfully and impressively than any financial wizard of his time, pointed the way to the present universally successful system of consolidation and amalgamation of great business interests.

NONAGENARIAN—A striking portrait study of John D. Rockefeller as he looks today. He celebrates his ninetieth birthday July 8.

Rockefeller was a born trader. To an almost unbelievable extent, he eliminated sentiment from his business transactions. All the stories one reads about his cruelty, his rapacity, his coldness, simmer down to this: he conducted business always on strictly business principles. His own words are illuminating.

"It would have been impossible to make a success by oppressing people. Big men who do things in a large and effective way cannot be oppressed. They may suffer a temporary disadvantage, and one might make a temporary profit by pushing them at such a time, but it would be only for a time.

"I never was so foolish as to follow these tactics; I wanted able men to work with me and not against me. I admit I tried to attract only the able men! I have always had as little as possible to do with dull businessmen.

"Let us go a step further and suppose that not only by getting rebates from the railroads on our own products but on the products of others as well I had ruined these able men and forced them to come in with me. Could any man alive develop from such material the esprit de corps which even our enemies admit we have always possessed?

'Was a Supreme Realist in Trade'

"Strong men who had been ruthlessly shorn of their self-respect would not for 30 years work in harmony and build up a great business. The thing is inconceivable."

The aphorisms about business which Rockefeller has frequently voiced are the veriest platitudes. Anybody might invent them.

The fact which we overlook is that Rockefeller took these platitudes at their face value. At whatever cost, at whatever sacrifice, he lived up to them. Suffering, privation, hardship, long and painful meditation was responsible for Rockefeller's familiar platitude:

Saving Is Urged
Duty to Make and Save, He Declares

"It is every man's duty to make as much as he can, to save as much as he can and to give as much as he can."

He has lived up to these principles throughout his long life, filled with unremitting labor and profound reflection upon wealth, its acquisition, conservation and distribuition for the advancement of human welfare.

When his resources were of the narrowest, Rockefeller was not ashamed to give a dime, and today the bright dime is the minted symbol of his personal philanthropy. When his resources were the largest known to history he gave quite as readily a million, five million, if need be any number of millions to some cause—a university, an institution, a foundation which, in his judgment, was properly organized and competent to confer large benefits upon humanity.

One feature of Rockefeller's life demonstrates as nothing else can the strength of character and endurance of soul the man possesses. In our time no man, no politician, no ruler even has been so generally reviled as Rockefeller. He bore it all with outward equanimity, complete stoicism and unbroken silence. He made no effort to alter the verdict of public opinion.

With his practically unlimited resources he could have purchased good opinion, subsidized newspapers and in many ways secured a reversal of the popular verdict. But he willed to remain silent, to endure derision, obloquy and hatred. It was characteristic of the man, an index of his philosophy.

SOUVENIRS—John D. Rochefeller gives bright new dimes as mementoes to those he meets. Here he was snapped presenting one to a youngster near his home at Pocantico Hills.

"There is no feeling in the world," he once said, "comparable to that of self-reliance, without which we can do nothing."

Self-Reliant
Had Good Sense to Retire When Aged 55

Self-reliance is the quintessential feature of Rockefeller's philosophy.

Rockefeller had the good sense to retire from active business at the comparatively early age of fifty-five. Always he has carefully guarded his private life from the prying gaze of an eagerly inquisitive public. We know comparatively litle of the personality and temperament of the man. But the impression derived from his own reminiscences and from the observations of his son is that of a shrewd judge of men, a wise father with singular but effective methods of rearing children, a modest and kindly man, a devout Christian.

Such a thing as a quotation from Shakespeare, Goethe, Milton or Dante is inconceivable in connection with him. A huge gift of tens of millions will be accompanied by a terse letter of a few lines.

New Philosophy
To Give Is an Art, Is His Daily Creed

In what does the greatness, the dominant personality, of Rockefeller consist? The answer is unescapable. He has developed and virtually created the philosophy and technique of philanthropy on a colossal scale. Rockefeller has said:

'Self-Reliance Basis of His Philosophy'

"To give is an art. To give to everybody who asks is an injustice, because often in this fashion one takes it away from a more deserving one."

Over a long period of years Rockefeller was deluged with appeals for financial aid, and maintained a sort of grand almoner's depot in New York. About 1890, on the verge of a nervous breakdown induced by the effort to grope his way, "without sufficient guide or chart, through this ever-widening field of philanthropic endeavor," he proceeded to organize his philanthropy on a strictly business basis.

Thus was organized the Philanthropic Trust, the Benevolent Corporation, which has been Rockefeller's signal contribution to the thought and life of one time. Twenty years ago Rockefeller wrote:

"The Benevolent Trusts, when they come, will raise these standards; they will look the facts in the face; they will applaud and sustain the effective workers and institutions, and they will uplift the intelligent standard of good work in helping all the people chiefly to help themselves.

"There are already signs that these combinations are coming, and coming quickly, and in the directorate of these trusts you will eventually find the flower of our American manhood, the men who not only know how to make money, but who accept the great responsibility of administering it wisely."

His Charities
Hundreds of Millions Figure in Work

A number of volumes would be required to record and describe the scientific philanthropy, on the greatest scale in history, of the Rockefeller fortune. It is now computed that the Rockefellers, father and son, have given away more than $550,000,000 to the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, founded in 1901; the General Education Board, incorporated in 1903; the Rockefeller Foundation, and allied enterprises. To the University of Chicago, Rockefeller has given between 30 and 40 millions.

Seldom a month passes that there is not public announcement of a great donation, usually in the millions, by the Rockefellers to some work on a great project, in some part of the world.

The rise of the foundation is said to mark a new era of philanthropy in the present century. There now exist in this country foundations for the promotion of almost every conceivable cause of value to the individual and in promotion of human welfare. It is estimated that such donations by Americans, either directly or through foundations already established since the end of the World War reach the staggering total of $20,000,000,000.

To Rockefeller is due the credit and the honor for developing the technic of scientific philanthropy and giving an object lesson in its operation unparalleled in history.

The BOOK SHELF For Readers and Writers by George Seibel

Writers of Books Are Now Better Boys

AUTHORS of today are eminently respectable, compared with the sad dogs who are now our precious classics. Writing about the author of that indecent book, "Gulliver's Travels," which, in expurgated form, is a popular juvenile, Macaulay called him "an apostate politician, a ribald priest, a perjured lover." Horace Walpole called him "a wild beast who worried and baited all mankind." Whether he was mad or sane, whether he was married or remained in single cussedness, the biographers aren't sure. It isn't even certain he was an Irishman.

This is enough to indicate what rich material Shane Leslie found to hand when he wrote "The Skull of Swift" (published by Bobbs-Merrill), a psychoanalytic biography of the great satirist.

One of the most amusing of writers, Swift was never happy nor amused. Amusement he called "the happiness of those who cannot think." Happiness, he thought, lay in "the achievement of minor successes by little minds." And his opinion of humanity was put into the verdict that "the bulk of your nations be the most pernicious race of little odious vermin that nature ever suffered to crawl upon the surface of the earth."

His curious love-affairs with the women he rendered immortal as Stella and Vanessa give Shane Leslie an opportunity to dig the spade of conjecture deeply into the muck-heap of innuendo and scandal. Yet his book lacks the pungent flavor one might expect from abnormality. It is too allusive, too cryptic—and people nowadays don't know enough about Swift's life, nor do they read his works. He is a Rabelais who has been trained to divert children.

Even more learned than Leslie's book on Swift, a volume by D. B. Wyndham Lewis on "Francois Villon" (published by Coward-McCann) puts before us that poet-rogue whose misery and gayety, debauchery and romance, endeared him to writers like Swinburne and Rossetti. Burglar and bard, assassin and philosopher, his end is veiled in mystery. Lewis has gone into all the literature about Villon, learned all that probably can be learned about this sordid genius, and finds that "he had nearly every human weakness except insincerity."

Villon may not have been hanged, but he deserved it; his handful of devil-may-care ballads do not please every taste, but they are a reasonable caveat on immortality.

Our present-day writers are lacking in the picturesque depravity and tragic doom of those extinct geniuses. It would be difficult to fasten any felony on the author of "Peter Pan," or discover any blot upon the reputation of "The Little Minister." Thomas Moult in his biography of "Barrie" (published by Scribner), can tell us nothing worse about his hero than that as a schoolboy he devoured "penny-dreadfuls," bloody tales about pirates and highwaymen. What healthy schoolboy has preferred the immaculate Rollo?

Even more abominably virtuous is the writer portrayed in "George W. Cable: His Life and Letters" (published by Scribner), a volume by Cable's daughter, Mrs. Lucy Bikle. Cable writes to his mother from New York:

"I write this at the Century Club, sitting a few feet away from the corner where Thackerary used to sit. If God wills it I may one day venture to go and sit down there."

Being uncertain "whether the theater was necessarily a moral evil," he went to see Joe Jefferson play the "Cricket on the Hearth." He thought he was right to see this play as a part of his sincere inquiry into the moral aspects of drama.

Critics will never need to psychoanalyze Barrie and Cable, as they do Swift and Villon. But their virtues may be forgotten with their names 200 years from now.

The Road

One of the latest translations from contemporary French literature is Andre Chamson's "The Road" (published by Scribner). It is a fine picture of French peasant life, but unfortunately proves as dull and uneventful as such life would in reality be to the modern American. Chamson's peasants have bovine stolidity and a vegetable inertia, which do not furnish the stuff for drama, and aside from the sociological interest make dull reading. The emotions are stagnant, and existence a petty routine of life and death. There is no denying that it is a well-done picture, but it is also an uninteresting one. The translation is ably made by Van Wyck Brooks.

Studio Murder Mystery

Stories, plays and movies that have anything to do with life back-stage are full of fascination for people not connected with the world theatric. A. C. and Carmen Edington have long been associated with the moving picture industry, but aside from the realistic atmosphere their knowledge of studio routine has been able to give "The Studio Murder Mystery" (published by Reilly & Lee), the story is rather ordinary and the solution perfectly obvious almost before the murder is committed. There are several misleading and contradictory clues, designed to confuse the reader, and in the final summing-up the Edingtons fail to explain them at all. But many a weak story has been carried through by a clever location back-stage, and the studio part of this yarn is realistic enough to be interesting.

Times Square

Exaggerated? Not at all! Hundreds of young people who migrate every year to New York lead just the life pictured by Cornell Woolrich in "Times Square" (published by Liveright). Always broke, with no definite employment and no particular training, they drift along, spending money when they have it on night clubs and gin. They are the derelicts forming the flotsam on the murky backwash of New York's Bohemia. Woolrich's story is not pretty, but it is pathetically and humorously real. He has portrayed the tragedies and comedies of these young incapables with rare insight and skill.

Diabetics

If you have the slightest symptoms of Diabetes—such as excessive thirst, inordinate hunger, with loss of weight in spite of keen appetite, with nervousness, irritability, restlessness, anxiety over trifles and loss of strength—lose no time in reading one of the most instructive books of the day, "Back to Health from Diabetes."

It will be mailed free to anyone who will send his or her name and address to Sanborn Laboratories, 8011 Sanborn Building, Battle Creek, Michigan. It describes the Sanborn home treatment for diabetes and relates the experiences of many men and women of prominence who restored themselves to health after other treatments had failed.

The book has 64 pages bound in board covers and is a mine of authentic information for those who are suffering from Diabetes.

'Huge Sums Paid for Early American Art Objects Prove Permanence of Their Popularity'

By ROBERT W. DE FOREST,

President Metropolitan Museum of Art and Donor with Mrs. De Forest of Its American Wing.

As told to Earl Reeves.

A FEW years ago someone called the American Wing of the Metropolitan Museum in New York "a national treasure house."

Today we know the phrase to have been more truly descriptive than any of us realized at the time of its utterance. We have in that wing an esthetic shrine.

Colonial furniture, architectural forms and examples of the early decorative arts and crafts there housed have proved to be esthetic treasures very precious to the people and to the craftsmen of today.

That is proved not only by public interest in the wing itself, but in prices paid in auction rooms and in the antiquity shops frequented by collectors, great and small, and by those wholly unlearned in antique lore who seek some beautiful object for use.

Two incidents point my story.

My friend Grosvenor Atterbury, who planned the new wing, said at its opening:

"From the point of view of the designer, both of this period and of the future, the object of the American Wing seems to me to be primarily that of a corrective.

Guidance Needed
'Taste in Art Not Always On Right Road'

"Our sense of beauty is like the magnetic compass. It does not always point true north. It needs to be corrected from time to time.

"Some day we may have a gyroscopic sense of beauty. But until that time comes an exhibition of Colonial art may furnish a very healthy corrective, if we heed its teachings."

Shortly after that opening Mrs. de Forest asked in the the furniture department of a great shop whether they had any antique furniture.

"No, we have not," a saleswoman said curtly. "But we'll have to get some. There are so many inquiries. It is that American Wing. It is a fad. It will pass."

Department stores did have to stock up with antiques, and the American Wing and the interest it aroused was the reason.

But this was no fad. The architect had struck a truer note. The public interest continued, and our return to the decorative schools of our forefathers has corrected our sense of beauty.

Our Reformation
Architectural Renaissance Is in Progress

Behind the great sales in the art galleries there is an architectural reformation in progress. Wealthy families of the '80's and '90's borrowed from Europe when they built great mansions. Some of these homes, indeed, were meticulous copies of foreign palaces—and obvious aliens.

The palace architecture had grown out of feudalism, and its ornate forms had as a major reason for being the casting of glamor in the eyes of the lower social orders.

It would scarcely be an exaggeration today to say that many great houses are being built to fit their furniture—and that furniture has come from the antiques auction room.

The simple and beautiful lines of rare Colonial pieces will not fit into a background of Napoleonic splendor; and so, again quoting Atterbury,

'Metropolitan Wing a School In Taste'

our sense of beauty is corrected.

Men who were at once architects, builders and master craftsmen—such, for instance, as Samuel McIntyre, of Salem—reach out from a forgotten past to help design the country houses of today.

Not Mere Fad
Interest in Early Art Healthy and Growing

That the interest in these national aesthetic origins has been no passing fancy, but a growing thing, is well indicated by recent auctions. A summary of some record prices is of interest as showing the trend.

The most notable sale was that of the Howard Reifsnyder collection, the Americana of which brought more than a half million dollars—$527,226, to be precise. Among other notable sales were those of the collections of Fred Wellington Aver, Mrs. Charles P. Soden, William M. Austin, Lyman G. Bloomingdale and George W. Paullin.

High Prices
Collectors Eagerly Seek Real American Antiques

Some record items follow:

The VanPelt American Chippendale mahogany highboy, work of William Savery, of Philadelphia, about 1770, brought the stupendous sum of $44,000.

The famous "sample" arm chair, Chippendale, work of Benjamin Randolph, of Philadelphia, about 1770, $33,000.

Portrait of President Andrew Jackson, the work of Samuel Waldo and until last fall a part of the collection of Lyman G. Bloomingdale, done about a century ago, $29,000.

Oil portrait of Maj. Gen. Baron von Steuben, inspector general of the Colonial Army, by Ralph Earle, $19,000.

Carved mahognay chest-on-chest, Philadelphia, about 1770, origin in doubt, possibly by Jonathan Gostelowe or Tdward James, brought $26,000.

Mahognay Lyre card table, by Duncan Phyfe, New York, 1800, $7,500.

Six painted braced bow-back Windsor chairs, Seventeenth Century, $1,380.

Paneled oak chest, Connecticut, Seventeenth Century, $2,000.

Parcel-gilded mahogany banjo clock, Simon Willard, Boston, 1815, $2,700.

Minature tall-case clock, maple, Timothy Chandler, Concord, N. H., 1800, $2,350.

Painted hickory and maple slat-back arm chair, New England, about 1650, $1,100.

Gold snuff-box of Gen. von Steuben, made by Samuel Johnson, New York, 1780, $4,100.

Silver poringer, diameter 5½ inches, by Benjamin Hiller, Boston, about 1710, $1,900.

Silver tankard, height 8¼ inches, by Benjamin Burt, Boston 1756, $3,600.

Queen Anne carved fiddle-back side chair, Philadelphia, about 1730, $6,700.

Carved mahogany ball-and-claw foot shelf clock, by Daniel Frost, Reading, Mass., date about 1770, $3,600.

American Chippendale carved mahogany side chair, Philadelphia, about 1770, $8,300.

Chippendale carved walnut side chair, Philadelphia workmanship, 1760, $4,60.

Mahogany block front knee-hole writing desk, New England, about 1770, $2,700.

Carved walnut day bed, Philadelphia, $500.

Carved inlaid mahognay secretary-bookcase, by Aaron Willard, Boston, 1805, $4,300.

Fiddle-back walnut arm chair with a William Avery label, $9,000.

Significant Trend
Birth of Nationalism in Decorative Arts

As directors of a museum which is national in its influence, we have no concern with auction room prices, although as private collectors we may find them little short of amazing.

But it is of some interest to note that the most famous collection in the country, that made by Eugene Bolles, of Boston, and purchased in 1910 by Mrs. Russell Sage as a gift for the Metropolitan Museum, has at least quadrupled in value since that date. This is the conservative estimate of Henry W. Kent, secretary of the Museum.

If we had to go out now in search of exhibits we would find that our silent campaign of education has given a rarity value to the best pieces which would make museum buying very difficult.

Fortunately, our collection is very complete; but at a recent sale the Pennsylvania Museum and the Detroit Institute of Arts were bidders against the almost limitless pocketbooks of some of our most persistent private collectors.

However, all this constitutes but a phase of the real story. The birth of a nationalism in decorative arts is the significant thing; and that has set in motion tendencies reaching literally into almost every home in America.

Religious shrines cast their influence far afield, beyond the cities in which they are located. This has proved to be no less true of this museum wing which I have called an aesthetic shrine.

During the period when these early craftsmen of ours were working, the best work of the masters was copied, imitated, altered to meet local tastes. The excellency of one man was "translated" by many others.

Studying the Past
American Wing Is School For Craftsmen

Chippendale's book carried his ideas across the Atlantic; he became standard, almost classic. Duncan Phyfe's requirements regarding materials were so rigorous that he set a standard in that regard, and the best mahogany logs came to be known as "Duncan Phyfe logs."

Today, these Colonial craftsmen, in a dozen lines, are reaching down through time and setting standards for us.

In the museum we are not concerned about obtaining the most expensive piece, the most ornate, or articles of great luxury. We sought typical furniture, furnishings and rooms such as would tell a two-hundred-year story of beauty.

When the machine craftsmen of today began to awaken to the reception given by our people to the hand craftsmen of earlier centuries, the "moderns" quite literally began to go to school in the American Wing.

Furniture manufacturers came and photographed, studied and measured. Schools of architecture sent classes whose members are beginning the practice of their profession with a new ideal. Students of the decorative arts come and come again, and go away to carry the essential story of this renaissance into the home of millions.

The wall paper industry sends its best draftsmen, and in any wall paper shop in any town in the United States today you may look at wall papers which had their real artistic origin more than a century ago.

The shelves of the department store contain chintzes and dress prints which our great-great-great grandmothers might "recognize" could they reappear among us.

The various industries which furnish the American home have made the most exhaustive researches into the Colonial period, seeking those things which may be adopted or adapted to the uses of a machine age.

In this we have helped, considering that the function of a museum is to serve the people.

Incidental, but very significant, is the fact that the industrial demand for information about the exact colors popular in Colonial days became so great that we were forced to have "color cards" made, similar to those used in commercial paint shops.

No, the "antique craze" is not a passing fad. It is not a rich man's whim. It has been a corrective of national taste in art. We are going to school to these fathers of American arts and crafts.

"Colonial" has become the dominant architectural design throughout the United States, excepting in such states as Florida and California and border sections where the Spanish style is both historic and appropriate to the climate.

Appropriate
Pieces Designed Ideally For Their Uses

Paul Revere, the silversmith, is helping design our table-ware, as he fired our imaginations in school days.

The Connecticut clock makers live again through widespread reproduction of their models. Some of the simple dignity of a more unhurried age is returning to our homes, to replace the restlessness of gilt and jigsaw.

One of the charms of early America household art was that it was so appropriate to the purposes for which it was designed, it fitted into the lives of the owners. All this contributed a restfulness, so that now many who walk from the hurry of a great city into the rooms of the American Wing sense the contrast at once and breathe a wish that they "might live in rooms like these."

Watching the revolution in American domestic art of today we can only assume that this restful influence is penetrating rapidly into the American home—and add a hope that it will contribute to the happiness and health of the nation.

HER BABY WAS BEING POISONED

Young Mother Tells Amazing Story—How Her Baby Was Saved From Poisoning.

Here in this enlightened country you would not think it possible that an innocent little five months baby would be poisoned. But sometimes it occurs. The following astonishing experience happened to the pretty young wife of J. Peilly, McKeesport, Pa., who tells the story in her own words:

"When our third baby came," she says, "I was in a very run down condition. The baby seemed sickly from the first four weeks. He cried a large part of the time, day and night. After nursing his poor little stomach would swell up and get as tight as a drum. It nearly broke my heart to see him suffer so terribly. The stools were the wrong color, full of foam, and some months he did not gain in weight at all. When he was five months old I felt so discouraged that I decided not to try to feed him at the breast in Nature's way any more. So I changed to bottle feeding. And he stayed just as weak and puny on the bottle as he had been at the breast, crying for hours at a time, 'till I thought I would go crazy.

"At last, it was our good midwife who told me what to do. She said that my own system was clogged up with poisons and, therefore, my milk had been slowly poisoning my baby! She recommended World's Tonic as a fine medicine to give my system a good cleansing. I followed her directions and after a few days I felt better all over. My head was clear. I wasn't dizzy any more, my tongue was no longer coated. It wasn't too late to put the baby back on the breast. My milk was a little scanty at first, but soon I had more than before. Baby picked up right away—no more gas, no more colic, no more unhealthy stools, no more long, pitiful, crying spells. His cheeks got rosy and he put on good solid flesh so fast I soon forgot how sickly he used to be.

"But I never will forget that it was World's Tonic which saved us both. I always keep a bottle in the house and I use it whenever any of us need a good cleansing medicine. World's Tonic is different from ordinary American medicines because it is made from herbs brought from many different parts of the world. That's why it brings such amazing results to people of different races as well as to Americans."

World's Tonic is for sale at Dow's (formerly McCulloch's), also May's and other modern drug stores. (A-11).

BLOOD CELL PROTEIN SERUM

Heritage to the World

TRADE MARK

Today a new humanism is being erected upon the foundations which are being placed within the grasp of man. Mr. Ford outlined well the new movement toward achieving greater Health for the nation. This awakening is bending like a new bow of promise across the sky of human hope, relieving misery and suffering. The usefulness and good of this awakening depend on its universality and permanence, upon the socialization of science. We must enter the holy temple and tear aside the mystic veil and through publicity in simple form reveal the mysteries of medicine to the people. For if the scientist gain the whole world and cannot share it with mankind, civilization will again lose its soul. But if a true scientific and humanistic channel can bring all the ministries of medicine to the common man, it will endow him with a new and larger life, unknown powers for efficiency and social service.

No doctor is greater than his remedy. Over a million dollars have been spent on this remedy, and over a million people have benefited. Twenty years of successful use.

PUBLIC OPINION DEPENDABLE

Sick people are coming to this Laboratory because the cost of serums is cheaper than medicine, because 35,000 have found a fair and honest examination with no Doctor charges, because the Laboratory is incorporated and has the exclusive License to administer Protein Serums. You have watched this Laboratory grow for seven years and no one has ever been able to criticize its plan, policy or conduct.

MODERN MODEL HOMES

Sun-Telegraph Opens Virginia Manor Model Home

COLONIAL HOME HAS FEATURES TO LURE GUEST

Imposing Atmosphere of Old Southern Mansion Seen In Mt. Lebanon House.

The third Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph model home opens today. The house is a large stone colonial residence at Midway road and Parker drive, Virginia Manor plan, Mt. Lebanon.

The house is considered one of the outstanding homes of the South Hills. It is a large stone structure in the southern colonial design with two-story porch columns extending across the entire front, lending the imposing atmosphere of the old southern mansion.

The walls are rough hewn, with attractive arches above the windows. A wide variety of shrubbery has been used in landscaping the large grounds.

In equipment the house has the best of modern household appliances. Many recent features of interest to the housewife are included. The house will be open to visitors for a period of five weeks of demonstration.

TRUE COLONIAL DESIGN

The Virginia Manor model home combines artistic beauty with practical features. Its Colonial design is kept true to type in all its details. Exterior woodwork bears little ornamentation yet has the fine lines which distinguished the early masterpieces.

One sees the Colonial treatment in the entrance door. The entrance is flanked with two sidelights of leaded glass designed in attractive rosettes. Above the entrance at the half-story mark is the typical Palladian window. This has the round arch and side lights and gives illumination to the second floor hall and the landing of the stairway.

The hallway is done in paneled woods. An artistic stairway winding to the second floor above the entrance is an artistic feature. The curved stair rail is supported by hand-turned ballusters. It terminates in delicate curves about a newel post at the base.

The living room to the left of the hallway has a large fireplace with carved mantel. The walls are paneled with attractive wood in dark finish.

QUAINT DINING ROOM

The dining room is on the right of the hallway. An attractive corner cupboard of period design and a large fireplace are touches which give this room the quaint charm of the early days. Lumber used in the floors of the home is in varying widths and is pegged down, presenting the appearance of the floors worked out by hand in pioneer times.

The library is an unusually attractive room, with tall beamed ceiling. Windows in the library are equipped with a special type of glass to admit the ultra-violet rays of the sun. Tall built-in bookcases and a fireplace complete the layout.

The kitchen in the rear of the home is finished with built-in units. Radiation is concealed and a ventilating fan is provided to carry off the vapors of cooking. A large model of Frigidaire has been installed.

A breakfast nook is between the kitchen and the center hall. It is well lighted and attractively designed.

GARAGE ATTACHED

A two-car garage is attached to the home and is reached through the center hall. It is provided with overhead doors made in detail for the job.

On the second floor are four bedrooms and two bathrooms. The master bedroom is equipped with a fireplace.

Arrow Markers On Auto Roads To Model Home

THE best motor routes to the Virginia Manor model home in Mt. Lebanon have been marked with red arrows by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. Drive through the Liberty Tubes and out West Liberty avenue to Bower Hill road, Mt. Lebanon. Turn right on Bower Hill road and proceed to Cochran road. Turn right on Cochran road two squares to Virginia Manor plan entrance. The model home faces the entrance at Midway road and Parker drive. An alternate route is offered by way of the West End, the Banksville road and Parker drive.

SHINGLE TILE USED ON ROOF

A new type of shingle tile, manufactured to represent the old weather-beaten shingle of the Colonial home, has been used on the roof of the Virginia Manor model home in Mt. Lebanon. The tile gives the appearance of a roof of great age, yet it forms a covering which builders say will last as long as the stones in the house.

The shingle tile are fastened with copper nails on a heavy felt placed for insulating purposes. Each tile is different. One shows a rough knot and the marks which present the appearance of the work of insects; another has a greenish tint like a growth of moss.

The Virginia Manor house represents one of the first installations of this type of tile in the country. At different periods of the day the thick butts of the tile cast various lights and shadows which completely change the appearance of the roof. The tile was installed by Hofmann & Grossman.

Efficient Gas Burner Utilized in Heating Modern Model Home

The gas-burning heater used in the Virginia Manor model home is the product of development in the manufacture of heating units. Its advantages result from sound scientific design.

A new type of boiler section, efficient gas burners and an effective system of air regulation are featured. The heating sections are shaped to secure absorbtion of at least 80 per cent of the heat from the gases in their travel by natural circulation from burner to flue. The heater is thoroughly insulated.

Gas heat in the home is dustless and leaves no soot or smoke. The fuel is let into the home by the regulation of a valve and there are no ashes to remove. The gas boiler in the model home was furnished by the B-Line Boiler Company.

Colonial Style Used In Lighting Fixtures

Lighting fixtures in the Virginia Manor model home are strictly in Colonial design. In the center hall is a Colonial urn with hanging glass prisms. In the living room are two-light Colonial fixtures in pewter and brass with glass shaped in the design of the old-fashioned oil lamp chimney. In the dining room is a five-light Colonial fixture in pewter and bronze.

New Electric Heater Used in Model Home

An electric wall heater has been installed in the bathroom of the Virginia Manor model home. This heater is finished in sea green to match the tile walls. It quickly heats the room, assuring comfort on cold winter mornings. The unit used is an Adams electric wall heater furnished by the East End stove store.

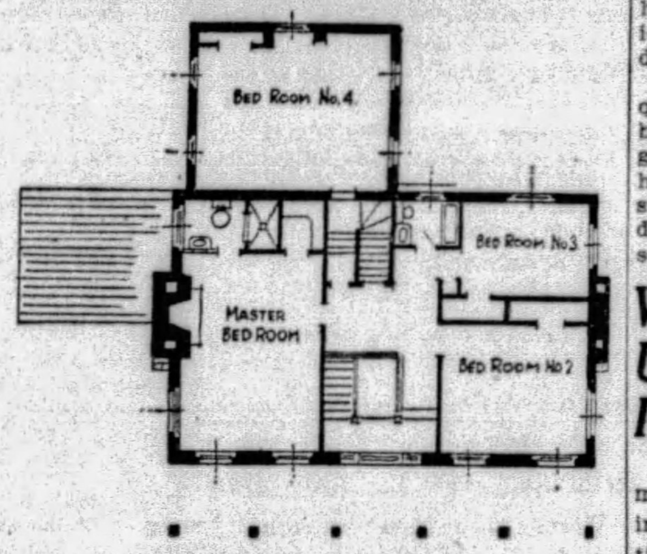
FIRST FLOOR

COMPLETED— This is the third model house sponsored by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. It is a large Virginian Colonial design, reminding in many ways of the mansion at Mt. Vernon. The house contains 10 rooms, three bathrooms and a garage for two cars. It is a center hall type with dining room on the right and living room and library on the left. Kitchen and breakfast room are at the rear and the garage connects with the hallway. Four bedrooms and two baths are on the second floor



SECOND FLOOR

Brighter Colors Adding Life to Modern Kitchen

THE right shades of color will bring both light and cleanliness to the walls of the kitchen. Bright, cheerful colors that reflect plenty of light will make kitchen work less fatiguing. To secure long wear, and the desired cleaning properties, the finish should dry with a semi-gloss which will prevent grease and steam from penetrating into the pores of the plaster.

Built-In Equipment For Modern Kitchen

Built-in kitchen equipment in the Virginia Manor model home is considered one of the most complete and convenient installations made in the Pittsburgh district. The units are specially designed by expert kitchen planners. Metal work about the units is chromium-plated. An adjustable flour bin, velvet-lined drawers and movable shelves are featured. The equipment was furnished by the Built-in Company.

Inspectors Prepare For Annual Picnic

Quality Materials Used In Virginia Manor Home

Materials used in the Virginia Manor model home were carefully selected to make the house a true example of fine construction. The work in the home was carefully supervised to insure the best practice in the use of the material. Thomas B. Carman, architect, planned the home and inspected it. Specifications for the house follow:

MASONRY—Footings of poured concrete, 12 inches deep and 24 inches wide under all walls. Stone laid in pure cement mortar according to broken ashler design. Chimney built of stone and topped out in Colonial style.

INSULATION—Straub cinder concrete building units furnished by the General Cement Products Corporation, were used in backing up stone masonry, giving walls resistance to temperature, sound and moisture.

FLOOR BEAMS—Junior beams, product of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, were used in all floors of the home in combination with concrete to give safe, strong and fireproof construction.

WOODWORK—All framing lumber and exterior millwork carefully selected from seasoned stock. Interior trim in Colonial design, done in gum wood and constructed with special lock joint.

INCINERATOR—A chimney-fed incinerator is used in the home.

HARDWARE — Hardware in bronze in period designs.

GARAGE DOORS—Overhead doors for the garage furnished by the Overhead Door Sales Company. Doors were built to special detail.

WINDOWS—Wooden sash of the Colonial design were used. Special solar glass in library windows admits the ultra-violet rays of the sun.

WALL HEATERS — Electric wall heaters for the bathrooms were furnished by the East End Stove Store.

SHUTTERS—Shutters of plain six-panel type used with wrought iron hand-forged hinges.

PLUMBING — Plumbing fixtures were furnished by the Bailey - Farrell Manufacturing Company. Exposed metal parts are chromium-plated. Brass pipes were used for all plumbing, both concealed and exposed.

ART GLASS—Art glass in attractive designs furnished by the Acme Art Glass Company.

PAINTING—Pure white lead and linseed oil used in proper proportion for exterior painting. Exterior woodwork received three coats of paint and interior woodwork was given seven coats. Painting was done by Eiseler and Rexford.

LIGHTING FIXTURES—Hand-wrought lighting fixtures of Colonial design were used.

ELECTRIC WIRING — Complete system of electric wiring installed according to red seal specifications by the Dunker Electric Company.

HEATING—A B-line boiler was installed by Matter Brothers. Radiation of Fantom design was used.

WATER HEATER—A water heater of large capacity, insuring an instantaneous supply of hot water in the home, was furnished by the Pittsburgh Water Heater Company.

TILE WORK—Tile work in attractive colors to match fixtures was used in all bath rooms.

KITCHEN UNITS—Complete layout of modern kitchen units furnished by the Built-In Company.

REFRIGERATION — Latest model Frigidaire installed in kitchen by Suburban Electric Development Company.

VACUUM SYSTEM — A vacuum system to remove dust and dirt from the home by water power has been installed.

HEAT REGULATOR—A heat regulator with clock control to maintain an even temperature in the home at all times was furnished by T. F. Campbell, distributor for the Minneapolis-Honeywell Heat Regulator Company.

RADIO OUTLETS—Radio outlets in living room and master bedroom furnished by Yaxley Manufacturing Company. Radio aerial installed in roof.

RADIO—The latest model Earl radio manufactured by Charles A. Freshman Company has been installed in the home.

WASHER—A Kohler washer was furnished through the Bailey-Farrell Company.

FURNITURE—Complete furnishing of the home by Kaufmann's.

PIANO—A Stieff grand piano has been furnished for the home by the Charles M. Stieff Company.

LANDSCAPING — Landscaping of the grounds of the model home was done by Elliott and Leonard, landscape architects.

Good Roof Vital To Home Comfort

In planning a home, one of the most vital factors in the safeguarding of health and comfort is the roof. It must protect not only the house itself and all its contents, but those who dwell there.

Design Important In Buying Screens

First cost should not be considered in the purchase of screens for the home. The main object is to obtain a well-designed screen constructed of material which will not rust.

Floor Is Stage Where Interior Scene Is Built

NOTED interior decorators point out that the floor should be the starting place in the planning of every room. They show that the floor is really the stage upon which the interior scene is set. When the floor is correctly chosen, interior color harmony is merely a matter of selecting furnishings and decoration in pleasing contrast. A wide variety of color effects in floors may be secured at moderate cost.

Vacuum System Used To Keep Home Clean

A vacuum system has been selected to aid the housekeeper in the Virginia Manor model home. The system is powered by hydraulic suction. In addition to pulling dirt from every crack and crevice it will remove it from draperies, upholstery and clothing. The dirt is carried through a system of pipes into the sewer system. Many of the larger homes of Pittsburgh have a vacuum system.

Convenience Seen In Radio Outlets

A number of radio outlets at convenient points in the home makes it possible to get greater enjoyment from the radio. The use of the outlets eliminates unsightly wires and provides a quick connection in the kitchen, bedroom, porch or living room. Radio outlets for the Virginia Manor model home are the product of the Yaxley Manufacturing Company.

Virginia Manor Provides Many Artistic Homes

EVERY home in Virginia Manor plan, neighborhood of the Sun-Telegraph model home, represents a distinct type of architecture. Old English cottages, houses of the Shakespearean period, English country homes, Normandy village design, and many periods of the American Colonial architecture are represented. The houses have been planned and supervised by Thomas B. Garman, architect, who has offices on the plan. This architectural supervision gives Virginia Manor a place among the outstanding real estate developments in large cities of the nation.

CHOICE PLANTS AT NEW HOME

Landscaping of the large plot of ground around the Virginia Manor model home was handled according to the best ideals of the professional planter. Many choice plants were used, some of which will require three to five years for development, but which will ultimately lend beauty to the location.

American elm trees were used to blend with the colonial architecture of the home, along with many flowering crabapples and unusual lilacs. A rose garden has been included in the yard. Many of the hardy perennials of the old-fashioned garden will lend beauty to the decorative scheme.

Numerous evergreens and a quantity of rhododendron have been planted to give color to the grounds in winter. The plantings have been kept in scale with the size of the house. The work was done by Elliott & Leonard, landscape architects.

Virginia Manor Home Uses Red Seal Plan In Electric Wiring

Wiring in the Virginia Manor model home has been done according to the best Red Seal specifications issued by the Electric League of Pittsburgh. This organization is supported by many firms in all branches of the electric industry.

Red Seal specifications represent years of study by prominent electrical engineers. They point out the type of wiring which should go in the modern home to give complete comfort and safety. The best time to do electric wiring easily and cheaply is when the home is built.

The Red Seal plan insists on wiring of sufficient capacity to carry the load of light and service in the home. High grade materials are specified and the minimum requirements for outlets.

Built-In Incinerator Saves Labor in Home

The responsibility of seeing that trash and refuse were removed from the home was once one of the most disagreeable duties of the housewife. This problem is cared for in the Virginia Manor model home with an incinerator of the built-in type. All forms of waste material, including sweepings from the vacuum cleaner, old papers, magazines, garbage, rubbish and wilted flowers may be dropped into a receiving hopper door in the kitchen. The entire mass falls into a combustion chamber, where it is consumed at intervals with a gas flame.

Hot Water Problem Solved in New Home

Hot water at a moment's notice is one of the absolute requirements in the modern home. The Virginia Manor model home has been fitted with a Pittsburgh water heater of the latest type insuring a plentiful supply of hot water at all times. The coil of the heater is so designed as to extract from the flame every possible unit of heat. The water from this type of heater is held pure enough for drinking purposes.

COMFORT FIRST OBJECTIVE IN HOME INTERIOR

Restful Furniture in Classic Design Shows Hospitality Of Old Southern Home.

All the mellow charm of gracious living and traditional hospitality is expressed in the interior of the Virginia Manor model home, decorated and furnished by Kaufmann's studios of interior decorating. While furniture of classical design and a certain dignity of arrangement suggest the Georgian Colonial period, yet there is no slavish adherence to details of antique home setting, and all requirements of modern comfort and convenience are fully met.

Immediately one enters the hall, its restful charm is apparent. Carpeted with rust-colored Wilton and having draperies of lovely blue-green satin-damask, striped with moire, which harmonize richly with the parchment wall and antique walnut paneling, this hall charms with its quiet color beauty. It is simply furnished with a console table and mirror of antique mahogany, also a formal chair of old walnut with carved high back and green velvet seat. A grandfather's clock is visible from the middle landing of the stairway.

Beautifully proportioned, the large living room shows to advantage the antique walnut paneling and the parchment finished walls which are everywhere on the first floor. The long windows are curtained with Irish point as are all the windows on the first floor, while the over draperies are of silk damask in a soft henna shade with design and silk tassel fringe in old blue. The floor is spread with a large Kermanshah rug, stressing henna and blue shades.

COLONIAL FURNITURE

A Duncan Phyfe sofa, covered in green damask, a winged upholstered chair of tapestry, a Queen Anne table desk, and Georgian chairs emphasize the Colonial character of this room. Delightful accent notes are furnished in many lamps conveniently placed on low tables. A favored style of lamp is the three-candle style with pewter-finished base and silk shade.

The library, paneled in Colonial pine, and having a stone fireplace and one wall entirely filled with built-in shelves for books, is furnished for comfort. A reading table is flanked with cushioned benches. There is a large easy chair of red morocco leather and a wing chair upholstered with crewel-embroidered linen.

COLORFUL DINING ROOM

Formalized yet colorful, the dining room has a large Chinese rug in subtle shades of blue and coral, while the over-draperies are of hand-blocked linen showing a modern floral design on a coral and black background. A Duncan Phyfe dining room suite of antique crotch mahogany presents a combination of dignity and beauty of line. The dinner service is in the old tower pattern, in rose on white.

Colonial mahogany furniture is in the master's bedroom, which combines lovely petunia shades and green with old ivory in the color scheme. The walls are papered with a choice paper printed to represent ivory taffeta, tufted with green cord and tassels. A Wilton broadloom rug in petunia shade is on the floor, while the draperies are of green linen with design in yellow and fuchsia shades. The windows have dainty curtains of point d'esprit, ruffled and with tie-backs to match. Feminine touches in this room are boudoir chairs covered in gold-striped rep, and lace bedspreads lined with silk.

BEDROOM IN PINK

A bedroom done in pink is papered in a Colonial flower pot design in pink and green and has the woodwork enameled a soft shade of shell pink. Draperies of green glazed chintz are finished with quilling of rose and two shades of green. The furniture is of maple, there being a four-poster bed with tester and bed spread of pink Colonial print. A new carpeting from the Bigelow Hartford mills,—one that exactly reproduces the beauty of the hooked rug, is on the floor.

Construction Prices Forced Down by Competition

LOOSE VARIETY OF CREDIT HITS BUILDING TRADE

Bargain-Counter Methods Threatening Menace to Construction Industry.

N. Jay Biddle, director of the Allied Construction Industry, of Detroit, Mich., is of the opinion that construction prices are entirely too low, with the result that there is too much competition and overcrowding in the building industry. The idea prevails in the building field that sales should be made at any price, and Mr. Biddle feels that these bargain-counter methods should not be permitted to predominate.

He told members of the Indianapolis Building Congress that if the credit standards of this credit building industry are brought down completely it will invite over-financed and incompetent operators on building projects to accept long-term notes with the possibility of no collection. Loose credit has been responsible for the overcrowding of the contracting field, price cutting, bid peddling and many other slippery or crooked practices. Thus the good construction operator has been handicapped and penalized, the building industry has been overcrowded and a number of unfair practices have popped up.

CREDIT PROBLEM

"This credit problem is one of the most serious things affecting the building industry today," continued Mr. Biddle. "We must submerge our factional apparent benefits for the good of the industry. We cannot control the productive capacity of any industry. It is impossible and illegal to control prices; credit is different, we can control that. To establish and maintain fair and equitable credit standards is not only legal but good business.

"Sound credit policies rigidly enforced are decreasing (1) past due accounts; (2) monetary loss; (3) collection costs, and eliminate unfair and unbalanced competition.

DETROIT PRACTICE

"You may perhaps be interested in knowing just what policies are in effect in the different groups of Detroit at present. In the building material the policy is, goods purchased during any one month must be paid for by the fifteenth of the following month in order to secure the cash discount. The account is net to the end of the month, and if still unpaid all further shipments are on a C. O. D. basis. The same terms apply for the steel group.

"In the electrical field the terms are the same, with the exception that the fixed discount date is the tenth of the month instead of the fifteenth. We have not operated long enough in the other fields yet to have any definite figures to present at this meeting, but in the electrical field we have some very startling results.

"On August 1, 1928, there were 850 licensed electrical contractors. Two years and five months later, on January 31, 1929, there were 374 licensed electrical contractors and only two of those who were on the permanent cash list during 1928 were able to relicense in 1929. Also the jobbers were never able to get in their money so easily as is possible now."

Laurel Despised By Mountaineer Now Has Value

HIGH mountain laurel or rhododendron, once considered a pest by the mountain farmer, has come into such favor as a decorative plant that there is now profit in cultivating it. The University of West Virginia has made a study of its culture and efforts are being made to avoid wasteful inroads on the mountain laurel patches by outsiders.

MODERN ICE CHEST

AT MODEL HOME— This type of Frigidaire, one of the largest, was selected for the Virginia Manor model home. The unit has a capacity to preserve a large supply of fruit and vegetables for the housewife.

Apply Mortar Only On Edges of Block

Mortar should be used on cinder block only at the edges. A through mortar joint will draw moisture through the wall.

LARGE ICE BOX OF NEW DESIGN USED IN HOME

Planners Select Refrigerator With Cold Control for Virginia Manor House.

The selection of electric refrigeration for the Sun-Telegraph model home at Virginia Manor, Mt. Lebanon, was given careful attention by skilled home planners. One of the largest models of Frigidaire was installed by the Suburban Electric Development Company.

The box was chosen with consideration for the probable size of the family which will occupy the large home. It has been placed in a convenient corner of the kitchen where it will be easily accessible. It has a capacity to care for large quantities of fruits, vegetables and other foods.

The refrigerator selected is an all-porcelain box and is easily cleaned. The interior is seamless and has rounded corners, making it possible to achieve the highest degree of sanitation with little effort.

BIG FREEZING CAPACITY

The box has a freezing capacity of approximately 13½ pounds of ice cubes every two hours. This large capacity is made possible by the new Frigidaire cold control.

The cold control device in the refrigerators represents the same type of regulation that the oven control does in the stove. Six positions are in the range of the cold control lever, making possible a total drop of 20 degrees of temperature in the ice box.

A powerful and efficient compressor makes the cold control possible. The range in temperature afforded gives the housewife many opportunities for making new frozen desserts. Various types of fruits and salads may be specially treated with good results.

A recipe book is being distributed by Frigidaire dealers, including 75 recipes for frozen dainties. Ice creams, preserved fruits, mousses, sherberts, ices, parfaits, cocktails, salads and pastries are included among the recipes.

Effect of Tapestry Achieved With Tile In Modern Bathroom

The beauty of artistic tile work is illustrated in the Virginia Manor model home. Heavy clay tile were used with mellow, subdued colors in varying shades, the walls giving the effect of a rare old tapestry.

In the large bathroom this type of tile was used exclusively. The finish is dull and free from reflected lights. The color has been fired to high temperatures, insuring perfect bond between the surface and the clay body. The general effect shades to blues and greens.

A smaller bathroom has walls in mat finish sea green. The vitreous floor is done in blending colors. The shower is treated in the same manner as the main bath, with special molded tile around the shower opening. Bathroom accessories, including the heater, are done in colors to match the walls.

Homes Purchased In Squirrel Hill

Three houses at 2625-31 Beechwood boulevard, Fourteenth Ward, have been sold through Smith Brothers Realty Company for Joseph A. Casale and Philip S. Casale to Harry Mellon for $49,500. The buyer takes the property for investment. The same brokers sold for Alexander Cafardo and Joseph Sciulli to Harry Mellon a brick house at 2863 Beechwood boulevard for $16,000.

Radio Development Follows Research

Constant research to keep abreast of new developments in radio reception is seen in the Earl radio installed in the Virginia Manor model home. The radio manufactured by the Charles M. Freshman Company.

THE OVERHEAD DOOR
Installed on the Garage of the Virginia Manor Model Home

Specially Constructed Overhead Doors at Virginia Manor

Your garage is recognized as part of your home. As it is in constant use, it should satisfy you in every detail. The Overhead Door is the most efficient, modern and entirely satisfactory door yet perfected. Operating on ball-bearing rollers, engaged within a scientifically designed track, it opens upward completely out of the way with effortless ease.

Are you tolerating old-fashioned doors on your present garage? Will you compromise by permitting inferior doors to be used on your new garage? Is that new home you expect to buy really a bargain if you must meet expensive repairs and experience inconvenience because of inferior garage doors? Operating on ball-bearing rollers, it opens upward completely out of the way with almost effortless ease.

The Overhead Door is made in any size and is adaptable to private or public garages, factories, warehouses, fire departments and similar buildings.

Many States Approve Real Estate License Laws

CODES REQUIRE FORM OF TEST FOR SALESMEN

Legislation in Some States Also Examines Commodity Marketed by Broker.

The present tendency in real estate license law legislation is toward requiring some kind of examination to prove the competency of the applicant to hold the license to act as real estate broker or salesman, Gen. Nathan William MacChesney, of Chicago, told members of the states council and the presidents and secretaries of state real estate associations at the annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Gen. MacChesney is general counsel for the National Association and author of the "MacChesney Act," the model for real estate license laws, which is being used as a pattern for legislation in many states.

"The real estate license law movement began with the effort to regulate the personnel of the brokers and salesmen engaged in the business," Gen. MacChesney continued. "There is now noted a tendency not only to regulate the personnel of the business, bu to qualify the commodity in which the real estate broker deals.

CALIFORNIA LAW

"The legislature of California has provided this year, with respect to agricultural acreage, subdivisions offered for sale, colonization, and other purposes, that the commissioner may require certain information as to such lands and maye make an examination of them by means of expert and technical assistants who shall be employed at the expense of the subdivider."

In a summary of license law legislation, which has been passed within the last year, Gen. MacChesney stated that, prior to this year, there were license laws in 22 states and one province in Canada. This year, Pennsylvania, Arkansas and Iowa have written license laws on their books for the first time. Six other states tried for license laws this year but failed — Connecticut, Indiana, Missouri, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Texas. Efforts for such laws were likewise in the legislature of the province of Ontario, Canada, and in the United States Congress for the District of Columbia. Interest has been shown in the license law movement in three other states during the year: Massachusetts, Nebraska and Tennessee. Thus, only 14 states have taken no openly active interest in license law legislation to date.

AMEND LEGISLATION

Nine of the states which already had license laws amended them this year. Those states are: California, Colorado, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Utah, Oregon and Wisconsin.

"This shows that they were sufficiently interested in the movement to make the effort to improve the workability and effectiveness of these laws," General MacChesney commented. "Several of the states amended their laws to provide competency tests for license applicants. Such requirements can be written into the laws only by the exercise of the police power of the state. However, it already has been well established that it is within the province of the police power to require integrity in order to protect the public against fraudulent conduct and misrepresentation.

"The general tendency this year has been for the states to follow reasonably closely the 'MacChesney Act,' drafted as a model real estate license act on the National Association of Real Estate Boards. Such a tendency demonstrates the general disposition toward uniformity, and the uniformity displayed in the new laws makes for strength. A few principles of regulation uniformly adopted and well fortified by the decisions of the courts are of much greater value to the license law movement than a large body of miscellaneous provisions scattered throughout the states."

Stencil Border In Color Used To Trim Stucco

STENCIL decoration in color is frequently used on stucco houses, executed either in a single contrasting color or in a variety of colors. For instance, the beauty of an arched entrance to a light cream stucco bungalow would be very much enhanced with a narrow stencil border applied directly over the stucco with paint. Dark brown and deep tan would be attractive colors for conservative decoration.

Modern Gas Heaters Used in Fireplaces

The use of a gas heater of a modern type in the home fireplace brings a cheerful, mellow heat into the room. Nothing affords more comfort in the home in periods of sudden change when the furnace fires are out and chill winds return. The heaters are decorated in attractive designs. Adams Cheerful Radiant Heaters were furnished for the Virginia Manor model home by the East End Stove Store.

Zoning Act Becomes Law in Minnesota

A zoning enabling act authorizing the regulation of the location, size, use and height of buildings, the arrangement of buildings on a lot and the density of population in all cities of the second, third and fourth classes and in all villages, and the adoption of comprehensive city plans pursuant to such regulation was enacted by the Minnesota State Legislature at its recent session.

Colonial Mantels Copied by Builders

Although it is not possible for every home owner to purchase an original Colonial mantel, some of the finest examples of the Colonial craftsmanship have been copied and are being turned out in quantities by manufacturers.

Hospital Addition For Center Avenue

Preliminary estimates are being taken for alterations and an addition to the Homeopathic Hospital at 5230 Center avenue. Press C. Dowler is architect.

OVERHEAD DOOR USED IN HOME

The two-car garage attached to the Virginia Manor model home is fitted with overhead doors to insure ease of operation under all weather conditions. Snow, ice and wind have no effect on this type of door.

The overhead door consists of horizontal panels joined with combination fixture hinges. The door rolls upward on a steel track at a touch of the hand and is counterbalanced with springs in all positions. The door including all track and hardware is within the building and not exposed to weather.

In an open position, this type of garage door makes available the full height and width of the opening. When closed it fits tightly without jamming. This feature will be of interest to the householder who has had the experience of having the frosts of winter creep beneath the sill of the garage door forcing it up and binding the door in a closed position.

PLUMBING SETS NEW STANDARD

The bathrooms in the Virginia Manor model home represent the latest developments in modern plumbing. Designed by an experienced architect and using the best of materials, the rooms illustrate the type of plumbing which is making the bathroom one of the artistic rooms of the home.

Shining chromium-plated fittings of attractive design are contrasted with the rich tapestry effect of tile walls. The concealed portion of the plumbing is of high quality, copper pipes being used throughout the home. Plumbing materials were furnished by the Bailey-Farrell Manufacturing Company.

This organization is a Pittsburgh firm founded in 1840. The development of sanitation and modern plumbing fixtures is an unusual history and may be traced in the growth of the Bailey-Farrel firm.

Plastering Known As Ancient Craft

Plastering is one of the oldest arts. Its purpose in the early days was that of filling the cracks in the walls to make them water-tight.

Basement Partitions Of Concrete Blocks Support Floor Loads

Basement partitions of concrete masonry are recommended for carrying the weight of the floors and interior partitions as preferable fo beams and columns, although for wide spans and heavy structures the latter are obviously necessary.

The rigid support afforded by interior masonry walls insures a minimum settlement of the floors or interior partitions and consequently little if any cracking of plaster or loosening of interior trim occurs. Such walls afford fireproof enclosures for heating equipment and fuel, confine steam, moisture and odors, and provide insulation for fruit, vegetables or other perishables.

Concrete block and tile are frequently used for both load-bearing and non-load-bearing partition walls, also for fire wall enclosures. Standard units are used for load-bearing walls while special units are often used for partition walls that do not carry loads other than their own weight.

CINDER BLOCK IN NEW MODEL

Cinder concrete building units used in backing up the stone walls of the Virginia Manor model home have a number of advantages in the construction of a strong dry wall. Cinder block will not absorb moisture nor will they sweat under quick changes in temperature.

The block tie in closely with the stone masonry. They have insulating qualities, keeping out cold in winter and heat in summer and also have soundproof qualities, holding noise to a minimum. Lumber may be nailed to the blocks successfully and plaster may be applied directly, as the rough concrete surface furnishes a perfect bond.

Cinder concrete building units for the model home were furnished by the General Cement Products Corporation.

New Screens Need Little Attention

The rolling type of screen, built in with the windows in many modern homes, requires little attention from the housewife. The screen is on the inside of the window and is completely hidden when up. It is held firmly in metal guides and will not sag with use. When pulled down the screen is locked on the window sill by a spring catch.

Rolscreens

"Year-'Round" Conveniences

ROLSCREENS are installed on the inside. Inside screening has many advantages. The screen is easily accessible, and at a touch is raised for operating or washing windows. It does not gather dirt, and offers year 'round protection to draperies.

The Sewickley Valley Trust Company, executor of the Mary Morrison estate, has sold to a Cleveland buyer a country home and 50 acres near Meadville, Pa. Clarence H. Putman was the broker.

LOCAL REALTOR SPEAKS ABOUT NEW BUILDINGS

Bamford Tells Boston Group Methods of Keeping in Step With Modern Progress

"The American skyscraper is changing so rapidly that it is impossible to build a structure which will be the last word 10 years from today. As a consequence of this rapid development, and of the demand for all that is modern in office space, the problem of the property manager is a constant keeping in line with the march of engineering progress."

This is what J. W. Bamford, of Pittsburgh, brought out in an address before the property management division of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at the annual convention of the association in Boston. Mr. Bamford talked on the "fact lifting" operations which the modern office building must constantly be subjected to if it is to meet the competition of its newest neighbors.

Mr. Bamford said in part:

"Nowhere else in the world can be found buildings comparable in size, convenience or luxury to our American temples of business.

SKYSCRAPER YOUTHFUL

"It is very difficult for us at times to recall that thirty or forty years ago, the skyscraper office building did not exist. The invention and the improvement of the hydraulic elevator made it possible to erect buildings of 10 or 12 stories in height. Then development of steel frame structures, with the simplification of foundation problems and lessened wall sizes which hiterto had carried the entire weight of a building, made it possible to dream of of 25 story buildings. The invention and improvement of the electric elevator pushed the limit higher, and the studies made by leading American architects and engineers along the lines of wind stress, carrying capacities of steel beams, and proper distribution of the loads, have made it possible to erect a building to any known height with practically no danger from failure of materials.

BUILT TO ANY HEIGHT

"Nowadays we may build a business building over as large an area as we wish, and we may carry that building to any height we wish, provided always of course, that we proceed along the lines of sane, sensible engineering practice and architectural design, and provided also that we observe the building code regulations of the public.

"However, the higher we carry our building the more space we must take out of rentable area for stairways, elevator shafts, pipe shafts, and the like, and if we carry the building too high, we will have proportionately diminishing space left to rent.

"Economic considerations enter into building heights, and are much more effective than legal statutes in limiting tall structures. The pressure of new ideas, changing transportation methods and a hundred other factors are at work to create the need for constant change in building equipment and construction.

"I can think of no factor which would have a more unfavorable effect upon a successful building than to have an old, poorly kept, unsuccessful structure as a neighbor. Run-down old buildings have an indisputable bad effect upon land values and upon the class of business attracted to the neighborhood.

"The experiment of reducing rental rates as the building grows older is an apeal to the pocketbook of the American businessman which has almost always resulted in failure. The only sure method by which a building can meet competition from newer buildings is by modernizing the old structure."

REALTOR

AT BOSTON—L. T. Stevenson of Pittsburgh was prominent at the sessions of the National Association of Real Estate Boards last week in Boston. He served on the nominating committee.

WATCHING REAL ESTATE

BY M. V. BURGESS

A NEW plant to cost approximately $250,000 is planned by the Equitable Gas Company on 50,000 square feet of industrial property recently assembled on the north side of Howley street, near the Bloomfield Bridge. The new building will be the center for the activities of the company in Allegheny County and will include garage space, storage and offices. The deal was made through the Horner Real Estate Company.

DOWNTOWN property of importance has been sold by the Odd Fellows Temple Association to the Arrott Land Company for $131,000. The deal includes the old Odd Fellows Temple Building at 245 Fourth avenue adjoining the Arrott Building. Plans are indefinite, but it is rumored that a new three-story structure will be built on the site.

C. EDWARD KECK, of the Freehold Real Estate Company, has returned from his trip to Mexico. Mr. Keck and a party of Pittsburghers made a journey into the jungles 150 miles south of Vera Cruz. They report that there was no evidence of trouble in that part of Mexico and that the inhabitants were friendly. One of the party furnished the thrill of the excursion by shooting a Mexican lion.

AN attractive stone English residence with eight rooms and two-car garage in Vernon drive, Mt. Lebanon, has been sold through the Stevenson, Williams Company for Albert N. Young, builder, to Floyd F. Curtin for $19,000. The lot is 50x130 feet. The buyer has taken possession.

EXCHANGE deals included the sale by Frank T. Lauinger of a brick duplex and three garages on 30x150 feet at 6328-30 Forward avenue, Squirrel Hill, for Benjamin Mann to M. A. Martin for $20,000. Mr. Martin deeded a three-story brick warehouse on 66x101 feet at 2005-09 Wyandote street, Fifth Ward. The latter property has been held at $35,000.

BROOKLINE business property has been in good demand recently. A property at 500 Brookline boulevard, corner of Pioneer avenue, including a lot 49x84 feet with a house has been sold by Dr. Charles C. Lang to James P. Myers for $17,500. It is reported that an automotive service station is planned on the property.

GULF REFINING COMPANY has purchased three frame buildings on 60x120 feet at 200-04 Chartiers avenue, McKees Rocks, from Edward McDonald, of Elbel, Pa. The ground will be used for a service station. The George S. Davis Company was the agent in the transaction. The old buildings are landmarks in the locality. One is known as the "The Farmers' Inn" and was operated as a tavern early in the history of the county.

LARGE industrial developments in the Ambridge neighborhood are reflected in a deal by which Frank Stewart, East End builder, purchased the Baton farm on Duss avenue near the Baden Borough line from the Ambridge Land Company, representing the Hillman interests. The purchase price was reported to be $100,000. The deal was made through the Ambridge Realty Company.

Lauinger Closes Wilkinsburg Deal

Frank T. Lauinger sold for the Little Sisters of the Poor to James Charles Murphy a duplex and garages on 25x122 feet, at 411 South avenue, Wilkinsburg, for a private consideration. The purchaser buys for investment.

Squirrel Hill Home Will Cost $23,000

Plans are in progress for a residence at Northumberland and Inverness streets, Fourteenth Ward, ıthern Pac.. 131⅞ 131¼ 131⅜ 131¾ for Frank Weberman to cost $23,000. Leonard L. Broida is architect.

Hampton Township To Get New School

Plans are out for a new school building in Hampton Township. John H. Phillips is the architect.

Pittsburgher Buys Erie Apartments

A Pittsburgh investor has purchased through the C. L. Saxton Company a property known as the Lee apartments at 509 Dunn boulevard, near East Sixth street, Erie, for $35,000. The building is a four-story structure with eight suites, on 60x150 feet.

Three North Side Homes Purchased

Three houses on 35x125 feet, at McClintock and Ridgewood avenues, North Side, have been sold through the A. D. Wilson Company for the Carter estate. The same brokers sold for Mrs. Emma V. Moeser to R. Tucker a seven-room bungalow in Thornburg.

Denniston Avenue Home Is Exchanged

C. C. Hamilton & Co., through their "Exchange System," sold for C. J. Munson to M. M. Dick a 14-room brick house at Denniston and Kentucky avenues, lot 50x100 feet, for $34,500. As part payment, M. M. Dick agrees to convey three nine-room brick dwellings at Manhattan avenue near Pennsylvania avenue, on a lot 60x100 feet.

Real Estate Index Advanced in May

May real estate activity is indicated by the figure 88.6, according to the statistics compiled by the National Association of Real Estate Boards from the number of deeds recorded in 64 cities. The figure for April was 85.7.

Minneapolis-Honeywell Heat Regulator in Virginia Manor Model Home

The complete freedom from all inconvenience in operating your heating plan that is possible when gas is the fuel, can only be attained when automatic controls relieve you of the duty of regulating the temperature.

The perfect suitability of gas to entirely automatic regulation is one of its chief advantages; not to employ automatic regulation is to deprive yourself of the full degree of comfort and convenience that is available in gas.

And when your gas consumption is constantly, automatically guarded by a Minneapolis-Honeywell Heat Regulator, the saving in gas brings the cost of this luxurious type of fuel within the reach of almost every home owner.

Efficiency Experts Now Working on Real Estate

LAND INSTITUTE STUDIES MANY REALTY NEEDS

Improvements in Taxation, Financing and Subdivision Outlined for Owners.

The land economist, an efficiency expert for real estate, is showing the real estate owners of city and country how more good can be gained from the land, points out the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Few know of the existence of the Institute for Research in Land Economics and Public Utilities, housed in Northwestern University in Chicago. Although this unique organization of scholars is engaged in research, the results of their studies are not bound in volumes that gather dust in the university library. They are applied to the flesh and blood problems of the average man with a piece of land on his hands.

How to make the land more efficient by improving the way in which it is taxed, the way in which it is financed, the way in which it is subdivided, used, bought, and sold, occupies the attention of 35 experts who were brought together for this purpose by one of the world's foremost economists, Dr. Richard T. Ely.

ECONOMIST LEADER

Dr. Ely was for many years professor of political economy at John Hopkins. There writing on taxation, it was natural that he also should become interested in the allied problems of housing, farming, and the use of the land. Eight years ago he set up the institute at the University of Wisconsin. In 1925 its work had so developed that it was decided a metropolitan area would afford its workers better opportunities for research and the institute moved to Northwestern.

Programs set up by Dr. Ely, with an eye to attaching the problems of the moment, are carried on simultaneously by his staff of practical professors and graduates. In order to show how the institute's selection of subjects for research works out, take, for example, the tax situation in Chicago. Dr. Ely, an authority on taxation matters, and several of his men, had been gathering material in this field for many years. The institute machinery was oiled and ready to go when thousands of tax payers in Chicago began protesting against the methods of property assessments used there. Charging inequalities and injustices, these people forced the formation of a commission to study the situation; and the commission immediately turned to the land institute as the logical agency to undertake the task of geting at the facts.

GATHERED DATA

The institute set to work, and some months later Chicago had a mass of data concerning real estate valuations such as probably no other large city in the country has ever had. The institute found that some properties in the Chicago area had been assessed at slightly less than 5 per cent of their sales values, others at more than 100 per cent, while the average was 30 per cent.

This is an example of how the institute work is of importance to property owners or prospective property owners throughout the country, for it does not confine its activities to Chicago by any means.

The information secured by the institute convinced the Legislature that the situation was bad, and in June, 1928, it passed a bill that gave the State Tax Commission authority to make a complete reassessment of all real estate in Chicago and Cook County.

SUBDIVISION STUDY

But this is only one phase of the institute's work that is of interest to the public. One of the parts of its subdivision study, just finished, may result in making more attractive realty investments available to the public. It may also result in the building of finer cities. For this unique undertaking has analyzed the sources of credit for subdivision financing and set forth the most economical sources for use under certain conditions. To show the importance of research in this field of financing, the institute points out that it sometimes costs more to get money for financing subdivision development than to buy the land. Naturally if, and when, financing costs are high, the burden is passed on to the home buyer or builder.

The financing study also sets forth the amount of land that should be set aside under certain conditions for business sections in laying out a subdivision, and the treatise points out that sometimes too much land is developed as business property. The prospective community cannot support it, whereas it might have been sold for residential use. The subdivision study also analyzes the proportion of land that should be landscaped or set aside for park and recreational use in communities of various types.

This study takes up the matter of how fast a subdivision should grow to return the maximum investment to its promoters and to its ultimate buyers. It also goes into the subjects of subdivision control and the proper size of real estate lots.

Colonial Hardware In Model Dwelling

The hardware in the Virginia Manor model home is strictly in the Colonial design conforming with the architecture and appointments of the home. A bronze lock ornamented with an escutcheon is used. Small brass Colonial knobs are on the doors. The fittings on the entrance door are done in an especially attractive early American design.

Special Gum Lumber Used in Developing Model Home Interior

The interior trim of the Virginia Manor model home is featured by tight-fitting joints which are held in place permanently by a steel grip clamp spanning the mitre and a hard wood spline holding the surfaces of the trim on the same plane. Specially seasoned gum wood has been used.

A spring steel clip with slightly convex face and acute angle flanges is fitted into grooves on the inside of the trim. The clamp is driven towards the outer part of the corner and holds the mitre together with spring-like action.

Model Home Shows Colonial Masonry

The stone walls in the Virginia Manor home were erected according to the old Colonial style. The work is done in rough-hewn stone laid in broken ashlar. Keystones are used above the window openings. The chimneys are large and topped out in the Colonial manner. The stone work was done by Michael Greenwald.

Use of New Doors Practical Scheme

One method of modernizing the interior of the home is the use of new doors. Although doors may seem to be a permanent part of the home, the fact is that they are not. New doors can be hung in a short time at less expense than if an attempt were made to redecorate old ones.

HOUSE NEEDS HEAT CONTROL

The gas boiler in the Virginia Manor model home is controlled by a Minneapolis heat regulator. This mechanism is entirely automatic, working on a schedule set for it by an eight-day clock.

The chart of hourly temperatures will show an even line. The housewife may go about her duties without giving any thought to the furnace, and the entire family may be absent at any time without worrying about the heating of the home.

Physicians agree that a uniform temperature in the home, with cooler rooms for sleeping, has a far-reaching effect on health. The heat regulator makes this condition possible and eliminates the extremes of temperature often connected with the old-fashioned method of manual control.

Piano Needs Touch Of Fine Craftsman

Craftsmanship of the highest order is seen in the manufacture of the Stieff piano used in the Virginia Manor model home. At the factory where this piano was made, quantity production methods have not entirely replaced the handwork of skilled artisans. Where mere routine work is best executed by machinery, it is employed, but the more delicate operations are still in the hands of the master workmen.

Dead Load Reduced By Cinder Blocks

The use of cinder block in walls reduces the dead load. This is an important factor in large structures.

Rust Accumulation May Clog Plumbing

Rust accumulation in water pipes often completely close them. A sluggish flow of water from a faucet is a warning of trouble.

GREATER SIZE IN SKYSCRAPER OF TOMORROW

New York Operator Predicts Double-Decked Streets and Tall Arched Buildings.

Visualizing the skyscraper of tomorrow, Clarence T. Coley, operating manager of Equitable Building, told the sixteenth annual convention of National Association of Building Owners and Managers in Montreal that they will cover a 200x200 minimum to whole city blocks 200x800, and multiple blocks with streets through arched tunnels like the Municipal Building over Chambers street and New York Central Building over Park avenue.

"Double-decked high-speed automobile streets, double-decked sidewalks and street crossovers, sub-surface sidewalks and passageways to sub-surface transportation facilities will follow naturally to handle the concentration of people," he explained. "We must not fail to reckon with the zoning laws, framed to stabilize and confirm property values, to relieve rapidly increasing congestion in streets and on transit lines, provide a reasonable amount of natural light and air in buildings and streets, in general to make the business of the city more efficient and life more beautiful, convenient, agreeable.

"To recoup part of the confiscated possible rentable area, what is to be done? Develop areas below the street level to economic limits, to solid rock, or so deep that coffer dam walls would be too thick and expensive to keep out surrounding sub-surface water at great depths under high pressure.

"Good office building locations must be adequately served by transportation facilities from the residential and business areas throughout the city and environs. The future office building should be designed to serve in the highest possible manner the tenants."

Face Brick Displays Rival Fashion Shows In Variety of Color

Selection of the most attractive color and texture of face brick for the new home is becoming as easy as selecting a new suit or a new gown. Like clothing, jewelry and other things where individual choice is necessarily made from a display of the latest styles, face brick is now shown in all its beauty of various colors and textures by means of attractive exhibit rooms especially fitted for the convenience of prospective builders.

Dealers in face brick have developed means of showing the brick as they appear in the wall. Many employ good-sized portable panels of actual brick; others have built walls of face brick in the exhibit rooms, and some have installed lighting systems whereby the effect of daylight is obtained at all hours.

GRECIAN LAWS OFFERED WIFE REALTY RIGHTS

Historic Records Show Forms Of Real Estate Deeds Used By Ancient Civilizations.

Those who think that the independence of women is something new will be interested to learn that women could own property in their own right 2,000 years ago in the Grecian city of Gortyna on the island of Crete, says the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

The conveyancing or transfer of property had well defined rules for the protection of the property owner in the laws of all the ancient legal systems in the world. The association quotes on this subject Dr. John Henry Wigmore, professor of law at Northwestern University, Chicago, authority on legal contracts, who has just published a three volume book entitled "A Panorama of the World's Legal Systems." Dr. Wigmore spent 10 years on this work, the first of its kind to be attempted.

OLD GREEK LAW

The oldest Greek statute now extant comes from the island of Crete. This is the law of the city of Gortyna, dating from perhaps B. C. 400. This inscription, the largest existing fragment of any Greek law, came to light less than 50 years ago; for the stones on which it was chiseled had been buried for 2,000 years or more and its discovery made a sensation in the learned world. It was about 30 feet long in its original form; the broken pieces are now scattered in several museums. The first paragraphs of this law deal with personal freedom and slavery; the later paragraphs deal chiefly with the inheritance of property.

These laws show that more than 2,000 years ago women in this Cretean city could own property. Moreover, the law provided that a husband could not sell or mortgage his wife's property, nor could a son dispose of his mother's property. If a mother dies, says this ancient statue on property, and leaves children, the father has power over her property, but he cannot sell it or mortgage it, unless the children consent, when they come of age. Moreover, if the father marries another woman after the first wife's death, the children of the first wife shall have power over their mother's property. Penalties are provided for the violation of any of these provisions.

Electric Outlets Needed in Rooms

Handy electric outlets should be placed in each room of the modern home so that floor lamps and other accessories may be used without connecting with the center light cluster.

Three Main Factors Require Attention in Home Entrance Door

Three essential points should be given attention in the entrance door of the home. The door should be beautiful, durable and suitable to the style of architecture.

Beauty involves good design and correct proportions showing the master hand of the skilled architect. Durability means the use of good materials to resist the ravages of time and weather. Suitability involves good taste in the size and elaboration in keeping with the size and type of the house.

The proper use of details is one of the best means of distinguishing an entrance which is done in a masterly way. Often beautiful clean-cut fluting is used in the pilasters, and where moldings are used, each is carefully mitered so that no unfinished edges mar the fine appearance of the doorway.

STEEL BEAMS IN NEW FLOORS

Steel beams of special design are used in combination with concrete to make the floors of the Virginia Manor model home safe, strong and fireproof.

The J. & L. junior beam, designed by the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation for use in both big buildings and dwellings, received the award of merit at the Sesqui-centennial Exposition in Philadelphia. This beam, a true structural steel section, provides for the average home all the advantages that standard I-beams give the skyscraper. It is more than a structural section, for it is rolled from copper-bearing steel to resist corrosion, and has been made light enough to be practicable and economical.

Architects and builders in many sections of the United States have turned to the use of junior beams and the proper companion materials to provide homes with floors offering safety, strength and protection against fires.

The Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation has published a booklet picturing homes with J. & L. junior beam floors and detailing the manner in which these steel beams are used in dwelling construction. This booklet is offered to architects, builders and all others who are interested in dwelling construction.

Variety of Colors In Exterior Walls

A choice of many treatments is offered in modernizing the exterior of the home. Stained shingles, stucco or brick-veneer are popular sidings and permit a variety of colors.

FRAMES SERVE TWO PURPOSES

Window and door frames have two functions in building. From the practical standpoint they are the structural part of the building which joins windows, doors, screens, storm sash and blinds into the walls of the house. From the architectural standpoint, well-designed frames add greatly to the appearance of a building by defining the good proportions and correct placing of the openings.

The frame provides a means of operation for the window, and to effectively seal against moisture, water and air the "joint" in the wall between the wall proper and the window itself. Practically all the frames now offered are designed to minimize leakage.

Beautiful Interiors Based on Woodwork

Beautiful interiors must be built into the house. Furniture, rugs and curtains come and go but the woodwork remains. It cannot be moved about or discarded. It is the foundation for all decorative effects. Woodwork joins the entire home into a harmonious unit, leading gracefully from one room to another and from one floor to another. The walls, floors and ceilings are the background.

Light Colors Best In Brightest Tints

In mixing or tinting paints, it is well to remember that colors which tend toward light, such as cream and yellow, have their greatest beauty in their brightest tints. Colors that tend toward darker shades are most beautiful in their fullness and depth.

Safe, Strong, Fireproof Floors

J & L Junior Beam Fireproof Floors are a striking safety feature in the Virginia Manor Model Home, at Parker Drive and Midway Road, which opens today. J & L Junior Beams are structural steel members, light in weight to make them practicable and economical for home construction, copper bearing to give them a positive resistance against atmospheric corrosion.

Junior Beam Floors provide fireproof safety to family and possessions. They give a solid support to interior partitions. They do not shrink, warp or decay. They are vermin proof. They do not settle under heavy loads of furniture. They prevent the plaster cracks that occur in houses. Junior Beam Floors are built for solid and lasting satisfaction.

CALLED TURKEY-FOOT

A SUN-TELEGRAPH MOTORLOGUE

ONE of the most interesting districts of Pennsylvania for automobile touring is in Somerset County. It is known as Turkey-Foot and takes its name from a peculiar configuration of land formed by the junction of three rivers at Confluence. The three streams are the Youghiogheny, Casselman and Laurel Hill.

THE country there also is noted for its rugged picturesqueness and its pioneer history. The first settlers of that county built their homes in the Turkey-Foot district, which was one of the choice hunting grounds of the Indians. The trail followed by these early pioneers is followed in part on this week's tour.

THE route to Confluence is over the National Pike, one of the most historic roads in the state. The trip homeward follows the Lincoln Highway through several districts rich in Revolutionary lore. The route was charted in a Marquette Sedan, provided by the Pittsburgh Branch of the Buick Motor Company.

TRAVEL SLOWED BY LIGHTS ON BOULEVARD STOP ROADS; AUTOISTS ASK ELIMINATION

Motor Federation President, Following Tour Through State, Says Plan of Designating Through Highways Speeds Traffic Flow With Minimum of Danger and Confusion.

HARRISBURG, June 29.—With most of the main highways in Pennsylvania now designated as boulevard stop routes electric control signals along these thoroughfares no longer are needed, except at intersections where cross traffic is almost as heavy as that on the through route, E. Edward Gable, president of the Pennsylvania Motor Federation, said today.

In a statement issued from headquarters of the Federation here Mr. Gable called on municipal authorities, whether city, borough, town or township, to give serious consideration to elimination of electric controls.

"After a tour that took me over many of the boulevard stop routes in all parts of the state, and through scores of towns and cities along the highways," he said, "I am convinced that the day of the electric control signal, except for heavy city traffic, is passed and that the boulevard stop system is here to stay."

Harrisburg has tried out the through stop plan on several of its main streets, the Federation head explained, and has found it to work well. In the city of Coatesville, he said, electric traffic controls along the Lincoln High-

Trails of Pioneer Settlers of Somerset County Followed on Automobile Trip—National Pike East of Laurel Hill Rich in Historic Lore—Highest County Seat in Pennsylvania

By H. W. DIETRICH,
Automobile Editor

(This is the fifteenth of a series of weekly Motorlogues suggesting automobile trips to points of interest in Pennsylvania and adjoining states. The routes are all charted by a road scouting party and all the highways designated are in good condition unless otherwise stated. A trip to Moundsville and other interesting West Virginia towns will be outlined in a Motorlogue for next week.)

IN Somerset County, a few miles above the Mason and Dixon line, there is a tract of land known as Turkey-Foot. It obtained its name from a peculiar configuration of the land formed by the junction of three rivers where the town of Confluence now stands. The three streams are the Youghiogheny and Casselman rivers and the Laurel Hill Creek.

This bit of country, almost wholly covered by a carpet of green, is not alone noted for its peculiar topography, but also is famed for its rugged picturesqueness, its pioneers and its early history. It is a section that was TOLL HOUSE—This old structure was one of the original toll houses on the National Pike. It is located at outer end of Addison.

TURKEY-FOOT—Here is shown one of the reasons for the naming of the country about Confluence Turkey-Foot. It is the junction of the Youghiogheny and the Casselman rivers. A short distance to the left of this scene Laurel Hill creek unites with the Casselman river. The junction of the three streams is just below the town of Confluence and it was on the banks of these streams that the first settlers of Somerset county banded together to construct their homes and farm buildings, and fight the raiding Indian tribes.

Quick Stop Often Drains Vacuum Tank

A sudden stop is apt to cause difficulty in cranking the engine later on. The shock may lift the needle of the carburetor float and allow the contents of the vacuum tank to leak out.

$500 to Be Minimum Bond For Venders of Gasoline

HARRISBURG, June 29.—The method of determining the bond required of individual vendors of gasoline, under the law which becomes effective Monday, was announced today by Secretary Charles Johnson, of the Department of Revenue.

"The minimum bond will be $500," Secretary Johnson said.

Be Sure to Press On Ignition Lock

If the ignition lock is the type that really locks only when the cylinder is pressed in, the car owner must be certain that it is pressed in in such a way that it stays. Otherwise, down goes the battery.

RUGGED VALLEY—Many miles of the route on this week's Motorlogue follows along high ridges, from which numerous excellent views are to be had. One of the most interesting of these scenes is this one of the Laurel Hill creek valley, from highway 53, between Ursina and Kingwood. The creek at this point flows between a series of high hills that at one time were covered by a dense forest and now are noted for agricultural and maple sugar activities. This district was one of the first to be setled in Somerset County.

TIES MARK END OF JUNE AUTO SALES CONTEST

Several Score to Take Part In Five-Day Outing at French River, Canada

Several score sales and service representatives of Pittsburgh automobile dealers, winners in the annual June competitive sales contest of the Pittsburgh Automobile Dealers' Association, will leave this city next Saturday night for a five-day outing at French River, Canada.

The end of the month of competition Saturday night found many ties for the prize trip awards, and as a result many of the dealers will find it necessary to extend the contest several days. Other units in the contest are waiting the results of sales tabulations to announce the winners.

THREE COMPETITIONS

With the return of Col. F. L. Dennis, general chairman, and W. N. Owings, secretary of the association, from French River, the announcement was made that all preparations had been completed for the outing. Among these preparations were schedules for golf, swimming, boating, baseball and photographing contests at the Canadian camp.

Four members of the staff of the Oldsmobile Pittsburgh Company will make the trip to French River, C. L. Day, of that company, stated Saturday. Who these men will be is being decided by three contests, Oldsmobile's program in the June sales drive. In the first contest, which began in January, L. A. Flynn has taken the lead by a small margin. He is being closely pressed by E. S. Powell and E. J. Round, who are tied for second place. These two men are in turn being threatened by Arthur Edwards and H. M. Miller. In the new car department E. A. Brown is having a strenuous fight to hold first place over L. A. Bleichner and E. S. Powell. J. A. Matta has apparently won first place in the used car department contest, although H. R. Wicks, J. J. Barr or E. H. Bornyn may finally win the honor, all three closely following the leader.

INTERESTING FIGHT

W. F. Terry and H. J. Peters are leading an interesting fight for first place in the contest being conducted by H. F. Gleason Motors, Inc., a report from that company states. Other honor men are Frank Connor, R. R. Fickling, C. C. Colyer and Leo Huber.

C. R. Meneir and Norman Barlow are tied for the lead of Gumbel Chevrolet Company of Clairton. William Curry is in second position.

T. C. Llewellyn is first; H. R. Fisher, second, and T. A. Flanigan, third, at the Cochran Chevrolet Company.

Earl Dickinson is leading, followed by W. A. Dooley and H. T. DeLoche in the new car unit of the R. L. M. Motors Corporation.

TRANSPORTATION PLUS DISTINCTION

FOR SUMMER A group of Pittsburgh society girls on a tour of Pittsburgh in a search of new holiday picnic locations. They are Chrysler enthusiasts and say they find in this "75" sport phaeton the motor car distinction and comfort so desired by the feminine world.

NIGHT DRIVING IN VIKING SAFER

Blinding light reflected from the windshield into the eyes of a driver has long been recognized as a source of danger in night driving. This condition has now been practically eliminated in the Fisher-built bodies used on the new Viking eight, recently introduced as a companion car to the Oldsmobile six.

The solution was relatively simple —as are most real improvements—yet it was not discovered until experts had worked many months on the problem. The elimination of glare has been accomplished by slightly tipping the windshield so that rays of light coming through the rear window and striking the windshield glass are deflected so that they do not reflect into the driver's eyes.

The first step in the solution of this problem was made in a series of tests at the General Motors proving ground. Night after night automobiles were placed in the center of a marked circle. A research worker carrying a lighted lamp slowly circled the car while another worker seated at the steering wheel noted the reflections. In this manner the angles of reflection were noted and steps taken to eliminate those which threw light into the eyes of the driver.

Hudson Daily Output 1,900 Cars Despite Big Range in Colors

The Hudson Motor Car Company is building cars at the rate of 1,900 daily, despite the fact that the company is offering 276 color combinations in the Hudson and Essex lines. Options and cars are put through only on the dealers' specific orders and because the company has no provision for warehousing finished cars. Courtney Johnson, general sales manager, said the entire 1,900 production each day must roll on to dealers under orders.

Referring to the production records which the company has been establishing each month since January and the fact that dealer stocks on May 1 were lower than a year ago and less than one month's supply, Johnson said that this enviable position was carefully planned.

"We decided that 1929 would be the crucial year in this industry," Johnson said, "so we organized accordingly. We designed cars that would combine outstanding performance, riding luxury and beauty to sell at very low prices. We achieved individuality by giving such a wide option of color combinations that the curse of 'mass production' would be eliminated. The response of the public tells the story."

HOLIDAY SHOW OF PLYMOUTHS

Observing the first birthday of the Plymouth motor car, which coincides with the birthday of the nation, Plymouth dealers threw open their showrooms Saturday night on some of the most unusual and attractive displays of automobiles seen for some time. These displays are being conducted by dealers throughout the country from June 29 to July 13 inclusive.

The improved Plymouth cars, in a variety of new color combinations, feature the displays. "Those who have visited the showrooms and inspected and driven one or more of the models, have been particularly impressed with the roominess and the comfort of the full size bodies that this car possesses. Women who drove the cars were enthusiastic concerning the Plymouth's ease of operation and handling," states Hudson Samson, of Samson Motor Company, distributor.

Although this is only the first birthday of the Plymouth, production at the factory at Detroit has already reached enormous proportions, according to company officials.

FACTORY CARS HOLD INTEREST

That public interest continues to center on the performance of regular factory production automobiles rather than special built racing cars was demonstrated in Argentina recently during the "Gran Premio Standard 1929," says G. O. Jay, Jr., of the Studebaker Sales Company, of Pittsburgh.

The 540-mile race, which is one of that country's leading speed events and confined to strictly stock cars, attracted the largest attendance in its history.

Leaving Florencio Varela at one-minute intervals in the morning, the 32 entrants started for Mar del Plata on the first stage of the race. On the following day the return trip was made, with only 18 cars completing the run. On arrival in Florencio Varela, the cars were turned over to the Automovil Club Argentino and thoroughly checked by a staff of 12 competent mechanics to determine if they were strictly stock models. As a result of this inspection, three cars were disqualified.

Major honors in the speed contest were won by a Studebaker President Eight roadster, driven by Miguel Viggiano. Viggiano was declared "absolute" winner when he completed both stages of the race 40 minutes ahead of the field. The Studebaker, which completed the 540-mile run in 9 hours, 35 minutes and 49 2-5 seconds, also finished 1 hour and 40 minutes ahead of the nearest competitor in its class to win class honors.

New Fargo Truck Wins Popularity

The Freighter, the new one-ton truck, announced last month by the Fargo Motor Corporation, has met wide-spread and immediate approval from the truck-buying public throughout the country, according the Kilroy Motors, Inc., distributors here.

Although the Freighter has been on display less than a month, a steady demand has necessitated increased production schedules. The new truck is powered by a 55 h. p. Chrysler-built, six-cylinder engine and has a 133-inch wheelbase.

New Act Cuts Costs Of Borough Streets

HARRISBURG, June 29.—A majority of the 924 Pennsylvania boroughs, with an aggregate population of 2,387,444, will benefit through the operation of the Griffith act, No. 582, which removed the 10 per cent cost of maintenance of borough streets connecting with the state highway system and placed an additional maintenance cost of $115,000 per biennium on the Department of Highways, Secretary James Lyall Stuart announced today.

WALKS FOR SALE

OVER TRAFFIC— "High" Arnold, stilt walker, who came here last week to help announce the auction sale of automobiles being conducted in Motor Square Garden, which will continue Monday and Tuesday, enjoys life by walking over traffic. He is shown here permitting a motorcycle policeman to speed between his nether extremities.

W.-O. SALES DUE TO HIT RECORD

TOLEDO, O., June 29.—On the basis of results to date, indications for the Willys-Overland Company point to 1929 as one of the most profitable years in its history.

Record-breaking sales of Willys-Knight and Whippet cars established a new high record for the first five months of 1929. With June shipments estimated at 30,000 Willys-Knights and Whippets, total shipments for the first six months will be approximately 200,000 cars.

Outlook for the last half of the year is said to be highly favorable, this prediction being based partly on the coming introduction of the new Willys-Knight Great Six, rounding out the Willys-Knight line which is expected to contribute as much as 50 per cent earnings for the two final quarters.

BOAT TRIP AID GIVEN AUTOISTS

In order to extend further the travel services offered by the Automobile Club of Pittsburgh, Secretary Paul C. Wolff announced that arrangements had been completed to obtain for members reservations on steamers plying the inland waterways and along the coast, through the American Automobile Association, with which the Automobile Club is affiliated.

"There are many motorists," Mr. Wolff said, "who like to break their journey by a day or overnight trip by steamer, with car safely stowed aboard. This can be accomplished with a minimum of effort now through this new service. Reservations on steamers may be obtained at the same time prospective tourists are getting their routings from the touring information bureau."

BIG THRONGS ATTEND AUTO AUCTION SALE

Cars Representing Quarter Million Sold in Motor Square — Will Continue.

Automobiles representing a value of a quarter million dollars were turned over to new owners Saturday in Motor Square Garden at the first auction sale ever conducted by a group of Pittsburgh automobile dealers. The sale, which is being staged under the auspices of the Studebaker Sales Company, H. F. Gleason Motors, Inc., Nash Pittsburgh Motors and the Lowe Motor Company, will be continued Monday and Tuesday.

A large crowd of Pittsburghers, attaining almost automobile show proportions, attended the opening sale, which is believed to be the largest ever sponsored by a group of automobile dealers in Pennsylvania, in the big East Liberty auditorium throughout Saturday. Special arrangements which were made to care for a large crowd Saturday, will be extended throughout the next two days of the sale, the participating automobile dealers announced. Preparations also have been made to extend the seating arrangements of the big auditorium.

500 LISTED

More than 500 traded cars have been listed for the auction sale. A large portion of these cars were placed on display in the Garden during the latter of last week. Others of these cars will be placed in the Garden Monday and Tuesday.

The cars in the sale include every make and model, and all have been especially prepared for the event. They include every type of design and finish, many of them featuring the desired summer colors. Most of these cars include the latest improvements and refinements perfected by the automotive engineering laboratories. All of them carry guarantees of the participating organizations.

WOMEN ATTEND

A large portion of the throng attending the opening sale at 2:30 p. m. Saturday was composed of members of the feminine world of the city. Many of them also were present at the second sale at 7:30 p. m., carrying out the contention of the automobile industry that motor car wants are dictated to a large extent by women. These sale periods also will be in effect Monday and Tuesday.

Among the features arranged to announce the display and sale to Pittsburghers were parades and exhibitions of a stilt walker.

A. A. A. TO TAKE UP 'GAS' TAXES AT CONVENTION

Organized Motordom to Discuss Action on Higher Highway Appropriations.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—At its twenty-seventh annual convention to be held in Buffalo, N. Y., Monday and Tuesday, the American Automobile Association will give a thorough airing to some of the major problems now confronting motordom in the United States.

In addition to the consideration of these major policies, the convention will elect national officers for the A. A. A. for the coming year. Officers to be elected are: the president, several vice presidents, an executive committee, a secretary, a treasurer and 41 directors, including the directorate of the motor bus division of the association.

TO VISIT NIAGARA

The sessions of the convention will be held at the Lafayette Hotel, with the Automobile Club off Buffalo acting as host to the gathering and in full charge of its entertainment features, which include a visit to Niagara and probably a brief visit to nearby Canada. Every indication now points to a heavy registration from more than 1,000 A. A. A. motor clubs in the United States and Canada.

While the convention's program is not yet completed, Thomas P. Henry of Detroit, who has presided over the destinies of the A. A. A. for the last six years and who will swing the gavel at the Buffalo meeting, indicated some of the problems which in his opinion the convention will take up and on which a clear-cut declaration of policy probably will be forthcoming.

"Motordom has made great progress in the last decade," said President Henry. "This is particularly true as regards the extension of motoring services. But some major problems are still with us and there must be no let-down in the attempt to solve them, because the future of motor vehicle transportation and of motoring progress hinges on their solution.

ROADS NEEDED

"Take the question of highways. It has become quite apparent that highway building is not keeping pace with the nation's transportation needs. Federal aid should be increased as quickly as possible from the present annual allotment of $85,000,000 a year to $125,000,000 a year; we must continue to oppose in the most vigorous way every move to launch toll highways and, at the same time, throw stringent safeguards around toll bridge franchises so that the freedom of the highways may not be jeopardized; the road-building organizations in the various states must be taken out of politics and placed on a business basis; the government must assume financial responsibility for road building through large stretches of unappropriated public lands in the West.

"Take the matter of motor vehicle taxation. The pyramiding of the gasoline tax is assuming alarming proportions; the tax is increasing out of all ratio to the increase of car registration and out of ratio to the average per capita tax in the states; organized motordom must call for a showdown."

way have been abandoned as a result of a thorough test by city officials of the through stop method of regulating traffic on the main thoroughfare. A number of other cities have eliminated electric signals at all but the busiest intersections, he pointed out, and numerous others are considering similar action.

"When one stops to consider that the boulevard plan not only speeds up traffic with a minimum of danger and confusion, but is far less costly to the municipality than the operation of traffic lights the way seems clear for municipal officials to eliminate the lights.

"Electric control signals are effective at intersections where cross traffic is heavy," Mr. Gable stated, "and should not be dispensed with there."

Three Streams Murmur Welcome at Confluence

largely settled by hardy Irish and German emigrants, whose descendants, to a large extent, still dominate the valleys east of the Laurel Hill Ridge.

RICH IN RESOURCES

When the first settlers in Somerset county arrived there about 1786 and built their homes in the vicinity of Confluence, they found the country rich in resources, soil and game. It then was one of the choicest of the Indian hunting grounds in Western Pennsylvania and because of that fact these early settlers were forced to undergo the severest trials of pioneer life.

The first band of settlers numbered about a dozen men and their families. They entered the Somerset county territory by a well defined trail, which became known as the Turkey-Foot road. It followed down White's creek to the Casselman river, which it crossed near Harnedsville. It crossed the Hog Back near Ursina and followed onward across Laurel Hill creek, passing the site of one of the first stockades.

A part of this early trail is traveled over in this week's Motorlogue. The route, as chartered by the road scouting party in a sedan model of the new Marquette Six, provided by the Pittsburgh Branch of the Buick Motor Company, leaves the city by way of the Liberty bridge, the Liberty tubes, West Liberty and Pioneer avenues to Dormont and Mt. Lebanon. In Mt. Lebanon, the McMurray road, sometimes known as the Washington road, is followed straight ahead through the towns of Clinton and McMurray to Morganza. There the road joins with the William Flinn Highway, route 19. Following the latter highway to the left the town of Canonsburg is entered. In Canonsberg the motorist will follow the detour signs through Houston and Meadowland, for the trip into Washington.

PLEASINGLY ROLLING

In Washington highway legends 19 are followed to the National Pike, route 40, which is followed to the left. Washington is soon left behind and the tourist will find himself on a pleasingly rolling and curving highway. This roadway, leading through Beallsville and Brownsville to Uniontown, follows along the top of a ridge for miles. There is one detour on this stretch of road and it is between Brownsville and Uniontown. It is over paved roads and adds seven miles to the journey.

Route 40 is followed on through Uniontown, one of the state's pioneer towns. Its history dates from 1767 and it was visited by Lafayette in 1825. On the eastern end of that town the road makes a winding climb up the side of Laurel Hill to the Summit, a drive that is famed from coast to coast.

Few pieces of highway in the country are as rich in history as the National Pike east of Laurel Hill. The grave of Gen. Braddock is first passed to the left, the site of Fort Necessity follows on the right and it in turn is followed by Jockey Valley, also known as Halls Run Valley. In the early stagecoach days it was an entertaining topic to gossip because there always were to be found one or more horse-jockeys ready to trade or run races.

GREAT CROSSING

Somerfield, mentioned in history books at Great Crossing, where Washington crossed the Youghiogheny, and Addison, where is preserved one of the famous old National Pike toll houses, mark the turning point of the tour from the National Pike. This road is left behind a short distance east of Addison and highway 53 becomes the avenue of travel.

Four towns, Listonburg, Beachly, Dumas and Harnedsville, jewels in a most attractive countryside, are the gateway to Confluence, a pleasing little town, railroad junction and junction of three rivers. Turning left at the town park and left at the railroad station will place the motorist on a road from which he can obtain excellent views of the three streams.

DESTROYED BY FIRE

Leaving Confluence the road follows to the right and then to the left about the park, at the original entrance to the town, still following Highway 53. Laurel Hill creek is crossed at the outer edge of the town. At Ursina the end of the hard highway surface is reached and for a little more than a half dozen miles the road is dirt, oiled and in good condition. Several wonderful views of the Laurel Creek valley are had from this road.

New Lexington and New Centerville are the gateway to Semerset, which has the distinction of being the highest county seat in the state. It has been the county seat of Somerset County since 1795, and at one time was known as Bruner's Town. Little is known of its early history as the result of it having been totally wiped out by fire on two occasions in the nineteenth century.

TURNS WESTWARD

From Somerset highway 219 is followed northward to Jennerstown, where a left turn is made onto the Lincoln highway, route 30. This part of the journey follows through the towns of Laughlintown, site of a museum of Revolutionary relics, and Ligonier, one of the early pioneer forts and a vacation and picnic resort.

A right turn is made from the Lincoln highway at the first iron bridge over the Loyalhanna Creek, west of Ligonier. A left turn at the far end of the bridge will carry the tourist over excellent road into the town of Latrobe. There a right turn is made at the railroad intersection, followed by a left turn under a railroad trestle just beyond the town. This will bring the motorist to highway 981, the avenue to New Alexandria and the William Penn highway, route 22, which is followed westward through Delmont and Export to Wilkinsburg and the city, completing a trip of about 200 miles.

DEPENDABLE PERFORMANCE

Month after Month
Mile after Mile

FOREMOST among Oldsmobile's thousands of friends are its owners. They know this car because they drive it and depend upon it, month after month and mile after mile—over all kinds of roads, in all kinds of weather.

Go to them and ask them what they think of Oldsmobile. They express sincere admiration for its style—enthusiasm for its riding qualities—pride in its performance. And above all, they praise its sterling dependability.

They tell you that, winter or summer, rain or shine, Oldsmobile's big 62-horse power high-compression engine delivers the same fine, dependable performance—the same swift acceleration, dazzling speed, and mighty power—hour after hour and day after day.

They tell you, further, that starting is easy and sure with Oldsmobile's progressive contact starting motor—that steering is accurate and effortless—that braking is smooth, quiet, and reliable with Oldsmobile's quick-acting four-wheel brakes. Many factors contribute to this faithfulness in daily use—unified, well-balanced design—fine car engineering—sturdy construction—and high quality of materials and craftsmanship.

THE VIKING — the new 90-degree V-type Eight at medium price—is built in the Olds factories, by Oldsmobile craftsmen, and sold through Oldsmobile dealers. At $1595 for all models, f. o. b. factory, Lansing, Michigan, it is as outstanding in value in its field as the popular Oldsmobile Six, the fine car of low price.

THEY SAY "I decided to buy an Oldsmobile because of its riding and steering qualities, full equipment, value offered for dollars expended—and finally, because it is sold and serviced by a reliable dealer."
—Elmira, New York.

"Three reasons prompted me to purchase my new Oldsmobile: First, the courtesy of your local dealers and the type of service they provide; Second, the performance of your older models; Third, the experience of a friend who owns a 1928 Oldsmobile."
—Pontiac, Michigan

And Oldsmobile gives you much in addition to brilliant, dependable performance. Oldsmobile provides restful riding ease and smartest style as well.

Oldsmobile's bodies by Fisher combine smart, graceful beauty with the advantages of sturdy wood-and-steel construction. Interiors are spacious and restful—with plenty of head room and leg room—wide, deep-cushioned seats—luxurious upholsteries and tasteful appointments. Four Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers and specially designed springs make riding supremely comfortable.

Oldsmobile combines superb performance and voguish style with stamina, long life, and thorough dependability. That's why Oldsmobile owners are so enthusiastic about their cars. That's why Oldsmobile continues to win greater and greater public favor in this community and throughout America. That's why you can't match Oldsmobile's value at its new lower price.

CLEVELAND AIR RACES OFFER MANY PRIZES

Schedule Announced for All Events; Nine Derby Contests; 17 Other Tests

CLEVELAND, O., June 29.—A complete schedule of events of the Cleveland 1929 National Air Races, embracing nine major air derbies, 23 closed course events and four special feature contests, and involving total cash prizes of approximately $100,000, has been announced by Floyd J. Logan, air race chairman.

Concurrently with the races, an aeronautical exposition, covering 200,000 square feet of floor space in Cleveland's Public Auditorium, will be held from August 24 to September 2.

The four exclusive features embrace a contest for breaking the world's solo endurance record for which $3,000 in prizes are offered; an air line distance non-refuel, non-stop contest to establish a new world's record for long distance flight; a contest for a new world's airplane endurance flight record by refueling and a Cleveland to Buffalo efficiency race. In both the refuel and non-refuel contest the winner will receive a prize of $5,000. Both events are open to any type of plane with no restrictions on motive power.

EVENTS AND PRIZES

Event No. 1 of the closed course series is a 50-mile ladies' race for which a total of $750 in prizes is offered.

Event No. 2 is a contest for civilians only and is open to light or sport class planes. Prizes total $350.

Event No. 3 is an experimental ship free-for-all race for civilians. The planes in this race must embody in their designs substantial departures from the conventional models. Prizes total $800.

Event No. 4 is a 100-mile race for attack type planes open to pilots of the United States Marine Squadron. Handsome trophies will be awarded the first four place winners.

Event No. 5 consits of a free for all for civilians. Entrants will fly 10 laps of a five-mile course and the winners will receive prizes of $775.

Event No. 6 affords a 120-mile race for pilots of the United States Army Attack groups, flying attack type planes. A valuable trophy will go to the winner.

Event No. 7 will feature pursuit type planes flown by United States Army pilots. The winner will receive the John C. Mitchell trophy.

Event No. 8, for civilians only, is open to all types of OX5 motored ship of single-ignition and two or more seats. Prizes total $1,250.

Event No. 9 is a 50-mile civilians' race, open to planes ranging from 70 to 110 horsepower. Prizes total $1,250.

Event No. 10 is the Cleveland to Buffalo efficiency race for which $2,000 in prizes have been appropriated.

Event No. 11 is a contest for a new world's solo endurance record.

RELAY FOR CIVILIANS

Event No. 12 offers a 60-mile relay race for civilian fliers with OX5 motored ships. The race is open to a maximum of four teams of five ships each and prizes total $1,500.

Event No. 13 affords a 50-mile free-for-all race for civilians. The winners will receive $1,000 in prizes.

Event No. 14 is a race for the Liberty Engine Builders' Trophy, open to military observation type, two place airplanes. Pilots in this contest will race a distance of 120 miles and must maintain average speed of better than 90 miles per hour.

Event No. 15 is an efficiency contest for civilians, flying sport class ships. Winners will be awarded a total of $950 in prizes.

Event No. 15 is a national parachute jumping contest. Prizes total $1,000.

Event No. 17 is a 75-mile race for civilians, open to planes of the open cockpit, or mail type. Prizes total $1,500.

Event No. 18 offers a 100-mile efficiency contest for transport planes. Each plane must carry a minimum payload of 1,000 pounds. The Detroit News Air Transport Trophy and $2,500 in prizes have been put up.

Event No. 19 has total cash prizes of $2,000 for the winners of a 75-mile race, open to civilians, flying any type of cabin plane.

Event No. 20 calls for a 100-mile race, open to multi-motored ships, each carying a payload of 1,000 pounds. A trophy and $1,000 in prizes are offered.

Event No. 21, known as the Navy Pursuit Plane Race, is limited to navy service pilots. The first four place winners will receive individual trophies.

Event No. 22 is an Australian Pursuit Race. A formula for this event will be worked out so that all the contesting planes should finish at the same time. Prizes total $2,000.

Event No. 23, a race for National Guard planes, offers total prizes of $1,000.

A special event is the Dead Stick landing contest in which the winner will be the pilot landing closest to a designated mark on the airport with the motor of his plane shut off.

Event No. 24 is a non-stop, non-refuel contest for a new world's long distance flight record.

Event No. 25 is a contest for a new world's endurance record by refueling.

Event No. 26, a free for all speed contest, is open to all types of planes with no limitations on motors. The race will cover 50 miles for total prizes of $1,500.

Attorney Takes Up Flying in A Business Way

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 29.

CHARLES L. MORGAN, attorney for oil and gas companies whose offices are in Fort Worth, Tex., is America's first flying attorney.

He has just received delivery of a new Ryan Brougham six-place cabin plane, which he will use to reach outlying oil territory where legal services are required in a hurry.

When new oil wells are brought in, a difference of a few short hours in arriving in the territory may means a difference of thousands of dollars in the price paid for adjoining property.

NEW MANAGER AT MAYER PORT

Mayer field has a new manager—new thrills for vsitors and new plans for the future.

C. P. Mayer, president of the Mayer Aircraft Corporation, made the announcement of his new field manager and plans last week. "Lucky" Jack Merrill, of St. Louis, is the new manager. He arrived here several days ago and already has assumed active charge of the airport.

Coming here from the Park School of Aviation, with which he has been associated for almost two years, Merrill brings with him a reputation and a full "bag of tricks."

Besides being a pilot, Mayer's new manager is a stunt flier, parachute jumper and wing walker.

Exhibitions in the air are scheduled for Saturdays and Sundays.

While his new manager busies himself with air-circus plans to attract crowds to the field, Mayer himself is concentrating his attention on plans for enlargement of flying facilities, ground school activities and transport service.

Increased hangar space with the probable improvement of a large tract adjoining the present field are in prospect for the Bridgeville aircraft concern.

Improvement of the adjoining acreage as a landing field would place the Bridgeville airport on a par with some of the finest in the country, it is pointed out. Two concrete runways each, more than a half mile long, could be laid out on the field, which would become the center of activity, the present landing field being used as an auxiliary field for student work and repair center.

Possibility of daily passenger service from Bridgeville to New York, Washington and Columbus is being considered by Mayer and his associates, it is understood.

Dragging Brakes Revealed by Test

To test for dragging brakes, speed up the car to 30 miles an hour on a smooth, level road, then shift to neutral and let the car coast. When the speedometer shows 25 miles an hour, begin timing the deceleration. If the car is not rolling five miles an hour or faster at the end of 60 seconds, have the brakes inspected. To offset the effect of the wind, the driver should make the test in both directions over the same level stretch and note the average time taken to decelerate from 25 miles an hour to five miles an hour. The average should be 60 seconds or more. If the car slows down too rapidly and the brakes are found O.K., then there is too much frictional resistance somewhere, and the quicker this is corrected the better. Dragging brakes will affect the acceleration and hill-climbing abilities of an automobile. They impose just so much extra load ability and increase its gasoline consumption.

NEW NON-STOP MARK CREATED BY ROOSEVELT

Marmon-Built Car Travels 400 Hours—Illustration of Stamina of Modern Auto.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 29.—Breaking every existing record for non-stop automotive endurance, a Roosevelt straight-eight sedan has traveled over 400 continuous hours on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

The record-breaking Roosevelt is a stock sedan, equipped with two extra wire wheels, tires, tubes and covers, bumpers front and rear, shock absorbers and truck rack. It was selected at random from the assembly line in the Marmon-Roosevelt factory by representatives of the American Automobile Association under whose official observation the test is being conducted. Refueling operations are being conducted from a "mother" car which likewise carries oil and water and affords a means of changing drivers while the Roosevelt continues in motion under its own power.

EXCEED KELLY'S TIME

The last automotive nonstop endurance record to fall before the Roosevelt was that established late in May by the airplane Fort Worth, piloted by R. L. Robbins and James Kelly, which remained in the air 172 hours, 32 minutes and 1 second. Since that mark was beaten, the car has kept in constant operation, day and night, and at the end of the sixteenth day 400 hours had elapsed since the start.

Just as does the annual 500-mile race in Indianapolis each Memorial Day begin promptly at 10 a. m., so did the endurance test start precisely at that hour on June 12. Through the first solid week no information of its progress was passed to the outside world, headquarters having been established and maintained at the speedway itself by the Marmon company. Drivers, mechanics, refuelers and pit men stayed on the job constantly and slept in improvised quarters in the infield of the track.

AVIATOR AT WHEEL

The first record to be exceeded was the previous non-stop automobile mark of 21 hours, 13 minutes. Next was the non-stop engine record of 50 hours 21 minutes and 1 second. From that point on it was necessary to turn to the field of aviation from which to seek new marks to conquer.

At 111 hours and 30 minutes, the record of the Graf Zeppelin, was passed. Six hours later the mark of the French dirigible Dixmude fell; next to be exceeded was the tri-motored Army plane Question Mark's record of 150 hours, 40 minutes and 15 seconds.

Then, on the afternoon of June 19, the greatest record of all was broken for, at 3:32:01 o'clock, the car had run continuously for 73 hours 32 minutes and 1 second, exceeding by the required one hour the sustained flight mark of the airplane Fort Worth. Kelly and Robbins, themselves, were on hand when their record was shattered, and Kelly was at the wheel of the car when the mark fell.

A. A. A. IN CHARGE

The two aviators were in Indianapolis as guests of the Marmon company for several days, during which they took delivery of two Roosevelt cars, inspected the Marmon-Roosevelt factory and took active interest and participation in the test under way at the speedway.

That the distinction of breaking every existing record for automotive non-stop endurance should go to a car with a straight-eight motor is regarded as unusually significant by engineers. In addition the value of the test, according to Marmon officials, is that it shows the modern automobile to be vastly superior to all other types of automotive vehicles in endurance, reliability and Stamina. Constant running under the terrific strain imposed by the Speedway brick track, famous as a proving ground for many makes of cars, is sufficient to reveal the weakness of any part.

American Automobile Association officials have been on the spot since the start of the test, under the direction of Charles Merz, representative of the A. A. A. contest board for the Indianapolis district. Odis Porter, official timer of the 500-mile races each year, is acting in a similar capacity during the test and occupies his familiar position in the judges' stand at the track.

REFUELING ON THE RUN

BREAK RECORDS—The above photograph shows the "mother" car refueling one of the Roosevelt sedans on the Indianapolis Speedway during the endurance run which has broken all previous marks for non-stop automotive performance. This car is one of two which at last reports had been in continuous operation for more than 400 hours. The run was begun on June 12.

Noise Clue to State Of Car's Condition

When selecting a used car, as millions are doing these days with the used car market more attractive than ever, the motorist who refuses to employ the noise symptoms to the utmost in ascertaining the car's condition is invariably the loser. It is noise that is the most effective clue to wear in parts that are concealed, and if the prospective buyer locates the noises and identifies them, he should know the state of the car's vital organs.

Constant Vibration Cause of Fatigue

That constant jolting, jarring and vibration to which the car is subject on longer drives is prone to start a number of irritating squeaks, as many a motorist knows. They are fatiguing if one is forced to listen to them hour after hour. Windshield anchors, the spark and gasoline controls and similar features in the driving compartment should be suspected first and a little oil applied.

'NATION NEEDS WIDER ROADS'

WASHINGTON, June 29.—"The manufacturing of good roads differs little in basic principles from any private manufacturing enterprice," declares Charles M. Upham, director of the American Road Builders' Association, who has just returned from speaking on this subject in Cleveland, Chicago and other western cities.

The needs of the nation for highway development, Upham finds, call for greater activity in the industry and unceasing educational effort to awaken the people to highway needs and highway possibilities.

Among the needs cited are: High-speed by-pass arteries around large population centers; grade separations at intersections; elimination of "bottle necks;" addition of more exit and entrance roads to cities; widening programs, to a minimum 40-inch width in the vicinity of large cities; financing and development of the rural highways and "form-to-market" roads; greater use of highway bonds for financing state and county road building programs.

60 Ready to Take Road Patrol Study

HARRISBURG, June 29.—A new class of 60 members of the State Highway Patrol begins training school today. When members of the class are finally sent to active service, after training, the patrol will have reached almost full strength. Capt. Wilson C. Price says the patrol will consider a limited number of applications for positions.

Ammonia and Water Cleanse Spark Plugs

A good method of cleaning spark plugs is to soak the core in a solution of 60 per cent ammonia and 40 per cent water. This will dissolve the carbon and assure a clean firing plug.

ROAD BUREAU BUYS GRAHAMS

Individual buyers of motor cars might study with profit the United States Bureau of Public Road's basic standards of construction and performance for automobiles purchased for use by its district engineers in the construction, supervision and inspection of highways.

The bureau, which has just bought 29 Graham-Paige sedans, model 612, for use throughout the United States, has had the advantage of long experience with various makes of automobiles under all conditions of use, and is in a position to know just what a motor car must be to stand up under heavy usage.

The government requirements were set forth as follows:

"The cars should be adaptable to continuous and long-distance travel, and should be of sturdy construction, with adequate and flexible power to negotiate heavy grades, sand, mud, etc., and capable of travel under extraordinary road or weather conditions. The automobiles must be capable of sustained high speed, and chassis and body must be constructed so as to withstand the most grueling tests that long day by day driving requires. Various units, such as ignition, carburetor, etc., must be of high quality so as to reduce to a minimum, repeated or even occasional breakdowns en route."

Light and Water Two Garage Needs

Many home builders do not give the garage the "car's room" enough consideration in their advance plans. The result is that when they do get around to giving it consideration the process is more costly than if the work had been done at the time the house was built. There are two things that the garage needs, whether it is built-in or outside the house itself. These are light and water. In connection with the latter, good draining should always be borne in mind.

Pittsburgh Stations Remodeling Studios

All Local Broadcasters in New Homes This Fall—WJAS May Move This Week, WCAE and KQV Plan Expansion—KDKA to Start Work on New Transmitter.

By DARRELL V. MARTIN,
Sun-Telegraph Radio Editor.

In another month the radio picture in Pittsburgh will be completely changed due to alterations and expansions planned by local broadcasters.

The four Pittsburgh stations, ever alert to serve their public, will be found in new studios, new power plants and new dress generally. It is very probable too that at least one station will be given an increase in power, not to mention the 200,000-watt transmitter which KDKA shortly will erect near Butler.

The rat-a-tat-tat of riveters' hammers soon will have complete the new WJAS towers on the Steubenville Pike, where the arrangement of the control room and other broadcasting facilities is attracting attention of motorists. The new studios in the Law and Finance Building may be completed this week.

WCAE will make another change, it is rumored. A larger studio will be constructed and possibly an application will be made for higher power. The station now uses 500 watts.

KQV contemplates moving to a new building and overhauling the station equipment. This may occur any time.

So we see that when fall comes Pittsburgh stations will be prepared to give fans the very best in radio and thus maintain Pittsburgh's position of pre-eminence in the radio world.

The phone buzzed one morning last week. It was an invitation from P. A. Boyd, KDKA publicity engineer, to hustle down to the William Penn studio to hear Dutch music being broadcast from PHI at Hausen, Holland.

For several minutes the music was that of a Dutch chorus and the announcements were in a language we couldn't understand.

Suddenly we heard "Among My Souvenirs" with an unmistakably American orchestra and vocal chorus. KDKA had put in a request for some English numbers. The Dutch dug out some phonograph records and started to work. Their selections included "Nola" and "Dance of the Paper Dolls." It was very novel.

We overheard the clinking of something like steins and a remark "Set 'em up" in broken English. It was just a Hollander injecting a little humor for the benefit of American listeners.

HYMN TIME

HELEN BELL RUSH, soprano, will be heard in the Sacred Song concert Tuesday night at 7:15 o'clock from KDKA.

Girl Friend Put Across by 'Air'

Amateur Tutors His Sweetheart When She Is Called Away from College; Succeeds With an "A."

DALLAS, June 29.—(AP.)—Conducting a correspondence course by wireless is an achievement of William Penn, 17, who boasts 36 countries on his list of radio connections.

So effective was Penn's radio coaching that his pupil, 19-year-old Marjorie Young, received an "A" grade in her course after examination at Southern Methodist University.

When Marjorie went to New York last fall, her high school classmate decided she should be kept in touch with school work. Both had intended to enter Southern Methodist together. Young Penn renewed an old acquaintanceship with W2AVP on Long Island, and began sending history and English assignments there. The Long Island operator telephoned his messages to Marjorie.

Sometimes William could not reach Long Island directly with his 50-watt crystal control set, so he sent his messages to NJ2AP at Port Antonio, Jamaica, and NJ2AP relayed them to New York.

Now William and Marjorie are attending summer school at S. M. U. After classes they talk in English, Spanish and French to operators in other lands. Marjorie is learning the Morse code so she, too, may become a licensed operator.

DUO TONIGHT

LOUISE MacPHERSON and Claire Ross, famous piano duo, will play three selection from Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker Suite" during the Baldwin concert from KDKA at 9:45 o'clock tonight.

Broadcast Thrills Of Parachute Drop

Experiments in broadcasting from a falling parachute are being conducted this week at Roosevelt Field by the National Broadcasting Company. If tests are successful, it is planned to relay the sensations of a 10,000-foot drop over a wide hookup of the NBC system on the evening of the Fourth of July.

A unique "parachute transmitter" has been developed by R. M. Morris, NBC development engineer, which involves the use of a "chin-strap microphone," keeping the instrument at a correct distance from the lips no matter how the speaker's head is turned.

The transmitter is a short-wave apparatus of 500 milliwatts power, and weighs but 24 pounds. The box containing all equipment is measured in inches instead of the usual feet.

Tests this week are being made by Charles Julienne De Bever, parachute instructor at Roosevelt Field, who claims to be the youngest instructor in that dangerous field in the world.

Light Flashes In New Edison

The new Edison radio models recently introduced by Thomas A. Edison, Incorporated, and exhibited for the first time at the Chicago radio trade show, have a new and different tuning device of an automatic nature. Light plays an important part in the operation of this new tuner—giving it the name "Light-O-Matic."

The Light-O-Matic tuner is an ingenious device, yet neither difficult nor complex in operation. The front of the tuning panel has two windows, through one of which appears the calibrated dial, and through the other a plain white surface. When a favorite station is initially tuned in, its call letters are registered in the white window. A small screw-head is then given a slight turn. This punches an impression on a disc against which a plunger is continually pressed by means of a spring. Thereafter, whenever the plunger meets that place on the disc where the impression has been made, a light flashes on, indicating that the particular station, the call letters of which are revealed, is tuned to maximum resonance. In this way 25 stations can be tuned in within as many seconds.

Philco Men On Boat Ride

C. R. Rogers, of the C. R. Rogers Company, 5434 Penn avenue, has returned from a Great Lakes trip staged by the Philco Company on the steamship Noronic. With him were A. S. Dayton and Harold Kay, of Pittsburgh, and H. F. Nickerson, manager of the Philco office in Cleveland.

Describing his adventurous trip, Mr. Rogers said:

"We had a continuous program of fun and business, including a 'night in an old-time Western mining town,' boxing bouts, vaudeville and motion pictures and speeches by Edward Davis, president of Philco, and 'admiral' of the cruise; J. M. Skinner, vice-president, and others.

"Upon boarding the steamship we were presented with Philco passports which we exchanged for a stateroom key, badge and yachting cap marked 'Philco' on the front.

"Models of the new Philco sets were displayed and it was stated that the company has spent more than a million dollars for new machinery and tools of the latest type to enable Philco to produce, in its own factory, practically all parts going into a Philco set.

"Marvin S. Knight, vice president of Erwin, Wasey & Co., Advertising, New York, whose company handles the Philco account, explained the policy behind the Philco newspaper advertising campaign.

"A film was screened showing Jessica Dragonette, Colin O'More, Harold Sanford going through a Philco Hour program in the NBC studios."

The trip was one of the most cleverly planned trade boosting stunts ever staged by a radio company, Mr. Rogers said in an enthusiastic discussion of his experiences.

Off to Study Announcers

Frances Doherr, only woman station director in the country, has departed for New York to study the technique of NBC announcers. While in Gotham she will visit the entire layout of the National Broadcasting Company from control room to studio. Suggestions will be taken for improvement of WCAE studio and control facilities, possibly resulting in a new arrangement at the Gimbel station.

Frances Doherr

Friends of the youthful station manager are legion in New York City. She has planned to visit Burt McMurtrie, who formerly managed WCAE; Chauncey Parsons, who sings over the network every week, and other Pittsburgh radio people who have located "up state."

American Airs For Independence Day

A medley of favorite American airs will be appropriately featured in the program of the Stromberg-Carlson Orchestra from KDKA on Wednesday. The merry melody of dance music as written in concert style by master composers appears in several other numbers—the "Valse Melody" of Lemare; a Strauss waltz, and "Danse Circassienne," by Delibes. An overture and a symphony selection are included.

Legal Counsel For Stations

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—The allurements of radio have drawn to its service the talents of a former cabinet member. William M. Jardine, secretary of agriculture in the Coolidge administration, has established a broadcasters' service bureau in Washington.

The bureau will represent station owners in engineering and legal matters before the Federal Radio Commission and other governmental agencies. Associated with Mr. Jardine are his son, W. N. Jardine, and Prof. C. M. Jansky, Jr., radio engineer.

Farm Series On Network

A daily nation-wide radio program designed to carry important economic and educational information to American farmers was announced yesterday by M. H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Company.

The United States Department of Agriculture and leading agricultural associations are to participate in the new series which is to be known as the National Farm and Home Period. The organizations include the Association of Land Grant Colleges, the National Grange, the American Farm Bureau Federation and the National 4-H Clubs of Farm Boys and Girls.

The new series of programs will give American farmers the broadcasting facilities of the National Broadcasting Company for the dissemination of important agricultural information and represents an endowment of time on the air to assist in carrying out the government policy of aiding agriculture following the recent creation of the Federal Farm Board.

The first National Farm and Home Period will be broadcast July 8. The program will originate from the NBC Washington and Chicago studios.

Majestic Receiver Given to Swetonic

Steve Swetonic, Pirate pitcher, likes his radio. One of the principal gifts at a testimonial dinner in the Elks Club on the North Side last week was a new Majestic receiving set, presented the Bucco hurler by his friends.

Assails Radio Church-Goers In Air Sermon

AMARILLO, Tex., June 29.

THE Rev. Robert Allingham uses the radio to tell his parishioners they abuse the privilege of listening to church programs rather than attending services.

Speaking from WDAG, Mr. Allingham quoted Dean Charles R. Brown, of Yale, as saying:

"The difference between listening to a radio sermon and going to church is the difference between calling a girl on the telephone and spending the evening with her."

2LO New Plant to Use 30,000 Watts

LONDON, June 29.—(AP.)—Under the European wavelength reallocation, 2LO is to be replaced by a new station with 30 kilowatts power and operating on 358 meters. Tests are to begin shortly after July 1. The new station is to be located 12 miles from Charring Cross.

Lawyers no Match For Loudspeakers

CINCINNATI, O., June 29.—(AP.)—Lawyers, even in the frenzies of jury pleas, are no match for a loud-speaker. Hence the Federal Court here may move to other quarters unless loud-speakers in radio shops nearby can be muffled.

Higher Pay For Artists

BERLIN, June 29.—Bronislaw Huberman, violinist, refuses to play at concerts which are broadcast because he regards the European radio as an instrument for the exploitation of the artist, and especially of the orchestras.

"My fight is not for myself, but for the orchestras for which I play as soloist," he explained. "Millions of people enjoy the orchestra music when a concert is broadcast, yet the artists earn no more than a primary school teacher in a middle-sized town. Their economic status could be vastly improved and a standard of living worthy of their high art attained at once if their managers would insist that the broadcasting companies pay on a basis commensurate with the vast audiences reached. So long as this is not the case, I refuse to play when there is a microphone in the room."

In most European countries the radio is a government institution, and the programs are under the control of the postal ministry, with listeners required to pay a receiving tax.

College Girls Build Sets

WELLESLEY, Mass., June 29.—(AP.)—Many a home has its masculine radio enthusiast who delights in shifting tubes around in his set, trying out new attachments or even reassembling the whole thing to "improve" it.

Such feminine "radiotricians" are far less in number. Yet at Wellesley College there is a whole class of them, including Helen Klein, of Cincinnati, and Louise Casselman, of Reading, Pa. In their equipment is a small transmitter, emitting damp waves for testing receivers.

Wellesley was the first women's college to open a course in electromagnetic waves and radio communication. College authorities said that the course was of value in supplying knowledge of what research really means.

Anchor Lite 'Open House'

"Open House" will be observed by the Anchor Lite Appliance Company, distributors of C. A. Earl Radio, all this week at their enlarged display rooms in the store at 330-332 Boulevard of the Allies.

A. I. Goldstein has invited all dealers to inspect the new C. A. Earl line in the evening from 7:30 until 11 o'clock, with the exception of Fourth of July. If not convenient to attend in the evening, dealers may look over the sets during business hours in the daytime.

Officials of the Charles Freshman Co. and the entire personnel of the Anchor Lite Appliance Company will greet dealers. Refreshments will be served.

60,000 Australians Visit Radio Festival

MELBOURNE, June 29.—(AP.)—More than 60,000 persons visited the radio festivel here, which was said to be the most successful held in Australia. The exhibit of apparatus was the largest of its kind staged in this city.

There were more than 65 booths and about 26 exhibitors. Most prominent displays were the American, Netherlands and Australian.

WLW Broadcasts "Will o' Mill"

Robert Louis Stevenson's "Will o' the Mill" will be read with a musical background at WLW, on Saturday, July 6, at 8:00 p. m.

Listening In at Washington

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.) Listeners will find WGY, Schenectady, at the same place on their radio dials until late fall at least.

The Supreme Court has adjourned until October without taking action on the petition of the Federal Radio Commission to review the judgment of the District of Columbia Court of appeals, which granted WGY full time on 790 kilocycles.

SOME lawyers are of the opinion that the case never will be reviewed by the nation's highest tribunal on the grounds that it does not have jurisdiction in radio cases decided by the District of Columbia court.

They base their contention on the fact that Congress gave this court legislative functions in radio cases and that the Supreme Court, being a constitutional court, will hold the WGY decision to be outside its province.

Should the Supreme Court decline to take any cognizance of the case, the decision in favor of the General Electric station probably would be final. This would result, it is predicted, in many stations which receive unfavorable assignments from the commission, carrying their complaints to the District of Columbia court in the hope of obtaining similarly favorable decisions.

IF, for some technical reason, the writ of certiorari asked by the commission cannot be issued, other remedies will be sought. One under consideration is the filing of a petition for mandamus or prohibition to require the justices of the court of appeals to confine their jurisdiction to its proper scope.

If the writ is allowed, the WGY case is one of several which will come before the Supreme Court in the fall. The cases of WCRW and WBBM, both of Chicago, decided by Judge James H. Wilkerson in favor of the commission, are expected to reach the Supreme Court before the beginning of the fall term.

Involving many of the legal and engineering questions underlying all regulation of communication by radio, they will be followed with considerable interest by Congress, broadcasters and the public.

DEEP and pensive in this picture, Howard E. Clark, manager of WJAS, is probably thinking of the new WJAS which will shortly be introduced to the radio public. The new transmitter on the Steubenville Pike and the new studios in the Law and Finance Buiding are to be completed this week.

I Wish to Know

The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Radio Department today inaugurates a new feature for the interest of its readers. Every week this department receives letters from fans who wish to know little bits about personalities, about the orchestras, about the stations, and it is to this end that the "I Wish to Know" column will serve a useful purpose. Address your questions to the Radio Editor, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa., and mark plainly in the lower left corner, "I Wish to Know."

Jess Best, Homestead:
How old is C. A. Wakeman, the announcer at WCAE? Is it true that WCAE gets its NBC program from Cleveland?

The handsome, debonair announcer at WCAE is only 24. Mr. Wakeman is built like a football player; in fact, he was one of the stars on Wilkinsburg's team a few years ago.

WCAE does not receive its NBC programs from Cleveland, but the American Telephone and Telegraph network linking WTAM and WCAE in the "Red" chain runs first to Cleveland, then to Pittsburgh. There is no noticeable difference in the time the program is received at the stations, nor is there any interference with quality, "boosters" along the line preserving the fidelity of sound.

Gertrude Moeller, Sharpsburg:
Who is the new announcer on afternoon programs at KDKA?

Glenn L. Riggs is the latest addition to KDKA.

B. R. Bloom, manager Superior Auto Accessories Company:
What has become of Oliver C. Riehl, who teamed with Jim Hughes and other stars on KDKA programs a few years back?

"Ollie" Riehl is in the program department of the National Broadcasting Company at Chicago.

Eleanor Berger, East Liberty:
When the Army plane bombarded Cincinnati what means was used to pick up the whirr of the propellers and the voices of the men in the plane?

A new trick in broadcasting. A short wave transmitter installed in the plane carried the swish of the propeller and the voices of the aviator and his passengers to a short wave receiving set atop the Crosley plant in Cincinnati. From here the signals were amplified and rebroadcast over the regular wavelength of WLW and the NBC network. For many months WLW had a microphone atop one of the aerial masts which caught the whirr of the Cincinnati-Chicago air mail plane as it whizzed on its way to the Windy City. The plane was nearly always on time and listeners in Cincinnati came to regard it as the "correct time" for 12:23 p. m.

A Fan, Dormont:
What is the ABC network? A few nights ago I picked up a symphonic concert over WRHM and caught only the station announcement and something about ABC network.

You heard a program of the American Broadcasting Company, originating at KJR, Seattle, Wash. The ABC network now has nine outlets, with WRHM at Minneapolis the farthest point east. WIBO at Chicago is a link in the chain. Not much is heard about the ABC network in Pittsburgh, but in Chicago there is a rumor that the network will attempt to invade the competitive field against NBC and CBS.

George Brenner, Mt. Lebanon:
I have had interference lately on the WCAE wave. What station operates near this frequency?

Two guesses and the first one doesn't count. WNBO at Washington, Pa., on 249.9 meters has been a source of much trouble to WCAE in certain localities ever since the reallocation of wavelengths last winter.

Marion McWhinney, Squirrel Hill:
Who sponsors Sacred Songs over KDKA every Tuesday night?

A very lovely woman whose name is kept secret by those associated with her in a noble work. Sacred Songs is KDKA's most popular local feature. It was the first religious program put on the air. "Hymn Time" at WLW and "Seth Parker" on the NBC network, as well as many other religious periods, have been started due to the tremendous response accorded Sacred Songs. Some day the name of the sponsor may appear in print, but not with her consent. She detests publicity and wishes to perform her work undisturbed and unnoticed.

JANE GIBSON, ballad singer at WJAS, taking her pet American bulldog, "Smoke," for a stroll on Dormont streets. "Smoke" is like many other dogs. He will sprawl himself out complacently before the loudspeaker while a symphony is on the air but when singing starts he wants to howl a chorus.

Between Wavelenghts

FIFTY MILLION tubes in 1928 have stirred up some excitement in this radio season, well under way toward peak.

Visions of more millions of tubes, some predicting up to 75,000,000 in 1929, have led to a certain concentration toward that end of the industry. Tube companies are far more numerous right now than ever before. Consolidations have taken place and new organizations have been set up to supply the expected heavy demand.

SOME manufacturers of radio receivers also have entered the tube field, because, they say, they had difficulty selling receivers last year during the fall tube famine. They hope to counteract any such difficulty this year by meeting, themselves, the tube requirements of the receivers they make.

WRITERS often are wont to forecast the future, and sometimes they are successful.

About the time Santa Claus' visit of 1928 was fading into the past the news cropped out that a practical AC screen grid tube had left the laboratories. Along with that story was a printed prediction that four-tube receivers within a certain future time would emerge from the factories of the set makers.

Sooner than was indicated, the prediction has become fact. There now is on the market a four-tube outfit, using only AC tubes. Three of them are screen grids, with the fourth a 245. It is not the first four-tuber by any means, for in seasons past receivers had even a less number, but it does seem to bear out the first-of-the-year contention that the screen grid would see considerable change in set design.

Most AC receivers have had a minimum of six tubes.

THEY may be months, maybe years, in advance, but Cousin Lora and C. A. Wakeman at WCAE are not to be disappointed when television comes in. They form a nice dancing team and often are discovered doing a few steps on Dick Powell's specially constructed board which is used before the WCAE mike on Monday nights.

'Radio Central' Links 32 Scattered Nations

Touch of Key Brings Contact with Any Point on Globe; Automatic Machines Receive Radio Code at 300 Words a Minute.

NEW YORK, Jun 29.—(AP.)—Commercial radion, an infant a few short years ago, has grown into a world-sized modern giant.

It has cast off all of its swaddling clothes and has attired itself in a manner befitting the dignity of a grown-up. No longer does it flounder, but it steps along without interruption and with messages following one another so fast that an automatic recording device is necessary to bring the language it speaks within the ken of man, its master.

Forgotten are the tangle of wires and the crudeness of its earlier stages. It has taken on somewhat of the appearance of its rival, the wire line, and the uninitiated visitor entering a central radio transmitting and receiving station would be hard put without help to determine whether it was a telegraph or a radio office into which he had strayed.

CODE GOES ANYWHERE

Just around the corner from Wall Street, financial heart of the United States, there is on the second floor of a building at 66 Broad street such a place. It is a radio center whose invisible feelers reach to all points of the world, either directly or indirectly. There R. C. A. Communiations, Inc., sends and receives messages by radio almost anywhere that the foot of man has trod.

In this place there is one item a little different from the ordinary telegraph office. Upon each operating desk is a standard bearing the legend, "Holland PCG," or the location and call letters of some other station.

For each station represented, and there are 40 of them tapping 32 countries, there is a sending and receiving operator. Everything is automatic. The sending operator writes on a device resembling a typewriter, which punches a tape feeding into a recorder that transposes the holes into the dots and dashes of the international code.

300 WORDS A MINUTE

The receiver copies his message from a wavy line on a tape, automatically marked by a spyhon ink recorder which copies dots and dashes just as they come out of the air. Each opeator has a pair of headphones for checking purposes.

There also are high-speed sending and receiving machines for handling messages as fast as 300 words a minute. Several operators are necessary to keep each one going at full speed.

The operating tables are connected to a massive control board of amplifiers, to which signals are fed by wire from the actual receiving and sending stations scattered along the Atlantic coast from New Jersey to Maine.

Both long and short waves are used by the stations, which are located at Rocky Point and Riverhead, L. I.; Tuckerton, N. J.; New Brunswick, N. J., and Belfast, Me. All are operated by remote control from the central office.

In addition to stations on the other side of the Atlantic, the Broad street office now is in direct communication, by a new transcontinental circuit, with San Francisco, through which it can reach the Far East with a single relay.

Rella Winn, lyric soprano and prima donna of many successful New York musical productions, will be featured. Miss Winn, who comes from Washington, D. C., received most of her education in the South. She studied piano with Felix Gaizella. At the age of 16 she began her vocal studies, and from then on she devoted herself to development of her voice to the exclusion of her other musical interests. She was the prima donna in "Kid Boots" and took Vivian Segal's place in the "Follies." She understudied Ethelyn Terry in "Rose Marie," taking her place when the latter dropped out. She was also prima donna in "Rio Rita."

"The Singing Girl."

"The Singing Girl," Victor Herbert's comic opera detailing the near-tragic effects of an old "blue law" in Austria, with book by Stange and lyrics by Smith, will be tonight's production. The plot tells the story of Greta, the singing girl, who stops at the town of Linz as she travels through Austria with her brother. Two gentlemen, the Minister of Police and a young courtier, fall desperately in love with her; and to avoid the obnoxious attentions of the official, Greta changes clothes with her brother. Then the duke's stringent law to the effect that any man and woman cought making love to one another must summarily be married begins to work havoc. Fortunately, however, when affairs become dangerously complicated, the duke repeals the "blue law," and the real lovers are united.

RADIO TRADE NEWS

Another reduction in the retail price of tubes, the second this season, is announced. Seven types are affected.

This year's R. M. A. convention and trade show had an official attendance of 31,580, or 6,989 more than a year ago.

Tubes must undergo 137 different checks and tests before leaving the factory, says Walter H. Kahl, engineer. The tests are both electrical and mechanical.

The New PHILCO all-electric Balanced-Unit Radio

This Neutrodyne-Plus LOWBOY . . . only $129.50 LESS TUBES

SEE IT! HEAR IT! ASK FOR DEMONSTRATION

THE first shipment of all-electric Philco Balanced-Unit Radios has arrived. You can see them now at any Philco dealer's. You can make arrangements now for a Demonstration.

Equipped with genuine electro-dynamic speaker

And balanced to take two of the marvelous new 245 power tubes with push-pull amplification, this Balanced-Unit set has created a new standard of radio entertainment.

You have never heard such tone

Free from the slightest blur or distortion, even the deepest bass notes come through round and clear. Many times a hair-breadth turn of the knob will completely shut out one station and bring another sweeping in. Amazing selectivity.

Far-off stations you never got before

When you want distance you can get it on this new Philco. We believe it will outreach any other set sold today at any price. Enthusiastic owners are constantly writing in to tell us how they are getting far-distant stations thousands of miles away.

Exquisitely designed cabinets

When you see the beautiful cabinets, you will wonder how such a marvelous radio can be priced so low. Bird's-eye maple panels, matched Oriental walnut, butt walnut, tapestry over speaker, costly overlays—each model worthy of a place in the finest home.

These Sets Can Be Had in Screen Grid Circuits

We want you to prove to yourself the marvelous performance of Philco Balanced-Unit Radio. Any one of these registered Philco dealers listed below will gladly give you a demonstration—no obligation on your part whatsoever.

Easy payments should you decide to buy.

Chicago Station Carries Fight to Higher Court

WENR Presents Petitions Signed by Radio Editors at Trade Show Requesting More Time on the Air. Several Other Stations Protest.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—(AP.)—With WCFL, the Chicago Federation of Labor station, and WEBC, Superior, Wis., carrying to court their fights for better assignments, several controversies between broadcasters and the federal radio commission are in litigation.

WCFL, which operates part time, seeks full time on a cleared channel, and WEBC demands unlimited time on 1280 kilocycles. Both applications were denied by the commission and appeal was taken to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

Awaiting decision in the same court is the appeal of WTRL, the Technical Radio Laboratory, Midland Park, N. J., one of several stations refused renewal of licenses by the commission last summer on the grounds they were not serving the public interest.

In this court also is the case of WNYC, operated by New York City, which is demanding full time. Another is the appeal of C. L. Carrel, owner of several portable stations hit by the general order banning portables in the broadcast band.

The cases of three prominent Illinois stations are pending in the district court. WENR and WLS, both of Chicago and dividing time on the same wave length, are seeking more time. WCBD, of Zion City, seeks the use of the same channel.

WRBX, a station projected by the Richmond Development Corporation, appeals from the commission's refusal to extend its construction permit. The commission based its decision on the grounds that the corporation, a power company, intended to use the station for propaganda purposes.

Demonstrate Control Unit

Demonstrating for the first time in Pittsburgh the use of a remote control unit for the operation of a receiving set, engineers from the Kolster-Brandes factory pulled a novel surprise on Kolster dealers at the banquet of the Superior Auto Accessories Company in the Fort Pitt Hotel.

L. T. Breck, general salesmanager for Kolster-Brandes, had finished [illegible] the dealers about an extensive [illegible]all advertising campaign of [illegible]mpany. About to sit down at [illegible]eakers' table, he hesitated a moment, then pressed a button concealed in a small box. Few of the dealers noticed Mr. Breck's movement and were completely taken by surprise when part of Wagner's "Lohengrin," over KDKA, issued from one of the new Kolster receiving sets standing on a pedestal 75 feet away.

Much mystery was cleared when C. H. Griffith, Cleveland district manager, suggested that Mr. Breck tune in another station. Pressing another of the eight selector buttons, music from WJAS came floating into the English room. Another button brought WCAE, another KQV and another KYW. Dealers marveled at the novelty which is a great convenience for the tuning of sets from distant points in a household. They were informed that the remote control unit is standard equipment with Kolster sets this year.

C. H. Griffith.

Paying high tribute to Pittsburgh as a pioneer in radio, Mr. Breck said that this district is one of radio's richest retail fields. He also mentioned that the special broadcasts sent Commander Byrd every other Saturday night by KDKA are received in Little America on Kolster sets.

Harry Frankel, salesmanager of Superior Auto Accessories, introduced Councilman John S. Herron, C. R. Rowe, factory engineer; Mr. Griffith, Mr. Breck and H. J. Curley, factory representative, in the Pittsburgh territory.

The six Bloom brothers, partners in the Superior Auto Accessories, showed a spirit of real goodfellowship by seating themselves at tables throughout the English room instead of sitting at the speakers' table, which is the usual custom. The brothers present were B. R. Bloom, Harry Bloom, I. Bloom, Aaron Bloom, Max Bloom and Sam Bloom. As one fellow remarked, "Everybody's bound to have a blooming good time."

R. J. Curley.

Members of the firm who assisted in arrangements included Carl Bachrach, B. D. McMillen and Frank Holmes.

The Superior Auto Accessories Company, located at Baum boulevard and Woodworth street, has handled Kolster sets and Cunningham tubes for three years. More than 300 dealers attended the banquet which was brought to a close with a two-hour entertainment.

Radio Echoes

May Singhi Breen and Peter de Rose recently celebrated their sixth anniversary as radio artists.

WGY's shortwave station W2XAF, has started a series of afternoon broadcasts on two frequencies for the benefit of European listeners. These go out daily except Wednesday and Saturday.

Buzzing around like so many bees, those WJAS folks sure are getting ready to move by July 1. Piece by piece the new 1,000-watt transmitter is being moved to the new country location. Occasionally something disappears from the studio, presumably occupying a new and important place in the Law and Finance Building layout.

Francis Owen doesn't know half the time whether he is coming or going, while "Howdy" Clark, popular manager, just looks around, sort of vacant like, and says "How?" when you pop a question at him. They're busy, and so is Marcella Deverson, preparing a new publicity and program service. Jim Hughes is on the jump, too, not to say a thing about the operators who, it is feared, may lose their happy homes.

H. B. McHugh, manager of WCAU, Philadelphia, is to visit stations in New England and Canada.

A new march written for WBAL, Baltimore, entitled "Marche WBAL," has just been composed by Felice Iula, the station's orchestral arranger.

We wish to recommend for membership in our Radio Good Fellowship, Mr. P. H. W. Dixon, of the National Broadcasting Company, who is an exceptionally good writer and a wonderful companion. Mr. Dixon was by our side the greater part of the RMA Trade Show in Chicago. Asking us for criticisms of NBC programs over KDKA and WCAE, we gave him a cross-section of the Sun-Telegraph radio poll last fall which indicated clearly the wishes of Pittsburgh listeners. Mr. Dixon likes very much the way Sun-Telegraph radio programs are compiled.

Mrs. Murphy's boarding house, catering to a theatrical clientele, has come to the radio Sunday evenings. It is broadcast by WJAS and is a portrayal of the happenings under the roof of this New York "hostelry."

We understand that Edward Sprague, formerly of KDKA and WJAS, is operating the radio loudspeaker unit at Kennywood Park. Perhaps some of the picnickers have recognized the voice, a very good one.

We observed some of the Lavendar network of WLW on a clothes line, during an automobile tour of the South Side. Irrational? Well, we wouldn't say.

BETTY HANSON ASBELL, only woman radio dealer in Western Pennsylvania, inspecting the Atwater Kent Screen Grid Model 60 at the Esenbe dealers' convention in the William Penn Hotel. She has conducted a radio store at 140 West Jefferson street, Butler, for seven years. Four months ago she married G. W. Asbell, center. A. A. Buehn of the Esenbe Company is explaining the Atwater Kent Screen Grid circuit.

"BIRDIE"

LITZ VERSION OF RACE WRECK

That brakes are mighty important on racing cars is attested by Deacon Litz, Dubois race driver, who held the field at Indianapolis Decoration Day in his Rusco Durak Brake Special for the first 150 miles, until forced to the pits by a broken connecting rod. The Deacon also was in the accident at Altoona on June 15 when Ray Keech was killed and Cliff Koodbury seriously injured.

Here is the Deacon's version of the unfortunate affair:

"As I was going round the east turn I noticed a car had left the track, and as I passed the judges' stand I signalled the accident. The fence was not down and the track was clear so I continued on. On my next lap I noticed that the fence was down across the track just as I headed in to the east turn. I estimated that I was going about 120 miles an hour. I slammed on my brakes immediately and managed to slow down enough to hit the fence rail and leap it without injury. I was thrown partly from my seat by the impact, but managed to keep my car under control and bring it into the pits under its own power. Without doubt my brakes saved me that time."

The Deacon has sent in his entry for the Bridgeville race classic, July 4.

83 Face Hearings In Auto Violations

HARRISBURG, June 29.—Eighty-three operators of motor vehicles are listed for hearings before the commssioner of motor vehicles, for various violations. The number cited is almost as great as during the preceding five months of the year.

Charges lodged against the individuals were: Reckless driving, 19; intoxication, 31; impersonating a person applying for a driver's license, 5; permitting use of motor vehicles by persons not authorized to drive, 12; attempted bribery of patrolmen examining applicants for driving privilege, 8; operating without license, 1; failure to file report, after accident, 4; habitual violators, 2; failure to stop, after accident, 1.

Educator to Take Air Vacation Trip

HARRISBURG, June 29.—(AP.)—One of the first passengers on the air-rail transcontinental service to be inaugurated July 7 by the Pennsylvania Railroad will be a state official, Dr. James N. Rule, a deputy superintendent of public instruction and secretary of the State Council of education.

Dr. Rule hoped to make the trip in the first plane, but when he found several thousand applicants ahead of him, made arrangements to bide his time and his vacation until his reservation could be filled. Mrs. Rule will accompany him and they will make the return trip to Harrisburg entirely by train.

Dry Well, Preserve Varnished Surface

When washing the car, never allow water to dry on the varnished surface, or it will become streaked and cloudy. Use the chamois skin and wipe the surface perfectly dry immediately after the water has been applied.

A WARM WELCOME THAT HAS NEVER WORN OUT

MAY 3 1924

"The nation-wide acclaim with which the Chrysler is heralded is due to the quick appreciation of a motor-wise public that here at last is a car which is a marked departure from all earlier practice and performance. + + + In distinctive appearance, in performance ability, in economy of operation, in fine standards of manufacturing, in roadability, in driving convenience, in supreme quality, motor car experts give the Chrysler a place apart. + + + For the Chrysler is more than a great engineering feat—it is, literally, the culmination of all past engineering experience."

TRUE FIVE YEARS AGO AND STILL TRUE

Daring to go back five years when the first Chrysler appeared, Chrysler can read without apology every promise made then, for every promise has been fulfilled.

In 1924 Chrysler was new. Its claims for performance, economy and stamina had not been proved valid by the hundreds of thousands of cars and millions of miles of driving that support today's leadership.

True, the automotive industry was startled by the wealth of Chrysler innovations. The public trend was to Chrysler if only because Chrysler instantly out-moded other cars in appearance. Comprehensive and gruelling tests had convinced Chrysler engineers that they had built a superior product, but the public—ever reluctant, and wisely so, to take without question the manufacturer's word for it—was proving out those claims five years ago. Chrysler owners by strict trial discovered before long that the car upheld every promise made for it, and their eagerness—continuing to this day—to testify to its speed, its power and its strength resulted in the prevailing world-wide acceptance of Chrysler products.

Now, in 1929, the public's confidence in Chrysler is still unwavering. We invite you to discover in a test of your own selection, the good reasons for Chrysler's uninterrupted success—for this constant acceptance of Chrysler leadership in quality and value.

Frescoes of Ancient Corinth

Remarkable Murals in the Ancient Theatre Which Faded and Were Lost Forever When They Were Exposed to the Light of Day After Their 2000-Year Burial

ANCIENT frescoes, the only ones of their kind ever discovered, that faded and crumbled to dust as they were copied, were recently unearthed by Dr. T. Leslie Shear, of Princeton University, on the wall surrounding the arena of the Roman theatre at Corinth, Greece. Buried under 15,000 tons of earth for almost two thousand years, this series of brilliantly colored murals shows how the old athletes entertained spectators with exhibitions of daring not to be seen today—how they engaged in single combat with lions, pole-vaulted over leopards, goaded maddened bulls to rush to their death on sharp-pointed spears and turned handsprings over the backs of charging lions and escaped unharmed.

These unusual gladiatorial and acrobatic scenes were painted on the walls of the Roman theatre at Corinth during the first century A. D. The theatre was destroyed shortly afterward, presumably by earthquake, and rebuilt in the following century. During the reconstruction, part of the wall containing the pictures was removed, so that only the bottom two-thirds of them are left. The surface was found to be badly damaged by cracks and breaks in the stucco, but enough remains to give a good idea of the sports that delighted the ancient Corinthians. In the fourth century A. D. the Roman Emperor

Mysterious Killing of the Denver Lawyer That the Police Can't Figure Out

ON the night of March 7, last, Cregar B. Quaintance, a prominent member of the Denver, Colorado, bar, a choir singer of repute, and the head of a family of four, left his home to attend choir practice. After a rehearsal, he went to his law office downtown and spent 45 minutes studying in preparation for a Masonic degree. He then went to his car and started for home. It was ten o'clock when he drove into the garage in the back of his home. As he was closing the doors a shot rang out and Quaintance fell, mortally wounded.

Eli Atlivaick, who lives next door, heard the shot and peered from his bedroom window just in time to see a dark figure vanish in the shadows. Atlivaick shouted for help. A group of neighbors collected quickly, and as Atlivaick bent down to lift Quaintance, the lawyer, with his last breath, gasped, "Down the street! Well dressed." Then he fell back dead.

The police, fellow attorneys, lodge comrades, his family and many other agencies have been trying for weeks to solve the murder. No clue has been found to the assassin. There has been no light shed on a possible motive for the killing. Numerous suspects have been questioned, but they succeeded in convincing the police of their innocence. Out of a maze of tangled reports, suggestions, theories and examinations, the officials of Denver, after many weeks, have learned nothing. It seems that the more the killing of the lawyer is investigated, the more mysterious it becomes.

Marlyn and Joan Quaintance, the Two Children of the Slain Lawyer.

Cregar B. Quaintance, the Denver, Colorado, Attorney, Who Was Mysteriously Slain by an Unknown Assassin, Apparently for No Reason.

The Widow of Quaintance, Who Has Been Unable to Provide a Clue for the Police to Work Upon.

Quaintance was 36 years old and was in a law partnership with his brother, A. D. Quaintance. He was the father of two pretty children, and was, as far as could be established, happily married, although some members of the police department for a time doubted this. But it was proved that on the night he was murdered, Quaintance kissed his wife fondly, petted the children, and was accompanied by the family to the door.

Mrs. Quaintance was in bed and heard the motor of her husband's car, as he turned into the garage. But she told the police she did not hear the shot, and was unaware of the tragedy until summoned by neighbors. The fact that she took the matter calmly led police to question her at length.

She explained her stoical attitude by saying later, "I must bear up for the sake of my children. If my neighbors and the public wish to construe my attitude otherwise, that is their privilege. But it is unjust."

Mrs. Quaintance, it appears, was merely taking a sensible course.

Many promising developments were turned up by the investigation. Besides the official inquiry, there were many amateur detectives on the job, spurred in their efforts by the offer of generous rewards by the members of the bar. One of the first things the detectives found out was that Quaintance had engaged in a fist fight the day before his death. The altercation occurred with another attorney, who had opposed Quaintance as counsel in a divorce case. But the other lawyer quickly proved he had been in a hotel room with several companions when Quaintance was killed.

The possibility that Quaintance might have been mistaken for his brother was considered and discarded, because the brother, while closely resembling the assassin's victim, both in build and feature, has his home in Golden, twenty miles from Denver.

Investigation in the pawnshops of the city disclosed that since the first of the year six persons had purchased guns of the same calibre as the one with which Quaintance was killed. Three of the six persons were located and questioned, but the other three gave fictitious names and addresses and the police have been unable to get trace of them.

Lawsuits, in which Quaintance had figured as counsel in recent months, were delved into thoroughly, but in no instance did the detectives discover a circumstance that might connect up with the murder.

In short, everywhere the detectives turned they found themselves up against a stone wall—with no loose stones.

They are convinced it was a grudge murder. But whether the grudge had its origin in a lawsuit, a clandestine affair, or some transaction outside of the ordinary routine of Quaintance's life, they have been unable to determine.

Neither are they hopeful that time will solve the mystery. They do not subscribe to the old theory that murder will out. George Klein, a member of the Police Department Bootleg Squad, was murdered some years ago in much the same manner, and the identity of his slayer, they point out, still is a mystery. Richie Rose, another member of the Police Department, was assassinated more recently, as he was walking his beat in North Denver. The identity of the killer still is undetermined. And there are numerous other unsolved murders in Denver's crime annals. The case of Attorney Quaintance will probably be classified with them.

The Pope's Luxurious Train Idle and Useless for 59 Years, to Be Used Again

SINCE the year 1870, when Italian soldiers marched on the Vatican, and made a virtual prisoner of the Pope, the luxurious train, built at great expense for the private travels of the Pontiff, has remained in Rome, idle and useless. The train consists of three coaches, richly ornamented with pure gold, carved and decorated panels, lavish furnishings, including a throne, and specially constructed trucks to insure smooth rolling and a minimum of jouncing.

One of the Luxurious Coaches of the Vatican Train, Which Will Be Put Into Use Again, Probably When the Pope Visits His Birthplace.

Since its seizure by the invading soldiery, the train has been kept intact and in excellent condition in the War Museum of the Castle St. Angelo. But within a few weeks it will be taken out, and put into condition for practical use. This will be done so that the train may be placed at the disposal of Pope Pius, who, by virtue of the treaty recently signed by Mussolini and the Pontiff, is no longer a prisoner in the Vatican, and is at liberty to travel afield without endangering any of the Pontifical rights.

The coaches are masterpieces of the carriage builder's art. The wood is of teak and mahogany, beautifully carved and colored, and bearing in many places, the papal insignia.

There are living accommodations on the coaches for a retinue numbering a hundred and twenty. Special quarters are provided for the pilots and firemen, and attendants. There is a communal chamber for attendant cardinals, and de luxe sleeping quarters for twenty travelers of state. The papal chamber occupies one entire car. It is richly upholstered, and provided with a beautiful throne, which can be reversed by a special mechanism, which causes it to vanish, and in its place, there swings a spacious berth, over which is suspended a white and gold canopy. In another coach, there is a complete library, writing desks, a consultation table, and a chamber designed to hold vestments and trunks.

The coach especially designed for the cardinals is equipped with half a dozen altars, which swing into view when side-wall panels are turned about. They are used by the prelates for saying mass while traveling. Each of the altars is in miniature, with the front and table of richly carved wood—the work of Alpine wood-carvers. Each contains a very small tabernacle, before which is set into a depression an altar stone, beneath which is imbedded the relic of some saint. There are compartments for wine and water cruets, chalices and other sacred vessels. Each altar is clothed with rich laces and linens and decorated with six tall candles and numerous smaller ones. From a generator beneath the car, electric reading lights are provided. The missals, or massbooks, are gifts from many countries, and are done in morocco and illuminated after the manner of medieval tomes.

Several firms in America, having learned that the train is to be placed in commission again, have written the Vatican authorities and offered to install modern radio equipment, not of the broadcast type, but a short-wave transmitter and receiver that would enable the Pontiff to keep in daily touch with the Vatican while sojourning. As yet, no acceptance has been made.

The Pope will use the train perhaps once only for visiting in Italy. After that it will be operated only on those rare occasions when the Pope decides to go beyond the Italian frontier. The first of these out-of-Italy journeys, it is indicated, will be to France. For travelling in Italy, Pope Pius uses an American-made automobile of luxurious type, custom-built, and bearing the Papal insignia. The automobile is now in the Vatican grounds, and several of the Pontiff's personal coterie are learning its mechanical mysteries.

Frescoes From Ancient Corinth

Julian is said to have reproached them bitterly for the great sums they expended in the purchase of lions, leopards and bears to gratify their playful sporting instinct.

The central painting of the series represents a man in a long purple cloak and red boots—legs far apart and left knee bent in an attitude of intense action—engaged in combat with a charging lion. The red boots indicate that he was a Roman official, possibly master of the games, as they were part of the costume of generals in their triumphal processions, and their use was restricted to the highest officials. Julius Caesar delighted to wear them and this picture is the only certain color record of their use.

Close by this official two gladiators, clothed in short white garments, trimmed with leather straps, with white bands about their legs, and sandals with white straps, are engaged in combat with a bull. The animal, with a fillet about his neck, a broad green ribbon about his body and red discs on his side, is rushing with protruding tongue and forefeet off the ground, to transfix himself on the point of a spear held by one of the gladiators. Blood drips to the ground in realistic fashion from a wound in the bull's throat.

Another scene represents an athlete, the reddish color of his skin designating him a gladiator, in a unique pole-vaulting feat. With a long pole he is leaping over a charging leopard that is painted a tawny color and covered thickly with spots. The athlete is coming down behind the beast in perfect athletic form, legs close together. Both actors are represented in mid-air with their feet entirely off the ground.

Turning a handspring over the back of an infuriated lion is probably the most difficult feat illustrated in the paintings. Here a gladiator with reddish brown hair, head tossed back and facing front is balanced on his hands, about to make a handspring over the back of a charging lion.

These unique paintings began to fade and disintegrate rapidly when exposed to the glaring sunlight and evening dampness, but not before accurate color copies were made.

Intricately designed and delicately colored mosaics were discovered in the paved floor of a Roman villa unearthed about a mile from the theatre. Near the fountain in the center of the open courtyard around which the villa was built is a perfectly preserved scene in colored mosaics representing a herdsman leaning against a tree and playing a flute while three oxen stand or recline nearby. The figures, a cooking pot and shrubs scattered about are all done in their natural colors. The leopard skin cloak the youth wears leads experts to believe that this may be a picture of Paris, the unfortunate lover of Helen of Troy, portrayed as a herdsman on the slopes of Mt. Ida. They further believe that it is a close copy of a work by the famous Greek painter Pausias or some member of his school.

A head of the god Dionysus is done in mosaic in the center of a finely preserved floor in an adjoining room. A circular frame of guilloche design surrounding concentric circles of brightly colored pyramids serves as a frame for the head. The head itself beautifully portrays the god with ivy leaves and fruit in his hair. The dignity of the pose, skilful representation of the eyes, carefully copied flesh colors of the cheeks and tasteful arrangement of leaves and fruit in the hair place this among the best of the Greek mosaics.

Chinese Women Take Up Flying

EACH passing month marks further progress of the East in the matter of adopting the modern utilities developed by Westerners. China, among the last of the Oriental countries to give up its ancient institutions, is being forced to do so steadily, and its younger generation, naturally, is largely responsible. Many observers have credited American motion pictures with a mighty influence in that direction. Certainly, American customs as reflected by the screen, its luxuries, and the general use of mechanical labor-saving devices, have virtually resulted in the complete emancipation of the Chinese woman.

Chinese girls, in the metropolitan areas of their native land, nowadays enjoy nearly as much freedom as the American or English girls. That is because they are given the benefits of education and a wider range of physical development. Educational institutions sponsored by foreign philanthropists, have introduced athletics and body-building games, and these have necessitated a complete revolution in the matter of feminine costuming.

In a general way, the young women of China have become conscious of a new importance. During the many civil disturbances, they have emulated the women of the Occident, by organizing military units, messenger services, and in a number of instances they have actually fought on the battlefield. It is no longer a curious sight to see women driving automobiles in the streets of Peking, Shanghai, Canton and Hong Kong.

But until recently, China, which had been backward and hesitant in the matter of aviation, but which lately, has gone in for it wholeheartedly, had no feminine representation whatever in that field. Among the first of the Chinese women to earn her wings, was Mrs. Chang Wei-Chang, wife of the famous veteran of the Chinese air fields and pilot of the Spirit of Canton, the first of the Government's air mail planes. She has been flying for seven months, and now has attained the qualifications of an expert.

She was the first woman of her country to make a solo flight, and on that occasion she remained in the air nearly seven hours.

Her activities interested other Chinese women, and when they organized, the Women's Bureau of Aeronautics came into being in Canton. It now has three dozen women members.

Another woman pilot, pictured in the photograph with Mrs. Chang, is Mrs. Pao Chin-Chieh, who has qualified as a regular air mail flyer, and who covers a bi-weekly flying schedule. In all their experience, neither woman has met with an accident. Both, incidentally, have accomplished numerous parachute leaps.

A peculiarity of the Chinese women fliers is that they shun stunts not calculated to be of practical use. They have refused on several occasions to take part in endurance or speed contests, or to undertake long flights of an international character. Their policy with regard to their service seems to be one of carrying out the orders of their superiors without seeking any particular personal fame, and to learn flying for its usefulness rather than its spectacular features.

Like Those Old-Fashioned Romances of Grandma's Day

Miss Mary Culberson, Senator's Daughter, Heiress and Washington Society Belle, Waits Faithfully Eight Long Years for Her Penniless and Once Almost Kidnaped War Hero to Come Back to Her—and Sure Enough He Does

Mary Culberson, Now Happy Bride of Alexander E. Robertson, as She Was When He First Came Courting Her in the Old-Fashioned Way Eight Years Ago.

And This Is Mary Culberson Robertson, the Bride.

Many Times, So the Story Runs, the Senator Might Have Seen a Romantic Picture If He Had Been Close Enough—His Beloved Daughter Slipping Out From the Fashionable Gaieties to Which Her Sweetheart Was Not Invited, and Exchanging Tender Sentiments With Him Just as He Was as He Slipped Away From the Garage. And Probably It Was Lucky for Both That the Senator Did Not See Them.

Alexander E. Robertson, British Soldier, Who Waited Eight Years for Mary, and Has Won Her at Last.

The Late Senator Charles A. Culberson, Whose Detectives Nearly Started an International Row by Attempting, It Was Charged, to Kidnap His Daughter's Sweetheart.

WASHINGTON is astonished at the marriage of Mary Culberson to Alexander E. Robertson. Nothing like it has happened in years.

It is the old-fashioned kind of romance that used to seem reasonable in the good old days when hearts were true and woman was a clinging vine, but which has somehow passed out of the news together with long skirts.

Miss Culberson, heiress, belle of Washington, only child of the late millionaire Texas Senator, Charles A. Culberson, scorned the rich, the handsome, the important suitors of Washington and New York for eight long years, true to secret hope that the penniless war-hero driven away by her fiery father would come back. And he did come back.

Alec, too, had remained true to what he thought was a hopeless love until the other day they met in New York and lost no time in being married. The bride's friends prophesy that they are just old-fashioned enough to live happily ever after.

Only in her heart is the former Miss Culberson so very conservative. Her raiment and behavior in no way distinguish her from any other society damsel of the moment. Only last January she knocked out five other cars with her own before the Washington police took Mary into custody, charged with driving under the influence of the stuff her father's Senate forbade the country to drink any more.

Senator Culberson, twice Governor of the Lone Star State, minority leader in the Senate after the eclipse of Senator Bailey, representative of the administration under President Wilson, and veteran politician who dared tell William J. Bryan, head of his own party, that many of the "Peerless Leader's" ideas were foolish, married rather late in life. He had just one child, Mary, the apple of the peppery old gentleman's eye. Nothing was too good for Mary if papa's money and power could get it, but one thing she must not have was a husband unworthy of such a prize.

That no ordinary youth might win her heart, she practically never was permitted to go anywhere without a chaperon. Finally, however, came a time when the young lady wanted to go to college, and at the University of Texas she slipped somewhat out of range of the paternal eye. To watch the whole Republican party and a daughter, too, was more than one man could do.

At college she met eligible young men, some of them sons of the Senator's most influential friends. As often as she mentioned their names her father gently but firmly told her she must not become interested. They were nice boys, but not nice enough for her; in fact, to the day of his death the old Senator never did see anyone who would quite do for Mary.

Like an old-fashioned dutiful daughter, she promised not to fall in love with any of them and she didn't. However, one day on vacation Mary happened to tell of the men working their way through college and mentioned young Alexander Robertson, an Englishman who had been one of the first 200,000 to face the Germans, had fought all through the war, been gassed and shell-shocked and in spite of those handicaps was earning his tuition working in a garage.

Senator Culberson somehow got a wrong mental picture of this Alexander and imagined him as a tottering, nervous wreck with ruined lungs. That such a pathetic figure would aspire to his daughter's hand or that she would consider him never entered the great man's mind. Therefore he neglected the precaution of forbidding the maiden to love the Englishman.

But Miss Culberson had forgotten to tell papa that Alec was six feet tall, blond, handsome and had just won a wrestling tournament at Austin. Had he known those facts it might have struck him as not impossible that even a Senator's daughter might love such a man. Anyway it was possible, because she did it.

Robertson, fired by love and ambition, got himself promoted from the repair to the selling end of the automobile business, but even that would hardly be enough to impress the wealthy father, so he left college for a job in the electrical business in New York, where he understood one might get rich quicker than in Texas.

The next time Mary was at Washington on Christmas vacation, all was serene in the house of the Texas Senator until he found in the silver dish on the hall table a card bearing the name of Alexander E. Robertson. Senator Culberson jumped and put on his fighting face, the same one he used to chase Corbett and Fitzsimmons out of Texas and in baiting the Steel Trust. Like most successful politicians, the late Senator had a good memory for names, and he summoned Mary before a Senatorial commission of one to explain.

The girl admitted that they were in love and hoped to marry as soon as Alec was financially in a position to ask the parental consent. This was disturbing enough, but it is said that under cross-examination he brought out a few extra details. For instance, to most people it may have seemed romantic, while the stern father was perusing reports in his library, that his pretty daughter should step out on the moonlit balcony, converse with an ardent young man and yes, so it is told, actually bend down and kiss him. To Mary it suggested Romeo and Juliet, but to the Senator it savored more of riot, rebellion and unconstitutionality.

In a towering rage he sent for this young upstart who had dared raise an eye to his only daughter. But, on second thought, he feared to trust his temper and turned the matter over to his private secretary, the diplomatic Mr. C. E. Jurney.

Alec came, and was only mildly surprised to find the business of investigating the merits of a future son-in-law had been delegated to a secretary. But, like most Englishmen, he was ready to expect most anything in America. The secretary's questions were direct and merciless. They revealed that outside of having fought hard and well through a long war and having won a wrestling championship, the youth had nothing but love and hopes to offer as qualifications.

The secretary explained that these assets were not sufficient; that the Senator himself had not married until he had become a national figure. Alec suggested that if everyone followed that policy the population of the United States would soon become negligible. He thought the idea somewhat undemocratic. Mr. Jurney replied that Mr. Robertson need not follow it if he did not like it. He was welcome to woo and wed any other unmarried female in the world. But before getting the parental consent for this particular maiden he would have to prove himself a person of outstanding ability in some line. He need not necessarily become enormously rich; in fact, that might be embarrassing, because in such case the Senator might have to get after him in the Senate. However, a few millions would do no harm.

Meanwhile Mr Robertson was forbidden to see his lady love again. As Mary was 21 and Alec 23, just one concession was made. They were granted the use of the United States mails for a moderate amount of correspondence.

Mary was taken out of college and placed in the Holton Arms School at Washington, where the chances of a garage mechanic meeting Senator's daughters are not so good. But many a plot against authority has been hatched through Uncle Sam's mails, and it happened again. Papa was watching his precious daughter more carefully now, especially through her bank account. When, one day, the bank informed him that she had just cashed a check for $1,500, the Senator took his daughter right out of the class room to explain. This was eight years ago and the cost of living was high, but as he was paying for most everything but candy, that $1,500 seemed as suspicious as the "yellow dog funds."

Again Mary confessed everything and his worst fears were realized. They had planned an elopement; but what seems to have made the old gentleman "see red," was the admission that Mary was to have financed it herself, on his money. What he said is not exactly known, but it must have been plenty, because Roberston received a special delivery letter from Miss Culberson stating that the elopement had been indefinitely postponed, and hinting vaguely that he had better look out or something might happen to him.

Something did happen. According to his story, three men, at dead of night, came to the residence of his aunt, Mrs. Mary T. Andrews, at Bloomfield, New Jersey, saying that they were Federal agents who had "something on him," and advising that he had better dress and come with them to the Robert Treat Hotel to talk things over. Being a foreigner and not knowing the laws, he obeyed, and was told that he was accused of stealing some war medals. The charges were absurd, but he realized that the scandal of a trial would kill all chances of winning the Senator's consent.

The supposed Federal men promised that if Alec would leave the country, there would be no prosecution, and they even agreed to furnish transportation to Buenos Aires, hinting that the money had been furnished by someone who did not wish his daughter's name in the papers. Robertson agreed and went with the men to Boston, where he was only waiting for the steamer to sail when the "agents" abruptly announced a change of plans and that he could stay.

The reason was that Mrs. Andrews had gone to Washington and started something. The men were not Government representatives, but private detectives, and very soon not even that. Spurred on by the energetic aunt, Robertson laid his case before the British Embassy, the detectives were arrested on charges of kidnaping and impersonating Federal officers and Senator Culberson found himself the centre of a storm that threatened international complications.

But, like most similar incidents involving political personages, nothing came of it except that Mary, not Alec, left the country, grimly chaperoned, for a long stay in Paris.

Mary had called it off forever at the command of her father, outraged that the young man had gotten the name of Culberson into its first scandal. Dutifully she tried to forget and outwardly wore a gay expression. Alec vanished, time passed, and in 1925 the old Senator died and was shortly followed by his widow.

The orphan heiress, now free from parental restraint, waited and wondered. Would Alec claim her? No, he must be dead or married or perhaps he had just forgotten. People of her set had already been married, divorced and married again and she was beset by suitors.

Alec, still vainly seeking fame, knew she had not married; but this gave little consolation to the love he still nursed. Other girls did not hesitate to pursue and even propose to the men they wanted. He reasoned that if Mary still cared she would have at least sent him a post card, through his aunt's address. And so these two "love-dumbells" might have gone to their graves unwed, if fate had not relented and brought them face to face the other day on Fifth Avenue.

One look into each other's eyes and both knew exactly what to do about it.

They did it.

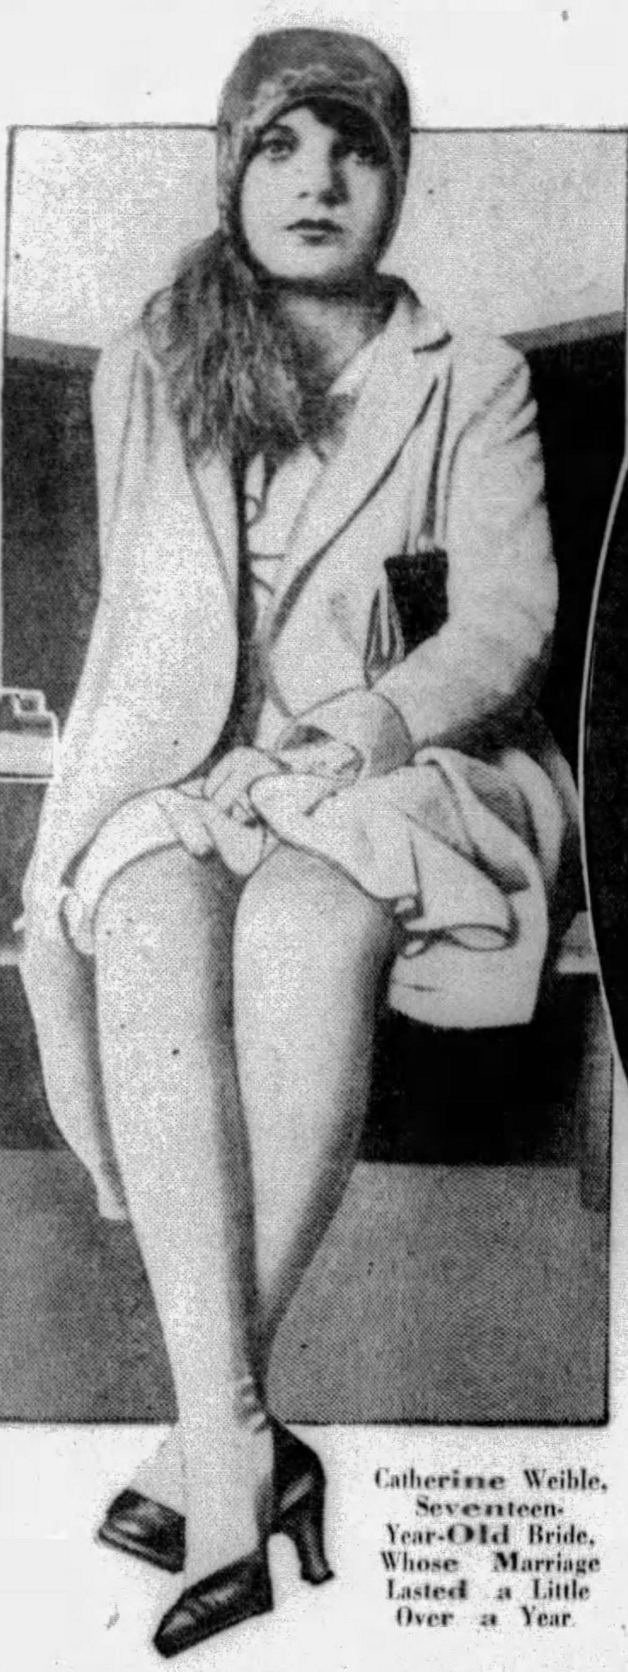
Devising New Laws to Check Colorado's Shattered Romances

The Courthouse at Littleton, Colorado, Where So Many Ill-fated Marriages Have Taken Place.



Catherine Weible, Seventeen-Year-Old Bride, Whose Marriage Lasted a Little Over a Year.

Mrs. Charles W. Campbell, Whose Second Hasty Marriage Went on the Rocks.

Mrs. Elaine Flaherty, Whose Romance Led to a Divorce After the Manner of the Majority of Gretna Green Marriages.

THE State of Colorado, looking back over a number of years in which the happiness of many of its citizens has been smothered under the debris of wrecked marriages, is planning new laws by which to wind future matrimonial candidates in a bit of red tape. Several new laws are under consideration which are aimed directly at breaking down the marriage industry that flourishes in Littleton, and also in Golden, the twin Gretna Greens of Colorado.

Littleton is twenty miles south of Denver. Golden is eighteen miles west. Paved roads connect both towns with the capital city, putting them within an easy hour's drive. Not so long ago, these two towns were Gretna Greens for the love-sick youths and girls of Denver. But of late they have come to be more than that. In short, divorce is crowding Cupid clear off these two paved pikes that used to be dedicated to romance.

Records of the courts in these two towns indicate that for every two couples that drive out from Denver for a marriage license, one couple who have had their fling in double harness and found it not to their liking drive out to seek severance of the marital bond.

The number of secret marriages and secret divorces in these two hamlets have increased so rapidly in recent times that the Colorado general assembly has been asked to amend both the marriage and divorce statutes.

One bill presented to the legislators for enactment provides that three days' notice of intent to marry must be given before a marriage license can be issued, and that the notice must be published. Another stipulates that a divorce cannot be awarded on ordinary grounds until the marriage is at least a year old. Ordinary grounds, in the meaning of the law proposed, include incompatability, cruelty and non-support, which, according to members of the Denver district bench, are sadly overworked in the divorce mill.

At one time recently there were pending in the county court at Littleton fifty-two divorce actions and seven suits for annulment of marriage. At the same time the records of the Golden court were nearly as heavily cluttered with marital wreckage, and Denver divorce court judges were working overtime to keep up with their dockets.

A majority of the marriages sought to be dissolved were of one, two or three years' duration and a perusal of the records revealed that in several cases where more than a year elapsed between the date of the marriage and the date of filing of the divorce action the marriage had actually endured only a few weeks and was ended by desertion of one of the contracting parties.

The facility with which marriages can be contracted—in secrecy if the bridegroom has a few spare dollars and is willing to spend them for suppression of the license—and the equally well greased skids to the divorce court are held to be responsible for the alarming increase in thoughtless—spur of the moment, so to speak—unions of young people and consequent quick divorces.

Mrs. Charles W. Campbell, a recent Littleton divorcee, furnishes a case in point. Although not yet 30, her divorce from Campbell marked the wreck of her second marital venture. She had not been long divorced from Chal Bentley, her first husband, when she and Campbell slipped out to Littleton and got a license to marry. The fact of her second marriage leaked out when another youth, who asserted to his friends that she was engaged to him, was taken to a sanitarium, suffering from a nervous breakdown induced by receipt of word that she had married Campbell. The marriage to Campbell endured nine months.

Mrs. Campbell was licensed to marry at Littleton, and went back to the same courthouse to get her divorce decree.

Mrs. Elaine W. Flaherty was married at Littleton, October 16, 1928, to Edward J. Flaherty, and appeared in the Denver County Court February 28 of this year, seeking a divorce on the grounds of cruelty and desertion.

She testified Flaherty rushed her off to Littleton against her better judgment, and after she had married him he kept her a virtual prisoner in their apartment and mistreated her. He deserted her in December, she said. Judge Luxford told her:

"You can't get a divorce in my court until you have been married at least a year."

Pretty Catherine Peasley Weible, who turned seventeen in April, went Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Flaherty one better.

She was married to Carl H. Weible in Golden on April 17, 1927. In October, 1928, she obtained a preliminary decree of divorce in the Denver County Court and assured Judge Luxford she was through with men. But—when March 31, 1929, rolled around, the day on which, under the law, her divorce from Weible became final, it was disclosed that three days previously, at Littleton, Edward J. Millis, a young Denver swain, had obtained a license to marry her.

Italian City Given Painting of "Old Nick"

WHENEVER a polite writer, or orator wishes to avoid the words, "hellish," "devilish" and yet retain the proper shade of meaning, the expedient is usually the word "Machiavellian." The family name of Niccolo Machiavelli, the celebrated Florentine statesman and writer, came into the usage because Machiavelli possessed unlimited Satanic cunning, and was almost as unscrupulous as the devil. But not only does the name Machiavelli serve to depict characteristic qualities. His given name likewise is in everyday use. It is from Niccolo, that is derived "Old Nick," now synonymous with the Devil, but once merely a sort of pet name for the statesman.

All the paintings, busts and other contemporary likenesses of Machiavelli go a long way to carrying out the popular notions about him. But among them all, there is no more impressive portrait than that presented the other day to the City of Florence, by Premier Mussolini. It is a painting which was at first attributed to Santi di Tito, but since it is unmistakably a portrait from life and since Tito was born in 1536, nine years after the death of Machiavelli, there is now a popular belief that some obscure but able painter made it in or before the year 1527. The fact that it is done on a panel, its technical qualities and other aspects serve to support the latter belief.

At any rate, the portrait shows Machiavelli wearing a cunning, malevolent grin. The eyes are prominent, cruel and wise. The hair is cropped, and the protruding ears help to carry out the impression of a Satanic countenance.

The portrait had been missing for more than a hundred years previous to 1906, when Commendatore Trolli, a Milanese manufacturer went to England and purchased it for the Italian Government from Captain Langton Douglas. Captain Douglas had discovered it in a deserted palace of the Ricci family and bought it for a few hundred pounds. Since then, it has been learned that the picture had been in the Ricci family for many years. Its panel measures 42 and a half by 33 and a half inches. Baccia, the daughter of Machiavelli had married a member of that family and possibly took the portrait to the palace herself.

Caught in His Own Bear Trap

JOSEPH SCHNEIDER, trapper, of Colorado, will never set another trap for animals. It is doubtful if he ever will be able to, physically, but even if he recovers, he never wants to subject a creature to the torture that he has been through. Schneider spent four nights and three days a prisoner in one of his own traps, on a windswept mountainside, twelve miles west of Tolland, Colorado, on the Moffatt road, with both wrists held securely in the steel jaws of a bear trap.

Schneider is now in Denver General Hospital. Besides physical injuries, he is suffering the effects of starvation and exposure, shock and, even if he recovers from blood-poisoning, he probably will lose both hands.

Schneider was setting traps for fox, close to Timberline on the Continental Divide. Plunging his mittened hands into a mound of dead branches to get pine cones and needles to cover his traps, he touched the spring of a bear trap and was grasped in its jaws of steel.

He tried to slip his hands from the mittens, but strain as he might, he could not bring one hand within three inches of the other. Then he tried maneuvering to pull the mittens off with his teeth, but failed. Night was coming on. The wind was beginning to whistle through the trees. Stinging crystals of snow were blown into his face from a nearby snowbank. He fainted.

Intervals of consciousness were followed by attacks on the trap. He lost track of time and began wondering if animals caught in his traps suffered as he was now suffering.

Morning of the fourth day came—approximately eighty-five hours after he was caught. Schneider, in pitiable plight, summoned his last strength and little by little dragged his right hand free, lacerating it fearfully.

Members of a Moffatt road section crew found him stumbling along the right of way near Tolland late in the afternoon and carried him to their shack. They cared for him to the best of their ability until a Denver-bound train arrived.

Why the Once Powerful Rain-Makers Are Unpopular Among the Bari

TRANSCENDING in power and prestige, the very chieftains of the scattered Bari tribes, in the Dinka country on the banks of the Nile, north of Albert Nyanza, the rain-makers of the Nilotic savages, until a year ago enjoyed almost complete domination over the people. But today, according to members of the Royal Anthropological Institute of Great Britain, who recently returned from an exploration into that country, to essay the duties of a rain-maker is an easy road to death. Rain-makers are extremely unpopular in the section, unless, indeed by some miracle, they can bring rain. But that is just the point.

For several years, the Bari people have fought starvation and suffering and are now on the verge of disintegration, because their primitive agricultural pursuits have come to naught, and their cattle have died off so that living itself has become a hardship.

The only salvation for the tribes, it seems, lies in the proposal of the Egyptian government to recruit the able-bodied men into a unit of the Egyptian army.

The famous rain-makers have about vanished. Failing to appease whatever mysterious gods they worshipped and called on for rain, resulted in their being continually discredited and disgraced. With their temporary loss of power and influence, these magicians were quickly subordinated by the chiefs who saw their opportunity of gaining ascendancy by advocating whatever emergency measures were possible under the drouth.

Now and then a rain-maker, hungry for power, arises, but when he fails to bring rain, he is driven from the tribe. Indeed, some of the pretenders have been put to death.

But in the days of his glory, the rain-maker was little less than a deity himself. His great stock in trade were tiny objects known as rainstones. These are pieces of quartz made into the shapes of cones, discs and cylinders. Their colors are usually green and white. The rain-maker, beginning his ceremonies, washed these in a pot, smeared them with simsin oil, and near the stone, invariably sacrificed a black goat. After quaint incantations, the rain was supposed to come. If it did not come at once, the rain-maker would repair to his hut, to spend hours in prayer and meditation, after which he would come forth again and command the rain. In all this, the magician was assisted by several chosen assistants.

During certain seasons, the phenomena of which the veteran rain-makers knew, it was not difficult to manifest their apparent power, for the wizards knew about when rain was due. But they found that an equally phenomenal change in the climate was taking place gradually, and for several years now the rain-maker's art has been futile, and, naturally, there are few rain-makers left.

Another highly respected citizen of the tribes is the blacksmith. He is adept at making weapons, spear-heads and certain wearing apparel. In the Bari art, he is always represented as a solid citizen.

The natives are quite capable in the matter of wood carving. A notable sample of their work is pictured on this page. It is a figure of a blacksmith, with leather girdle and hanging chains, of his own forging. The figure is part of the Miani collection in Venice, Italy.

Why You Get Indigestion If You Eat When Angry or Worried

Science Discovers That Your Stomach, Like Your Cheeks, May Blush or Grow Pale Under Emotional Excitement and That Thus the Walls of Stomach and Intestines Have Too Much or Too Little Blood to Do Their Work Properly

If You Must Quarrel, Don't Do It at the Table, for Anger Upsets the Internal Organs as Much as Anything Else and Impairs Digestion.

Enjoyment of Eating Carried to the Extreme. It Is Proper and Necessary to Eat in a Happy Frame of Mind, but These Gluttons of the Eighteenth Century, as Portrayed by James Gillray, the Brilliant English Cartoonist, Are Going Too Far.

SOME people blush on their cheeks. A few have noses or ears that get red when they are angry or excited. Still others blush so easily that they get red clear around to the backs of the necks whenever they are embarrassed. And many people, medical science suspects, blush internally as easily as they do externally. More blood or less blood makes the stomachs of these individuals pink or pale from minute to minute just as anger reddens the face or fear makes it pallid.

Such stomach-blushers are probably unfortunate, too, in paying for their peculiarity by indigestion and stomach-ache, for these and other disorders of normal digestion are apt to follow the disturbance of blood supply which the stomach suffers as a result of such emotional effects. Everybody is more or less likely, however, to experience some sort of disturbance in his digestive machinery if anything goes wrong emotionally at meal time or a little before.

By their effects on the valves that control the production of gastric juice and other necessary fluids, no less than by their effects on the pinkness or paleness of the invisible lining of one's stomach, anger, fear, embarrassment and other emotions are apt to determine whether digestion goes forward comfortably or runs off the track and makes a stomach-ache.

So says Dr. Walter C. Alvarez, long a distinguished leader of medical research in California and now an associate of the famous Mayo Clinic in Minnesota, who contributed recently to the Journal of the American Medical Association a study of the way in which he believes that emotions can affect digestion, beneficially or the reverse.

Fifteen years ago, Dr. Alvarez happened to be studying a patient into whose intestinal tract, just below the stomach, there had been inserted a small, removable rubber balloon, so that the normal or abnormal motions of these organs could be studied by measuring from instant to instant the air pressure produced inside the small balloon by the contraction of the stomach or intestine.

What struck Dr. Alvarez about his patient containing the small balloon was to see, one day, a sudden rise of the pressure created on the balloon and a sudden increase of the up and down swings of this pressure caused by the rhythmic contractions and relaxations of the digestive organs.

Hunting around to see what might have stimulated this sudden increase of activity in the patient's digestive machinery, Dr. Alvarez heard the slight rumble of the hospital cart coming down the hall and bringing the patient's luncheon. The patient, it was evident, had heard this noise, too. The pleasurable suggestion of food was enough to set the digestive machinery to working harder; oiling itself up, it might be said, for the job of digestion which the noise predicted it soon would be called on to undertake.

Following that first object lesson in the influence of emotions on the purely mechanical part of digestion, Dr. Alvarez continued to watch and to make notes. Ultimately he concluded that pleasure and pleasurable emotions act powerfully to stimulate the normal actions of human digestion.

Fear, mental distress, intense bodily fatigue and similar conditions can act, on the other hand, to stop the normal digestive actions. One case which Dr. Alvarez describes is that of a girl who fell out of a mango tree and broke an arm. On reaching the physician's office, after several hours, it was found that the mangoes which the child had been eating at the time of the accident were untouched by digestion. The pain and fear of the injury had completely stopped the normal action of her gastric juice.

In another case which Dr. Alvarez also reports, a young woman received a threatening letter from the collector of the Government income tax. This so frightened her that she never waited to find out what the trouble was, but promptly took to her bed with severe stomach trouble, which continued night and day for a week. Called finally into the case, Dr. Alvarez discovered what had started the trouble and cured the patient promptly by going to the collector's office and paying the $3.85 that he found to be due; a cheap enough price for the permanent cure of a case of persistent indigestion.

The effects of fear, anxiety or anger on the actions of the stomach and other digestive organs must be transmitted, it is believed, over the part of the nervous system called the "sympathetic" system, a technical term which has only a remote connection with the usual meaning of that word. Best known of the nerves of this system is the great "pneumogastric" or "vagus" nerve, tenth of the nerves to leave the brain through the skull and which passes downward into the chest and trunk with thousands of tiny branches reaching most of the internal organs.

It is over this nerve, in fact, that orders may pass to the tiny blood vessels of the face itself, enlarging these minute blood tubes and causing an ordinary blush. There is nothing unreasonable, therefore, in the idea that messages over the same nerve might make the stomach lining blush or grow pale in the same way.

The center for such emotional actions as fear and rage has been found, chiefly by Professor W. B. Cannon of Harvard and his co-workers, to be located in the lower part of the brain, well down toward the spine from the thinking part of the brain but still higher in the brain stem than the spot at which the vagus nerve leaves to take up its path into the chest.

Some of the things that happen when this center is excited are obvious, well-known effects. Fear will make the heart beat faster, the skin grow cold and clammy, the hair on the skin begin to rise in the condition called "gooseflesh." Anger has its own effects, resembling those of fear but not quite the same. These reactions have long been known and are believed to be due in part to direct nerve action, for example in stimulating the beat of the heart, and partly to the action of the glands, these organs receiving nerve messages to discharge into the blood renewed supplies of the gland chemicals.

Blushing and turning pale are undoubtedly related in some way to these same emotional reactions, all of which are quite unconscious and uncontrollable by the blusher himself. People who can blush or grow pale at will, or who can prevent these changes, are exceedingly rare. These things may even have had some use in the long-ago days of man's evolution, although nobody now guesses what that use may have been. Anyway, the mechanism for external blushing is still here and in good working order. Probably a similar mechanism exists, Dr. Alvarez suspects, internally.

"Just as sensitive persons blanch and blush externally," he writes, "so they may perhaps blanch and blush internally. It is known that marked changes in the blood supply of the mucosa (the mucous membrane) do take place and they might well help or hinder the mechanism which normally removes gas from the digestive tract. Such a mechanism, together with air swallowing, might explain the sudden attacks of flatulence seen in nervous persons. Such changes in circulation might well affect also absorption in general, but so far very little is known about the subject."

But this is not the only way, Dr. Alvarez explains, in which fear or worry can upset the digestive system. Another possibility is that it can lock the valves of that system when they should be opened or unlock them when they should stay shut.

One of these remarkable valves is just at the lower end of the stomach. Its duty is to open at intervals, as digestion in the stomach proceeds, and allow a small amount of the partly digested food to pass into the upper part of the small intestine, where the digestive process will be continued. If this stomach valve stays clamped shut, as it sometimes does, no food can pass out of the stomach, digestion will stop, and more or less painful trouble is sure to result.

Another valve is located at the lower end of the small intestine, where the food, now still more completely digested, is to be passed into the large intestine or colon. In other parts of the digestive organs are still other valves designed to control the passages of the food or the digestive juices from place to place as the needs of digestion may require.

Nature has provided, the physiologists have discovered, many remarkable devices for the proper opening and closing of these valves. Some are worked from near at hand, as though a watchman stood by to open and close a bank door whenever customers went in or out. Others are apparently controlled from a distance, through nerve fibres reaching back to the knots of nerve tissue called ganglia, like the "solar plexus," or even back to the spinal cord and the brain.

One significant fact, it is probable, is that these valves along the series of organs for digestion apparently receive nerve messages from the same vagus or pneumogastric nerve which is so closely related to the emotional center in the lower part of the brain and which seems to have so much to do with blushing, whether the blush gathers on the face or in the stomach.

At any rate, Dr. Alvarez's observations have convinced him that anger or worry can affect the opening and closing of these valves just as these emotions perhaps affect the pinkness or paleness of the membrane lining the stomach. Valves that stayed shut improperly when they should have opened, or which opened when they should have stayed shut, have been traced in numerous instances to such emotional upsets.

Another way in which emotion or fatigue can affect the digestion is more familiar. This is by interfering with the flow of gastric juice in the stomach or with other fluids necessary to digestion. "I have noticed," says Dr. Alvarez, "that the man who comes into camp hungry from an exhausting climb in the mountains and immediately sits down to a hearty meal will occasionally suffer afterward for several days with abdominal pain" and other disorders of digestion. The obvious explanation, the Doctor believes, is that fatigue dried up the digestive ferments which are ordinarily present in the gastric and other juices and which are necessary to digestion.

Experienced horsemen will not allow a horse to eat heartily immediately after exhausting exercise. It might be well, Dr. Alvarez thinks, for human beings to follow a similar rule, for some influence of fatigue seems to disturb the proper secretion of the digestive juices no less seriously than powerful emotions like anger or worry.

There may be still other ways in which bad emotions can interfere with digestion or pleasant ones can aid it. The liver may be affected, for example, by these conditions, for another large branch of the pneumogastric nerve goes to this organ, nobody knows why. Some day, Dr. Alvarez suspects, surgeons may know how to take a tiny nick out of this pneumogastric nerve or some of its branches in cases like these and thus to cure "nervous indigestion" by shutting off the extreme nerve messages which an over-excitable emotional center in the brain is sending out. But that is still beyond surgery's skill. The only remedy now is to attempt to control the disturbing emotions, replace them with pleasant ones and keep the bad ones away from the hours when digestion is going on.

"It would seem from all this," Dr. Alvarez writes, "that physicians ought more often to warn their patients against eating at those times when the mind is so distracted that there is no chance for the development of psychic juice or psychic tone."

Jokers Famous Artists Have Slyly Slipped into Their Paintings

Portrait of Two Dignified Painters Peeping at Susanna at Her Bath in the Recent Royal Academy Exhibition Recalls Other Instances of Humor, Satire or Vindictiveness by Distinguished Artists

Botticelli's Famous "Adoration of the Magi," in Which the Artist Used Portraits of All His Friends, and in the Full Figure on the Right Painted a Portrait of Himself.

"Susanna and the Elders," by Philip Connard, the Recent Royal Academy Painting Which Disclosed Two Dignified Colleagues Peeping Through the Bushes at Susanna.

LONDON.

CONSIDERABLE stir has been caused in London by the exhibition at the Royal Academy of a picture called "Susanna and the Elders," by Philip Connard, R. A.

Mr. Connard is a well-known painter, but what causes the excitement is not his artistic skill, but the fact that the two elders, who are wickedly peering at Susanna, are painted with life-like accuracy from two of the artist's most dignified colleagues, Sir Edwin Lutyens, R. A., and Mr. Adrian Stokes, R. A.

In the picture Sir Edwin is the white-haired elder with modern black-rimmed spectacles on the right, and Mr. Stokes is the heavily whiskered elder on the left. Both men were friends of the artist. Mr. Stokes says he knew that he and Lutyens were in the painting, that he helped to hang it, and thought it a very good joke.

But Sir Edwin Lutyens, it is reported, does not consider it a joke. In fact, he is highly offended by it. He regards it as in the worst possible taste. Sir Edwin is one of the best known architects in England, and has designed mansions for many prominent millionaires, and for several rich American women living in England.

Perhaps he thinks that a millionaire, on the point of ordering a house, may think of that odious picture of the architect peering at the chaste Susanna, and change his mind. Certainly it would be impossible to find anybody in all history more despicable than the two elders.

The story of Susanna is in the Biblical Apochrypha, and is a kind of sequel to the Book of Daniel. Susanna was a very beautiful and virtuous young woman, the wife of a rich man of Babylon. The two unworthy elders became enamored of her and watched for an opportunity to approach her, each at first unaware of the other's object. When they discovered one another's purposes they acted together. Their opportunity came when Susanna went into the garden to bathe in the river. The ancient story at this point reads as follows:

"And it fell out, as they watched a fit time, she went in as before, with two maids only, and she was desirous to wash herself in the garden, for it was hot.

"And there was nobody there save the two elders, that had hid themselves, and watched her.

"Then she said to her maids, Bring me oil and washing balls, and shut the garden doors, that I may wash me.

"And they did as she bade them, and shut the garden doors, and went out themselves at privy doors to fetch the things that she had commanded them; but they saw not the elders, because they were hid.

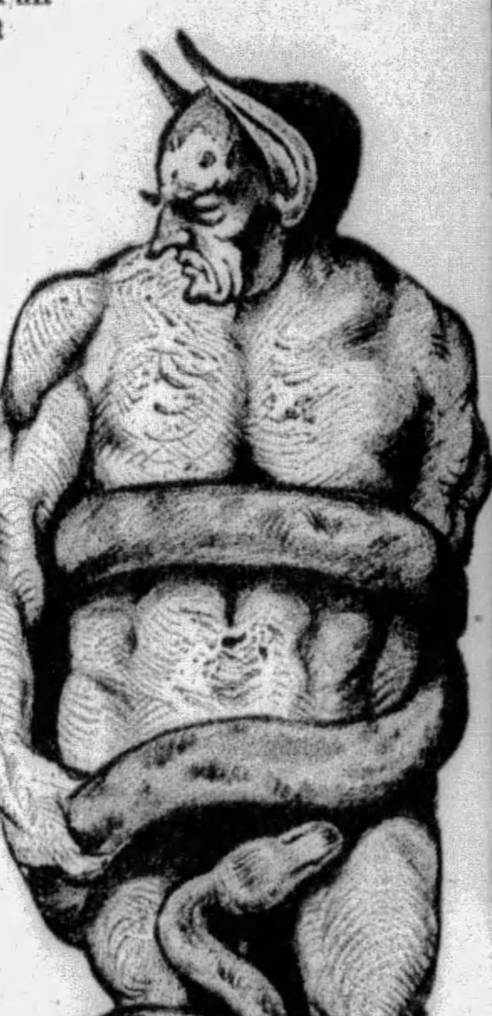
"Now, when the maids were gone forth, the two elders rose up, and ran unto her, saying,

"Behold, the garden doors are shut, that no man can see us, and we are in love with thee."

When Susanna repulsed the elders they said they would swear they had seen her with a young man in the garden, and would have her put to death. But the prophet Daniel arose, and by cleverly questioning the elders, exposed their wickedness.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Connard's picture is an example of a large class of paintings, in which distinguished artists have inserted jokers of one kind or another to achieve certain purposes of their own. Vengeance has been taken for old injuries, and debts have been paid by placing contemporary persons in solemn religious or historical scenes, where they were often much out of place.

The great Michael Angelo played one of the most famous tricks of this kind. His "Last Judgment," on the walls of the Sistine Chapel, at Rome, representing the reception of the saints into Heaven and the condemnation of the wicked to Hell, has been called the most majestic and terrible picture ever painted.



Detail From Michael Angelo's "Last Judgment." An Official Criticized the the Picture While the Artist Was Painting It, and in Revenge the Critic's Own Face and Figure Were Introduced in the Worst Corner of Hell, With Horns on His Head and a Great Snake Coiled Around His Body.

While the great artist was at work upon it he received a visit from the Pope's Master of Ceremonies, Monsignor Biagio da Cesena, who expressed himself shocked by the number of nude figures who appeared on the Judgment Day. It is said that Michael Angelo had refused to give a picture to the critical official. At any rate, the artist rejected the criticism with utter contempt.

When the picture was completed it was found that the artist had slyly painted a portrait of his critic in one of the worst corners of the infernal regions. The painter's enemy had a pair of large horns on his head, wore a very wicked and degraded expression, and was writhing in the coils of a huge snake.

The offended Master of Ceremonies complained to Pope Paul IV, and asked to have the picture corrected. The Pope replied with a fine sense of humor:

"Had the painter sent you to Purgatory I would have used my best efforts to get you released, but I exercise no influence in Hell; ubi nulla est redemptio."

And the offended dignitary's portrait has remained in the great picture ever since.

Fra Lippo Lippi's Scene in Heaven, in Which the Artist Took Occasion to Present His Own Face and Figure (Lower Right-Hand Corner).

Thirty years ago a picture entitled, "Christ at Emmaus," by the distinguished French artist, Dagnan-Bouveret, was considered the most remarkable work in the Paris Salon. It was a striking treatment of the miraculous episode described in the twenty-fourth chapter of St. Luke, when the Saviour, after the Crucifixion and Resurrection, appeared to certain of His disciples at Emmaus, and went to supper with them.

In the picture the Saviour sits at table with two disciples, and looking in at the doorway is a family of three other disciples. Parisians immediately recognized the three disciples in the doorway as the artist Dagnan-Bouveret himself, his young wife and little boy.

At that time this picture was considered very audacious, and some persons questioned the taste of placing recognizable living persons in modern clothes in the midst of a sacred scene. The picture was bought by Henry C. Frick, and is now in the Frick collection in America.

Many exciting or amusing disputes have followed the exhibition of French paintings, containing recognizable likenesses of well-known persons. Some years ago the eminent painter, Henri Gervex, displayed at the Salon an alluring picture of a blonde beauty completely undraped except for a small mask. In fact, the picture was called "The Mask."

To the most ordinary eye it was plain that the figure was no mere artist's model, but that she was a society woman of distinction. In a few hours it was whispered that the picture was really a life-like portrait of the figure of Madame du Gast, widow of a millionaire and a very prominent patroness of sports.

The Duke de Talleyrand, husband of Anna Gould and a friend of Madame du Gast, resented the revelation of his friend's charms by smacking the painter's face. A duel followed as a matter of course. Just why the painter was so audacious, and just how the Duke was able to identify his friend in the picture were matters never fully explained.

The talented French sculptor, Falguiere, sent to the Salon a statue of a nude woman called "The Dancer." Everybody said that it was a perfect presentment of Cleo de Merode, the dancer, whose figure was more familiar to the public than that of most women. Mlle. de Merode complained and threatened a lawsuit. The sculptor insisted it was just an ideal figure of a dancer.

The brilliant artists of the Italian Renaissance period frequently painted their generous patrons occupying high positions in Heaven. This was as important a part of the artist's strategy as putting those who had injured him in the infernal regions.

The great master, Botticelli, in his much admired painting, "The Adoration of the Magi," inserted portraits of nearly all the living members of the illustrious Medici family, his patrons, in the throng around the infant Saviour. He went further than this, and painted in the right foreground a very striking and flattering portrait of himself occupying as conspicuous a position as any of the great Medici family.

In this way Botticelli apparently thought he was securing lasting celebrity as a companion of the great, and making himself a familiar figure in a great palace. His celebrity is secure, but it would be equally great if he were not in the company of the Medici.

Detail From Dagnan-Bouveret's "Christ at Emmaus," Showing the Artist, His Wife and Son Looking in the Door on the Right.

Very quaint was old Fra Lippo Lippi's method of attaining an enviable position. He was a very early painter, born in 1412. His finest painting, "The Coronation of the Virgin," is a scene in Heaven, in which many of the saints and great figures of the Bible are represented. In the lower right-hand corner is a very clearly executed portrait of the artist himself, sticking his head and shoulders out of a sort of trap-door. His position in Heaven is modest, but he cannot be missed. In order that there might be no mistake he has written beside his portrait the words in Latin, meaning "He executed the work."

Most paintings of value, it has been found, are solemn, or, at least, non-humorous. The works of the really noted painters are usually very serious. For this reason visits to art museums are often depressing. Humorous art is nearly always in the form of caricature executed in line. Artists who work with the brush in oils seem to feel that it is beneath their dignity to be funny. Nevertheless, one can find amusement in serious paintings in many cases if one knows the history behind them, as has been demonstrated in the foregoing instances.

English artists were interested in the recent proposal of Mr. J. B. Neumann, of the New Art Circle of New York, to form a Museum of Laughter, to be filled with funny paintings. Undoubtedly it would answer a public need.

At the last exhibition of the Society of Independent Artists, in New York, Arthur Weindorf exhibited a picture which had certain claims to be called funny. It showed the interior of a sleeping car. A woman occupied a lower berth with a squalling child, who was apparently making sleep difficult in the car. A man in the berth above was reaching down to strike the child with his shoe. The picture was called "Berth Control."

But it will require pictures of a more decidedly funny character than this to make up a satisfactory Museum of Laughter.

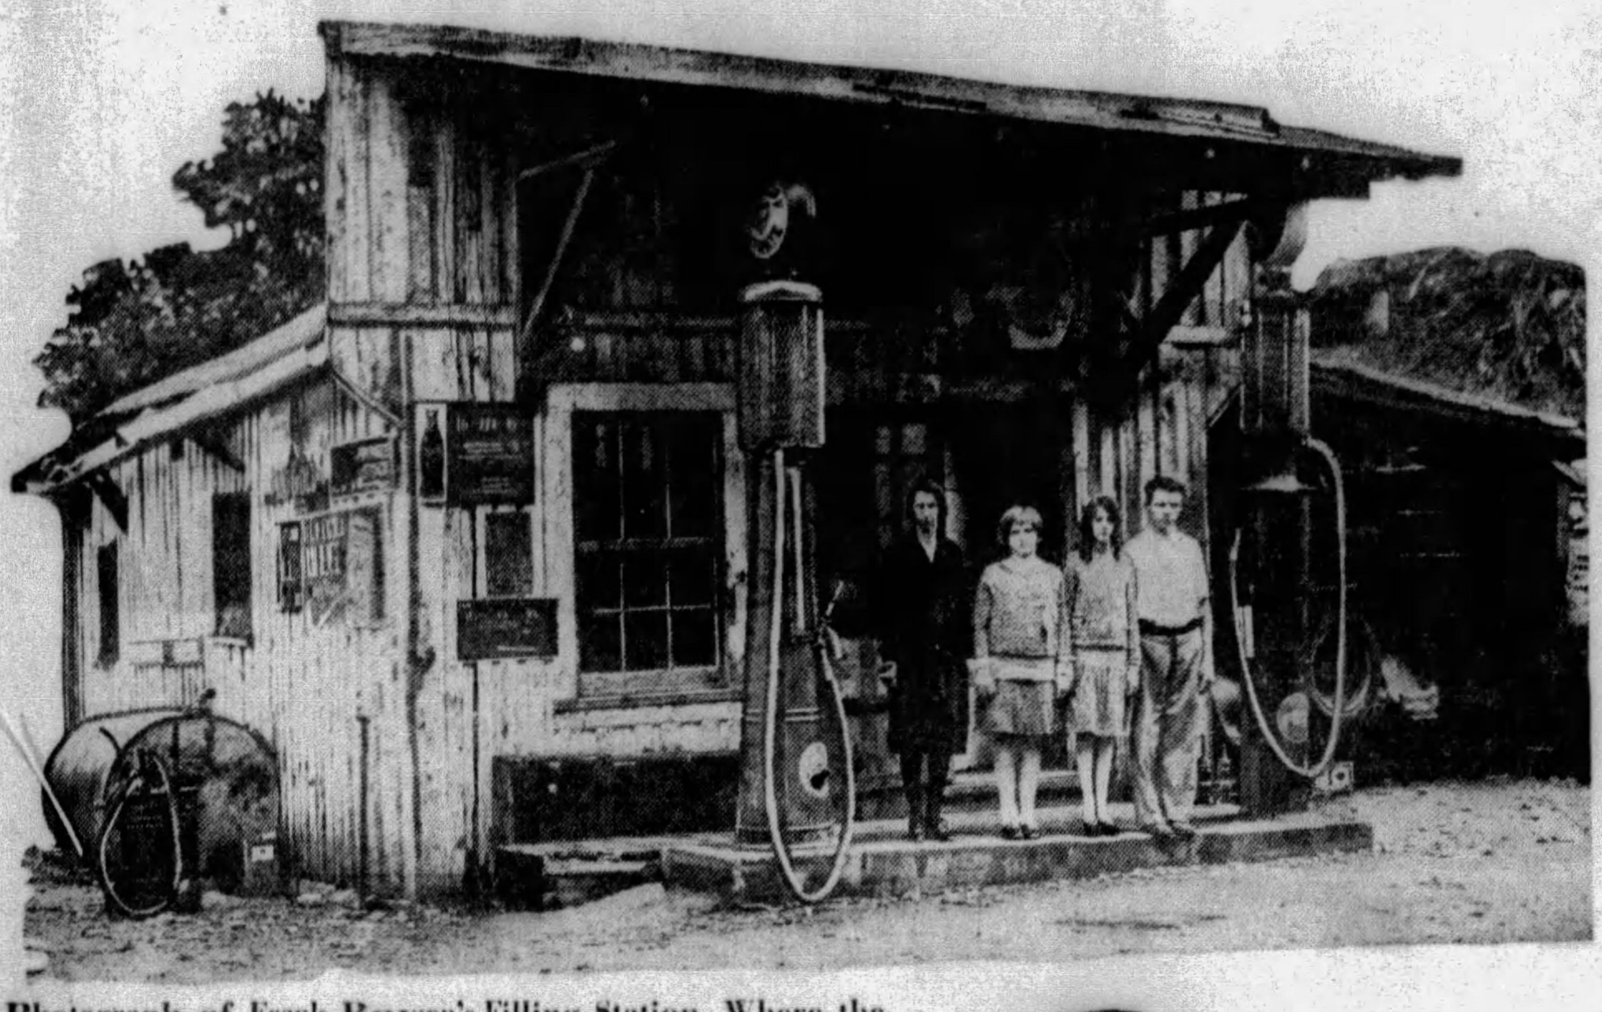
A Murdered Man's Body on the Back Seat beside the Smiling Bride

Startling Surprise for the Inquisitive Motorcycle Officer as He Unexpectedly Put an End to the Honeymoon Joy Ride of the Toughest Trio Charleston, S. C., Has Ever Seen



Photograph of Frank Bowen's Filling Station, Where the Honeymoon Trio Laid Their Plans to Kill Frank Bowen, the Proprietor, Rob Him and Steal His Automobile.

Opening the Door to Get a Look at the Inside of the Car, the Motorcycle Policeman Was Greeted With a Pleasant Smile From the Young Girl on the Back Seat. Around Her Feet Was Some Baggage and Something Covered Up With an Overcoat. Lifting the Tail of the Coat Revealed a Pair of Man's Feet.

Reaching Into the Car, the Motorcycle Cop Snatched Away the Overcoat and Peered Into the White and Lifeless Face of His Friend, Frank Bowen, Owner of the Filling Station a Few Miles Further Back Along the Road. Instantly He Whirled About, With Hand on His Hip, and Shouted, "Don't Move!" to the Occupants of the Murder Car.

Officer A. L. Youell, the Motorcycle Cop, Who Discovered the Murder and Arrested the Three Honeymoon Joyriders.

The Widow and Orphaned Children of Frank Bowen, the Filling Station Proprietor.

THE slight mistake of driving a little too fast past the watchful eye of Motorcycle Policeman A. L. Youell caused the detection of what otherwise might have been a "perfect crime," the murder of Frank Bowen, owner of a string of filling stations and good samaritan who believed in giving pedestrians a lift.

Stationed in the suburbs of Charleston, South Carolina, Youell was new on the force and so new on the motor squad that his uniform had not yet arrived. He had only plain clothes and his badge, a "rookie," but he knew his business. Presently a car passed seemingly a bit faster than it should.

The new and conscientious policeman scowled down the road, wondering whether to chase it or not. The car was not much above the speed limit, the two young men in the front and the still younger woman in the rear, looked not only sober but very serious. Youell decided to "tail" them anyway, and see just how fast they were going.

"What's the idea—going to a fire?" he demanded, half a mile beyond, as he came popping alongside and made them stop. The three looked sufficiently scared and as they were not breaking the law by more than three to five miles, perhaps a little scolding would be enough. The driver, a man of 21, answered:

"No, officer, my wife and I are on our honeymoon, with our friend here and I guess I didn't notice."

The bride in the back seat was very young, not bad looking and she smiled hopefully at the speed cop, who decided that a slight "bawling-out" would be punishment enough. However, though new at his job, he had the true instincts of a good policeman and he peered into the back. Around the bride's feet was some baggage and beside her something covered with an overcoat. Lifting the tail of the coat revealed a pair of man's feet.

"Who have you got there?" asked Youell.

"A sick man," replied the driver glibly. "We are on our way to the hospital."

"Is that so—which hospital?"

They could not answer that simple question and the bride's smile faded. The young cop's voice grew stern.

"Get out of the car," he ordered the men. The driver found his voice again:

"We might as well tell you the truth, Officer. Our friend here has had a few drinks too many and we were just riding him around to sober him up."

"Get out of the car!" repeated Youell. "In that case I will have to search you for liquor."

They obeyed and neither liquor nor weapons were found on either of them.

"Stand where you are," was the next order. "It's queer you've got a drunken man's face covered up."

The officer reached into the car, snatched away the overcoat and instantly whirled, with his hand on his hip. He had gotten the shock of his life for he was looking at the blood-stained face of his friend, Frank Bowen. Like every other motorcycle policeman of Charleston, he knew Bowen well because his filling stations were the natural hangouts of the motor squad.

"Don't move!" he cautioned the three, who were now staring at him with white faces as he lifted the front cushion and took possession of a revolver and a Luger automatic pistol.

"You two men get in the front and you (pointing at the bride) stay in back with me."

Slowly and without a word except the officer's driving instructions, the bride, the groom, their friend and the policeman and the corpse drove to the nearest police station. There, according to the police, the details were rapidly unfolded of as cold-blooded a murder as Charleston has known.

The story of the murderous honeymoon which began and ended with shooting runs back to the town of Elizabeth, N. J., where all three of the prisoners lived. There, until a few weeks ago, the bride was Violet Runne, a fourteen-year-old student in the eighth grade of the Roselle Park Public School. She lived at the home of her father, employed by the Standard Oil Company at Bayonne, with her mother, two sisters and a brother. There was also an elder married sister and a brother in the Navy. On Saturday afternoons, Violet was in the habit of filling in as assistant cashier at various shops in Elizabeth. She met Walter Willmot one Saturday afternoon.

Willmot, twenty-one, of No. 1159 East Grand street, Elizabeth, was employed by a nurseryman and florist on St. George avenue, Linden, a small town just outside of Elizabeth. Willmot had come to Elizabeth about a year before from Newcastle, Delaware, where he had worked in a bakery. Before that he had been in the army.

Violet was full of the most advanced ideas about young girls being "free moral agents" with the right to live their lives in their own way. So one night late in April she did not choose to come home and her parents asked the police to hunt for her. Next day they found her living with Willmot and arrested both on the complaint of William Runne, the girl's father.

In court, however, the family agreed not to press the charges if Willmot would marry her. This was agreeable to all concerned, including the authorities, who staged what is legally known as a "forthwith" marriage. That is, they hustled the pair upstairs and summarily joined them in holy wedlock, or at least in civil wedlock. After the brief ceremony, the bride and groom moved into the already crowded Runne residence at Roselle Park until Willmot could look around for a place suitable for housekeeping.

He was still looking, eight days later, when his friend, Millard F. Morrison, 24 years old, an ex-special policeman of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, took a notion to rob the house of an uncle with whom he was living. Unfortunately for his plans, another uncle, William Reuter, of No. 836 Summer St., Elizabeth, dropped in and caught him at it.

Angry or frightened at being disturbed, the ex-railroad cop pulled a revolver, chased his uncle upstairs into the bathroom and shot him in the leg. Then, realizing that he had done a stupid thing, Morrison jumped into his car and drove away with the general idea of fleeing from the State. But first he called on his friends, the newly-wed Willmots, explained what he had done and the desirability of going on a long tour and asked them if they would not like to join him. He didn't want to be lonesome. Without thinking what might come of it, perhaps without caring much, they hastily packed a couple of bags, jumped into the car and went away with the fugitive.

A storekeeper in Elizabeth and another in Kenilworth, New Jersey, claim to have identified the two men by their pictures as the ones who entered their stores and held them up for a total of a little more than $50. Whether this turns out to have been correct or not, there is no evidence of any further depredations until May 9, when they drove through Charleston and stopped for breakfast at a little roadside lunch room run by Bowen in addition to his filling stations.

As they drank their coffee the three watched Bowen count the contents of his cash register and heard him say that he intended to deposit $240 in the bank at Charleston. According to the statements which the police say they have obtained from Mr. and Mrs. Willmot, Morrison suggested a simple scheme for them to get that money and Bowen's car too.

To do this they drove part way back to Charleston, stopped the car and waited till Bowen drove along. The two men hailed him, said that they had run out of gasoline and asked for a lift to the nearest filling station. Bowen, always an obliging and trusting soul, took them in, while the bride remained in the stranded car.

Willmot sat in front and engaged the driver in conversation while Morrison, in the back, watched the scenery for a likely place for a murder. As soon as they came to one that suited him, according to the statement the police say Willmot made them, Morrison whipped out his revolver and shot the good Samaritan through the back of his head. Discharged at close range, the powder burned Bowen's neck and the bullet entered behind his left ear, passed through his brain, came out of his right cheek bone and still had force enough to break but not go through the windshield.

As soon as Willmot could stop the car, they dumped its owner over the back of the seat onto the floor, turned around and returned to Mrs. Willmot, waiting cheerfully in Morrison's car. Here they hastily transferred their luggage, weapons and New Jersey license plates to the new car and continued their journey to nowhere in particular. They seem to have taken no precautions except to throw an overcoat over the dead man. Nor did they worry. They are the type of people who do not "cross bridges till they come to them." Sometime they would surely find a handy spot to stop and hide the body and that would be the end of it. Meanwhile the fourteen-year-old wife obligingly rode in the rear with the corpse.

In the Kanawha jail, the two men took to accusing each other. They were indicted for murder and the school girl bride was locked up too, as a material witness. Still they seemed not to realize the seriousness of their situation and enjoyed being photographed and finger-printed.

Their cheerfulness was shattered when suddenly they were taken to other cells and they heard the sheriff giving orders to prepare the jail for a siege. Asking other prisoners, they learned that the mountaineers of the Lens Creek district were coming in, vowing to storm the jail.

"To let everybody out?" asked the New Jersey prisoners.

"Naw!" was the answer. "Just you three and hang you."

Bowen had a large acquaintance among the mountaineers who are pretty quick with a rifle themselves in a fight or a feud but did not like a cold-blooded murder like that of their friend Bowen.

A crowd collected in front of the jail but Sheriff J. D. Stephenson assured them that the case against the prisoners was strong and that they would certainly get what was coming to them.

And with grim faces the jurymen listened to the evidence the other day, promptly convicted Morrison and Willmot of first degree murder, and the young bride heard the Judge sentence both men to be hanged on September 13. With Southern chivalry, it was decided to turn the wayward girl loose.

CHAMPION

Champion Spark Plugs Are Your Guarantee of Superior Performance

Too few motorists realize that engine performance is directly dependent upon the right spark plugs. But it is a simple truth that spark plugs, which in the last analysis are the ultimate source of combustion, are a vital factor in power, speed, acceleration and economy.

Today, advanced engineering has given the motor car a greater and far finer range of performance than was even thought possible only a few years ago. New high efficiency, new standards of performance, are always changing the old order.

Yet, all advancements in power, speed, acceleration and higher efficiency remain merely an engineering dream until the right spark plug can meet the new conditions of advanced design.

Champion maintains unceasing research and experiment in the laboratory, in the engineering shop, and on the road. Champion is always in advance of engineers' demands by literally anticipating their needs. When the industry calls, Champion is ready. The product of undivided effort in engineering and in manufacture, Champion is universally accepted as the better spark plug, and outsells throughout the world.

The reasons for Champion's supremacy are basic. Just as no engine is better than its spark plugs, so also no spark plug is better than its insulator. If the spark plug insulator fails or is of an inferior quality, the engine suffers both in performance and economy.

Champion spark plug insulators are made of sillimanite. They are the only ones made of this invincible material. Champion sillimanite is a rare natural mineral mined in California.

Ceramic science—impartial and uncompromising in its search for the finest—discovered that sillimanite possesses exclusive insulating properties, unequaled by any other insulating material. Possessed of a natural high resistance to electrical, heat and mechanical shock, it is ideally adapted to withstand the ravages of combustion, and the intense pressures and temperatures of modern engines. Sillimanite is your guarantee of the full, even flow of power throughout the entire range of engine operation.

Champion sillimanite has contributed to advancements in the design, construction and ultimate performance of Champion Spark Plugs which would have been impossible with any other insulator.

A patented solid copper gasket-seal retains all the advantages of Champion's exclusive two-piece construction with the positive assurance of remaining absolutely gas-tight against the highest compression. Special analysis electrodes, with positive parallel sparking surfaces, insure a hot, even spark, and a permanently fixed spark gap at all operating speeds.

Designed and made for today's high compression engines, Champion Spark Plugs, now as always in the past, assure you of the ultimate in engine performance. Champion excels and outsells with these exclusive features.

Change Spark Plugs Every 10,000 Miles

Far better than any ordinary spark plugs, even Champions deteriorate under the harsh attack of intense heat, high compression, and modern fuels. All motor car manufacturers, and millions of motorists the world over, have proved the efficiency and economy of a complete new set of spark plugs every 10,000 miles. They restore power, speed and pick-up and pay you actual dividends in gas and oil savings alone. Remember—it is a genuine economy, so install a new set of Champions every 10,000 miles.

Know Your Spark Plugs —Buy By Number

For every engine there is one spark plug that enables that engine to yield its best performance. Champion builds spark plugs which are specifically designed for better performance for every engine under every operating condition. The Champion chart tells you the one right spark plug for your engine. Every Champion dealer has a most comprehensive and up-to-date chart. Consult him, and then install a new set of Champions.

Summer Brides and Bridesmaids

Authoritative and Newest Fashions From the Studios of the Most Distinguished French Dress Creators, Drawn by Soulie, the Foremost Fashion Artist of Paris

Lace Is a Charming Material for Bridesmaids, and the Gown Sketched, From Agnes (Madame Havet), Is One That Would Look Charming in a Wedding Procession. The Original Combination Is Cream All-Over Lace and Black Satin. The Black, of Course, Would Be Changed to a Slightly Darker Cream for Maids' Gowns. The Lace Is Used in a Redingote Shape, With the Natural Waistline Somewhat Marked by the Cut. This Is Open Over a Slip of Satin, Lace Hemmed, With a Vest of the Darker Satin at the Top, and a Row of Rhinestone Buttons. With This a Large Lace Capeline, Trimmed With Satin Ribbon Matching the Satin Used in the Gown, Would Be a Pretty Choice. The Shoes Might Be Satin Colonials in the Color of the Darker Shade of Cream, With Large Rhinestone Buckles.

With This Bruyere Wedding Gown It Would Be Pretty to Dress the Bridesmaids in Modified Robes de Style. The Original Model Is in Black, but, of Course, for a Wedding Some Light Color Should Be Chosen. Pairs of Bridesmaids, Two and Two, the First Pair in Pale Pink, the Second in Pale Yellow, and the Third Pair in Pale Green, Would Be a Charming Choice for a Summer Wedding. The Gown Is a Combination of Tulle and Faille, With Fitted Bodice and Very Full Skirt, With Appliqued Circles and Bands of Faille on a Tulle Foundation. There Is a Deep Pelerine Collar in the Back. The Big Poke Bonnet Hat Is From Le Monnier, and Is in Horsehair With Satin Ribbon Bow.

Worth Has Designed This Wedding Gown. It Is in White Taffeta, Cut With a Circular Skirt, the Back Godets Extended Into a Train. The Bodice Is Plain, With Long Sleeves and Very Slight Decollete in the European Manner, and at the Waist, With Its Suggestion of Raised Line, Is a Large Bow of White Velvet Ribbon and Orange Blossoms. The Veil Is of Tulle, Bordered With Alencon Lace, and Comes From a Little Cap of Orange Blossoms on the Head.

This Wedding Gown, by Worth, Is an Adaptation of the Costume of the Middle Ages. It Is Made in White Transparent Velvet, Cut Very Simply. The Only Trimming Is Twists of the Velvet, Cut on the Bias, and Mingled With Strings of Artificial Pearls. The Sleeve Is Particularly Interesting, Long and Tight. There Is a Little Cap at the Top, Slightly Puffed and Marked by Pearl Embroidery. The Juliette Cap Is of Pearls, and the Veil Is of Plain Tulle. The Gown Is Very Long and Hangs in Graceful, Dignified Folds.

PARIS, June 22.

THE Summer bride has an immense advantage over the Winter one, in that she need not be worried about cold weather. The problem of the Winter bride, in finding just the right wrap to wear to the church over her white finery, is a serious one unless she be the proud possessor of a coat or cape of spotless ermine. In Summer, if the weather man will only show a bit of consideration, the bride may step from her car to the church, in all the beauty of her gown and veil, without the bother of any wrap at all.

A wedding is the greatest opportunity of a girl's lifetime to choose the type of gown that becomes her better than any other. For this reason, there is no rigid observance of fashion in wedding gowns. They may follow the latest mode, or they may be inspired by one of the historical epochs of our common past. Worth is one of the most famous houses in the world for wedding gowns. On these pages are presented two of his most recent ones.

One of them is for a bride who likes to follow the mode. It is in white taffeta, one of the soft, supple taffetas which have little resemblance to the stiff, papery silk affair that used to be known by this name. The bodice is rather fitted, as bodices are apt to be this season, and the skirt is a circular one, the back godets being extended to form a long train. The bodice carries just a suggestion of the raised waistline with which the designers of the mode are so preoccupied at present, and it has the slight decollete and long sleeves that are the rule in Europe, where weddings take place invariably at noon and in a church. At one side, towards the front, is a large bow of white velvet ribbon, intertwined with orange blossoms, the bride's classic flower. The veil is of tulle, bordered with Alencon lace, and falls from a little cup of orange blossoms that covers the head.

With a dress of this kind, the maids may be gowned in the latest mode, or in some modification of the robe de style, which is so often the choice for this occasion.

Two gowns of these two different characters are drawn. One, in lace, comes from Agnes, the house that is directed by Madame Havet. The original model was in cream lace and black satin. For the bridesmaids, the black would be replaced by a deeper shade of cream, or by a caramel color. The lace is cut in a redingote shape, open in the front, with the natural waistline somewhat marked in the new fashion.

The slip below the lace coat is of satin, in a creamy shade, with a yoke across the top of caramel color, made to look like a little bolero by the addition of a row of strass buttons. The lace redingote is decorated with bands of the satin here and there.

With this gown is worn a large lace hat, of the type that the French call a capeline, trimmed with satin ribbon matching the darker shade used on the gown. The shoes might be satin Colonial pumps, with large rhinestone buckles to match the buttons.

If the bride prefers her maids in somewhat more important-looking gowns, she might choose the other model from Bruyere. This is an example of the modified robe de style, and would look lovely in the wedding procession. It is made of a combination of tulle and faille, the bodice tightly fitted, in the eighteenth century manner, and the skirt very full, and is made of appliqued circles of faille on a tulle foundation.

There is a cape collar at the back of tulle and faille, and a big poke bonnet hat from Le Monnier, in horsehair, with a satin ribbon bow at the side. If pairs of bridesmaids are chosen, they might be gowned in this style, in groups of pale colors, the first pair in pale apricot pink, the second in pale yellow, and the third in green. An all-white wedding is also a charming affair, and several recent Parisian brides have dressed their maids entirely in white, giving them bouquets of colored flowers.

Worth's second wedding gown is for the bride who fancies that she really should have lived in the Middle Ages. It is made of wedding-ring velvet, that lovely half-transparent material that falls in beautiful folds. The only trimming is twists of the velvet, cut on the bias and interwoven with strings of artificial pearls.

The sleeve is particularly interesting, and recalls Juliet's. It has a short upper part, bordered with a twist of velvet and pearls, and a long, tight, plain part that comes down well over the wrist. The cap, also reminiscent of Juliet, is a trellis of pearls, and the veil is of plain tulle.

Revelations by a White Girl Bride in London's Chinatown

Edith May Forbes (Mrs. Li Ah San) Explains Why the Puzzling Crimes in the Human Rat Holes of Limehouse Causeway Are Seldom Cleared Up by the Police, and the Hopeless Despair Which Overtakes Those Who Are Lured to the Opium Dens of the Infamous Yellow Men

Pretty Billie Carleton, Whose Death by Drugs Startled England a Few Years Ago and For a Time Put a Stop to the Activities of the Opium Dealers in London's Limehouse District.

Lady Betty arrived as usual at the opium den in London's Limehouse district and the Chinese attendant prepared her opium as the young woman slipped into a kimono and settled herself on the bunk for her smoke.

A few minutes later, as she lay there, having passed from one stage to another of the opium, the pipe finally dropped from her hand and she was fast asleep. Silently the blackmailer crept in through the door, tiptoed to the side of the bed and studied the girl for a moment, then raised the window shade, letting in the morning sun through the dirty panes. He pulled a camera from his pocket, focused carefully, took two pictures, pulled down the shade, and silently withdrew.

CHAPTER I.

©1929 by American Weekly, Inc. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

FOR seven years I was the white wife of a Chinese, and lived with him in Limehouse, London, probably the oldest, and certainly the most famous and mysterious of all the world's Chinatowns. I know more about what went on behind the scenes and the motives for its crime mysteries than Scotland Yard will ever know.

No white man understands the Chinaman at all, but one or two white women do, who, like myself, have married a Chinese husband, lived in intimate association with him, and, finally, become a privileged spectator and insider, with the key to those happenings that baffle the police and give the Celestial his uncanny reputation. Not every white wife learns to know her Chinese husband. Before she can hope to penetrate that expressionless face that masks his thoughts she must prove something that goes against a woman's grain—that she can keep a secret.

In some ways a Chinese husband is ideal, but in others he is infuriating, and he is always terrifying. When I accepted Li Ah San did he clasp me in his arms, did he press burning kisses on my lips; did he pour out words of devotion? He did not. He did not even change his expression. He merely said: "All right," and began discussing how we would furnish our house. But that did not mean that he was not passionately in love with me—far from it. I would learn about that at a more fitting occasion.

It was most annoying when I burst into his presence in a brand new and ravishing gown, that he had no comment to make, and even carefully avoided looking at it. A few days later, however, when we were planning to go somewhere, he would casually ask me to wear that dress, describing it as minutely as if he had made it himself, and explaining that, while I would always be just as beautiful to him in rags, he wished his friends to see me in a gown so becoming to my eyes or figure. You simply cannot hurry a Chinaman, even after you have married him.

Chinese husbands do not speak sharply to white wives, it isn't done. They never look cross nor press embarrassing questions. A Chinese husband will always appear to accept even the most preposterous explanation his white wife may give. But heaven help her if she fancies that he will not quietly investigate and, some time, no matter how long it takes, catch her in that lie.

Li Ah San loved me as much as any white man I know seems to love his wife, and I am very sure he would have given his life for me, if, according to his notions, the occasion justified it. But I am even more certain that had I ever been untrue to him he would have found it out. Then he would have considered it his duty to provide Scotland Yard with two more mysterious crimes. My body would have been found in one place and the corpse of the other man in another. Every insider of Limehouse would have known the story, but nobody, even my husband's worst enemies, would have dreamed of informing the police.

Occasionally the Chinaman does not scorn to use the police to punish an enemy, but never by informing. That would be unpardonable, and he would surely have his tongue pulled out. I will tell later of a Chinese whom Scotland Yard triumphantly captured and sent to prison for counterfeiting when his real crime was paying only half the agreed price for a house in Limehouse Causeway.

I knew of an unofficial white wife, whose husband amputated her legs instead of killing her. For all I know she is still weeping behind one of those dilapidated, forbidding fronts that hide so much wealth, luxury and anguish. She was a dancer, and to the mind of a white man, depriving her of her beautiful legs was more cruel and inhuman than to have stuck a knife through her heart. But there is this much to be said in his favor, having meted out the punishment that he and his friends thought right, he forgave her offense, and never mentioned it again—something not all white husbands would do.

As I go along I will tell the inside story of some of the happenings you may have read about as reported by the police from the outside—all wrong. I will try to explain the fascination the Oriental has for the white woman. He understands her weaknesses better than the white man does. He gets right down to basic principles with her, and knows how to make her throw away wealth, beauty, honor and social position, and leave light, sunny, airy homes, to bury herself in the most dreary corner of London. Also I will show why drugs are the ruination of the white man and woman, but seem not to harm the yellow race at all.

Frequently in this account I am likely to mention that Chinamen seem able to smoke opium with no great harm to themselves. I have seen aged Chinese who have been at it since their youth and yet have escaped the yin-yin, as they call the irresistible craving that soon overwhelms the white addict. Plenty of others have called attention to this moderation of the Oriental and some have imagined that the white race might do the same. No greater mistake can be made. It is impossible for the white race to use opium in moderation, though an occasional white individual may accidentally be so constituted that it is possible.

The Chinese know this very well and they have a flattering explanation. They think themselves superior to the white man in will power and philosophy. My experience and observation taught me that this was not true, but it was a long time before I learned the secret. Here is the difference, in a nut-shell. A Chinaman can smoke one pipe or two a day, all his life and always get something out of it. The white man can only get excitement by increasing his dose, and this has nothing to do with will or philosophy. It is a matter of chemistry. The chemistry of the yellow man's blood is as different as the color of his skin.

Why opium must always be deadly to the white, I learned from an old retired English doctor who had spent his life in China and I will tell you about it in a later chapter.

It is my opinion that no white woman ever marries a Chinese for love, though she may fall in love after marriage. It is hunger of some sort that brings the white woman into the arms of the yellow men and they know it.

"Woman is the hungry sex," my husband observed one evening as we watched a party of them trooping into a house on the Causeway to try their first pipe of opium. He meant white women, that they are always hungry for more, more clothes, more attention, more husbands, more excitement. Mine was not the hunger of an empty head seeking amusement, but of an empty stomach for food.

At the age of six, after mother died, father took me and my baby sister from Liverpool to London. For two years he worked steadily as an accountant in one of the big steamship offices and then without warning, quietly drew his pay and vanished. We were living in a boarding house and the hard-working woman who ran it kept us two unprofitable little boarders and brought us up as if we were her own children.

When I reached seventeen and was rather mature for my age, it seemed high time to go to work. But I had no training as a typist and nobody seemed to want a governess who had such a dubious family history. However, men around the boarding house had been kind enough to whisper in my ear that I had a face and figure. Being feminine, I believed them and decided to go on the stage. Fortunately there happened to be just enough truth in their flattery so that an agent booked me for a provincial pantomime. By keeping a little hungry all the time I managed to send the equivalent of a dollar or two home most every week to help take care of my sister.

After two months I went to London and got into Charlot's Revue at the Vaudeville and at the end of two years of economy and living at the boarding house had saved over $200. Another girl and I decided that we were prosperous enough to rent a tiny flat. As soon as we did, our luck changed for the worse, work became scarce and my tiny savings dwindled.

One day my friend led me to my first Chinese meal at a restaurant in Piccadilly Circus on the theory that it would be a novelty and cheap. It was more than cheap, it turned out to be free. While I was struggling with the strange menu I saw two young Chinese men enter the place. One bowed to my friend and the next thing I knew they were sitting beside us, ordering for us and speaking excellent English. They ordered very nice things and nicer yet, insisted on paying the check. To repay this obligation we let them spend more money by taking us to a moving picture.

It is funny how fate runs things along just like a plot in a picture. The picture we saw was laid in San Francisco's Chinatown, which prompted us two girls to ask if our Limehouse wasn't really bigger and wickeder than anything the Yankees had. Our escorts flattered our patriotism by assuring us that it was.

Observing that I was interested in such foolishness, Li Ah San, the young man at my side, did much as a white youth might have under the circumstances, told me of the pipe smoking, cocaine sniffing and some of the other things he had witnessed. Then I asked if anyone could see such things.

"Not anyone," he answered. "The curiosity seekers and American tourists going through with a guide, see nothing but shops, old buildings and Chinese walking around. But if you know the ropes, it is different."

I promptly asked him to show us the ropes. His answer, though simple, proper and sensible enough, gave me a queer feeling just because it came from the lips of a Chinese and I remember it to this day.

"It could be done," he answered hesitatingly, "and you would be safe enough in our company, but the question is would you not dislike it, perhaps become disgusted and never want to go again."

Now any woman, young or old, wants the man with her to like her. No matter if he is impossibly old, poor or ugly, it is pleasant to have him desire her as a wife. She may be happily married, but still it is agreeable to think she could have him too if she wished.

Li Ah San's fear that I might be disgusted with things Chinese, indicated that he did not want to lose my interest and therefore that he was thinking along the lines every woman wants every man to think. Instead of being warned by that knowledge, I felt a shivery sensation at the idea that a Chinese would dare presume to imagine that he could attract me, a white girl. In spite of that feeling I insisted that I wanted to go, and we did the next Sunday evening.

The two Chinese met us that evening at the corner of the Haymarket. We took a 15 bus and got off at the "Eastern" public house at the fork of Commercial Road and West India Dock Road. Then we walked along West India Dock Road and came to the top of the Causeway.

The time was about seven o'clock, and as it was Autumn, already dark. The Causeway was full of life. On the left hand side looking down were two or three restaurants whose doors kept opening to admit or let out customers. The business of these seemed to be Chong Chu's. But our escorts took us past them and went further down the street, under the railway arch, that I found later, was the scene of many a street assault and robbery, and under which many a sailor had been found stabbed.

At last we stopped at a door and my companion took out a key and let us in. As soon as he lit the gas in the passage, I stood amazed at the difference between the inside and the exterior of the house. From the street, it looked a dirty, grubby, almost slum-like dwelling, with its front butting right on to the pavement.

But even the lobby was wonderfully furnished. There was a thick pile "runner carpet," and the walls were papered with an expensive black and gold design. Li Ah San opened a door and showed us into a room. It was even more amazing in its contrast.

A magnificent Persian carpet covered the floor. The furniture was of a dull red lacquer such as one sees in the most expensive furniture shops in the West End. Silk cushions were everywhere. In the grate a bright fire was burning which made me wonder who had been there to light it. And on the walls were Oriental water-colors and prints.

We all sat down and Li Ah San struck a small gong by the fireplace. In came a man. He was Chinese, and his dress was half European, half Eastern. He held one hand in the other in front of him as if shaking hands with himself, and bowed. Li said something in Chinese to him and he went out and returned in a few minutes with coffee served in small cups that were inlaid with gilt.

About half an hour later there was a knock at the door and the servant who had brought us the coffee ushered in three Chinese, all older than either of our companions. An introduction was made and then the men sat down to play fan-tan.

It was no thrill for us girls to sit and watch a group of Chinese men playing fan-tan with faces as changeless as if they were made of china. We did not know that Li Ah San was doing us the supreme honor of permitting us to watch him and his friends in their holy and sacred hour of gambling. A Chinese will tell you that he holds his parents, ancestors and gods above all, but he is mistaken—he reveres gambling highest. No Chinese woman is ever admitted to that holy of holies, the gambling room, but some white women are and after marriage this great distinction was often accorded me.

One thing did impress me. I saw that Li Ah San was losing so many little white ivory chips that I estimated he had parted with several hundred dollars in the course of the hour. In my poverty I could not imagine how anyone could lose like that without weeping tears of agony and I wondered if the Chinese is equally repressed in all emotions, for instance love. He is. Showing emotion is considered a weakness, discreditable but to a certain extent pardonable in women and children but a disgrace in men. As a matter of fact Chinese women and children are almost as stoical as the men.

If a white girl marries a Chinese she must give up, forever, the luxury of "making scenes." Just one fit of hysterics and her husband will despise her. She has "lost face." It sounds so outrageous to take away a wife's two best weapons, her sharp tongue and her tears. Yet I believe they are bad weapons. They win skirmishes for her but they end by losing her husband's love.

Just as we had become convinced that wickedness was more boresome than going to church, our escorts excused themselves from the others and joined us. We lost no time in announcing that we wanted to see opium and cocaine taking and not only see it but do it. Li offered a compromise.

"Cocaine is bad," he said. "If you want to try the pipe, all right, but not here. I would rather your first experience should be in the West End among your own kind. I have arranged to take you to the apartment of Miss Carleton, an actress we know, very pretty and rising in her profession but fond of chandu (opium)."

We agreed and soon were at the apartment of Billie Carleton, in Long Acre. The beauty who was later to become world-known received us in her most charming manner. One look at her lovely face removed my last fears of trying the drug "just once." Certainly it had not hurt her at all.

Miss Carleton led us into her large living room from which most of the furniture had been removed. Along the walls were divans and the floor was covered with mattresses. On the divans were stretched two women and on the mattresses four men, one of whom I recognized as an eminent actor. He is still eminent but rarely seen on the stage. In the centre of the room, squatting before a bowl, a small box, an alcohol lamp and a pair of tweezers was a man who appeared to be an Eurasian. He was the "cook," the expert who prepares the opium for the smokers.

There were no introductions. It is not good form to break into the reveries of the smokers, and let me say that they are day-dreams, for the habitual pipe-addict rarely goes to sleep at such times. Two people may recline through an entire night side by side and never exchange a word or they may converse, according as the spirit or rather the drug moves them. My friend Joan and I took our places on a mattress and watched.

We saw the cook take a little round ball of darkish substance from the box and, in the tweezers, slowly and carefully heat it in the flame of the lamp. When it seemed "cooked" to his expert eye, he took the pipe from one of the men, forced the little ball down into the bowl, handed the pipe to another man and lighted it from him. At once arose those half-bitter, half-sweet fumes which later became so familiar that their absence was more noticeable to my nostrils than their presence.

Miss Carleton took her own place on a divan again and she handed her pipe to the cook to be refilled. I noticed that the cook, on receiving the pipe, carefully knocked out some ash that was at the bottom and when he handed the pipe again to Miss Carleton, he had mixed up the ash and the freshly cooked opium. This mixture is called "Yen-chi," and by regular addicts of the pipe it is much preferred to the fresh opium alone. When one gets to have the "Yin Yin"—the habit or craving for opium—one becomes a connoisseur as people do about wines.

The Chinese rarely smokes the purest grade of opium, known as "Persian Best" which costs in England the equivalent of about $200 a pound but prefers the cheaper ones which retail at $20 to $60 per pound. Cheap opium has to be strained through a piece of fine muslin at the time it is cooked. Only the unskilled white person is foolish enough to pay the difference to gain little more than the saving of a moment's bother.

At big parties such as this it is customary to have one pipe for several people, and presently it came my turn to smoke. Li Ah San advised in a low voice:

"Puff as you would a cigarette and then inhale the smoke gently."

I did as Li Ah San told me and I choked slightly. I felt the giddiness one does when one first starts smoking tobacco and inhaling as I passed on the pipe.

Then it came round again, and once more I inhaled. I did not like it. No one does—at first. But I had gone so far and I was determined to try it to the end. The end was a disastrous one. I had to stagger to my feet, and with my head aching and "muzzy" I went off to another room and was violently sick. I lay down on Billie Carleton's bed, and must have dozed off, for I suddenly found Miss Carleton and Li Ah San standing by my side and it was two hours later than it had been when I left the room where the party had been going on.

Joan had had pretty much the same experience. Billie Carleton held a glass of warm milk in her hand.

"Drink this," she said. "It's the best thing when you feel as you do."

I drank the milk and a quarter of an hour later we had got a taxi and Joan and I were back in our flat. We went to bed without delay and I awoke eight hours later with a splitting headache.

Milk, let me say, is the only thing to give anyone suffering from either an excess of opium or cocaine. Alcohol is the worst thing a person can take. And the great thing is to keep the person moving.

Both of us remembered vividly how sick we had been but we also had a vague and tantalizing recollection of a delightful experience before that. It was because I had forgotten the details of my pipe dream and wished to have them once more without the sickness that I insisted on doing it again and again until it got to be my only form of recreation.

Li took charge of these proceedings at Miss Carleton's flat and later at Limehouse and they cost me nothing, nor did the almost daily dinners to which he invited me. Every woman knows well enough that when a man spends any considerable amount of his time and money on her, his purpose is matrimony or something. Sooner or later he makes his proposition and if it is not accepted, the friendship ceases. The white man nowadays does not waste much time in coming to the point, but the Chinese is always slow-moving and it was I who precipitated things.

I had come to the end of my resources and must give up my flat and return to that kindly boarding house haven which would mean early to bed and no nonsense about Limehouse and Chinese friends. I told Li who promptly offered to loan me as much as I might need, saying that I could repay him when I found work again. When I declined, he looked at me with what was, no doubt, surprise but his face did not show it. For a long time he was silent. At last he said:

"Don't do anything till I see you tomorrow evening."

"Why?" I asked.

"I have an idea," was the only explanation. Next evening he informed me in a matter of fact manner that he had spent the intervening time gambling the house and furniture I had seen and a lot more money against a larger house which included a small grocery store and he had won. That was his idea. He was now in a position to take care of me luxuriously and to educate my little sister in a first class boarding school. Would I marry him? He mentioned as an after-thought that he had loved me for some time.

Fortunately a Chinaman never expects an immediate answer on anything so I told him to give me twenty-four hours. My purpose was to have Joan break the news that I could not think of marrying a Chinese. But I did think about it because I could not bear to go back to the boarding house and I did so want to give sister the proper advantages. There were two other reasons which I would not admit to myself at the time but really turned the scale. Like every normal woman I wanted some husband to provide me with a life of ease and by this time the chandu had taken quite a grip on me and was silently pleading for the man who would provide it.

So my answer was yes. I did not love the man. I was terrified at the thought and braced myself to endure a passionate embrace and shower of kisses. Nothing of the kind happened. He merely said: "All right," and produced floor plans of the new house. Had I been in love with the man I would have thrown him and his plans out of the flat but, under the circumstances, I was relieved and grateful.

Before relating my actual experiences as the bride of a Chinese, behind the scenes of Limehouse, I think I ought to tell what happened to one of the women I saw at that first pipe party. The whole world, of course, knows of poor Billie Carleton's tragic end, the morning after the great Victory Ball. Later I will tell you what my husband said about that mysterious affair.

The other woman of whom I am going to re-

The Sorceress by Oliver Sandys

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

GWEN JERVIS and Nick Linquest have been brought up by their parents, whose country estates join, with the idea that they will eventually marry, as Lord Ensbury, Nick's grandfather, is especially anxious to have them as his heirs at Litchett Manor. On finishing school Gwen and Nick renew their interrupted friendship and come to a tacit understanding, not realising that they are in love with each other already.

Beautiful Carla Roberts, unofficially engaged to Ian Homus, a promising young actor who confuses her beauty with goodness, is endowed with a sinister power which she inherits from her father, an adept in black magic. She can wish harm to anyone standing in the way of her desire and invariably her wish is fulfilled. Her mother is terrified of Carla and of the enormous and aged black cat, Diavolo, which is the girl's constant companion, and between whom there is a strange bond of understanding.

Unknown to Ian, Carla allows Mr. Bastaple—a rich admirer, but not rich enough for Carla—to give her expensive presents. When he begins to annoy her with proposals of marriage, however, she wishes him ill luck and he drops dead. The girl desires a better part in her show, and when the actress who plays it meets with an unexpected accident, Carla calmly volunteers and scores a hit.

Nick goes to London to act as best man for a friend of his, meets Carla, is swept off his feet, and before he knows it they are married. Bertie Hillyard, Nick's handsome half-brother and the family vagabond, breaks the news to Gwen.

Before a week has gone by Nick knows that he has made a mistake in marrying Carla—especially after she openly tells him that they never really loved each other—and in keeping the news from his grandfather. He has Gwen meet Carla so that when the letter telling of his secret marriage reaches Lord Ensbury, she can smooth things over. Carla hates Gwen from the start and Gwen feels a strong repulsion to Carla.

Ian Homus is left a fortune and begs Carla to marry him at once. She accepts a ring from him but stalls him off, fearing that he will harm her if he finds out about her marriage. He finally does and comes to the house to see if it is true. When he learns from Nick that they really are married he commits suicide. The newspapers censure Carla and she loses her part at the theatre.

Lord Ensbury invites Nick to Litchett Manor for a conference.

Carla's emotions are stirred for the first time when she meets Bertie Hillyard, and confident of her power over men, she makes tentative advances to him. At dinner at Lord Ensbury's she overreaches herself when she learns that he considers her an adventuress, has willed the family jewels to Gwen and cut down Nick's allowance.

Carla puts a spell on the old lord and strangely enough Bertie brings word that he has had a painful fall from his horse. She decides to live at the Dower House, which is Nick's, to be near Bertie and spite Lord Ensbury.

Back in town Carla calls on Count Strozzi, a racing driver and old friend of hers.

Under her direction the renovation of the Dower House is completed and they give a dinner, inviting Gwen and Hillyard. Carla unsuccessfully tempts Hillyard and they return to the others and find that Gwen has been taken violently ill.

CHAPTER XX.

Hillyard Gets a Fright.

LOATH as Nick was to believe it, the instant sympathy and concern which Gwen's sudden indisposition caused Carla to exhibit, seemed sincere enough on the face of it. She wanted Gwen to stay the night and to look after her there. But Gwen, although she was feeling strangely and inexplicably ill now, seemed to shrink from Carla, and said that she preferred to go home quickly before she was any worse.

"Oh, but you won't feel worse, dearest," Carla murmured. "Why should you? I expect you must have caught a chill. That does bring on sudden pains sometimes, and they go just as quickly. If only you'd let me put you to bed and tuck you up with some nice hot water bottles!"

"I'd rather go home, thank you," Gwen declined again.

Ill as she was, she felt for some curious reason that was unexplainable then that she could not bear Carla's personal ministrations to herself. She wanted to lie down and get better—or die, if the pains continued. She had never experienced a seizure like this in the whole of her healthy life.

Nick brought the car round in a very few minutes and Carla and Hillyard helped her in.

Hillyard seemed quite as worried as Nick by Gwen's illness.

"What an extraordinary thing!" he said, returning with his hostess to the drawing room. "She was looking absolutely in the pink at dinner. I hope the old doctor won't be long getting round to her place."

Carla made a bee-line for the chocolates, took a sweet herself, and proffered the box to Hillyard.

"Pallissier's! Now I shall be greedy!" he said.

"Do! Take three or four. I love sweets, too!"

Hillyard needed no pressing. He helped himself to half a dozen chocolates like a schoolboy.

"Thanks awfully. I'll sustain myself with these on the way home. I ought to be getting along now."

She looked at the clock.

"Oh, but why? It's quite early. My party seems to have petered out. It's not eleven yet. Do wait till Nick comes back."

But Hillyard was wary now.

"Thanks all the same, I must toddle off," he reiterated. "I get up early these days—a lot of work on hand—yes, truly. I've got three letters to type before midday; and as I make a deuce of a lot of mistakes, hitting on the wrong keys, I generally have to do 'em over again and again. That's the equivalent of nine letters by the time I've finished! I tell you, no one realizes what an indefatigable toiler I am! So good night, Carla. Thanks for an awfully pleasant evening and a top-hole dinner. There's only one thing that spoiled it—poor little Gwen crocking up. I do hope she'll be all right in the morning," he added anxiously. "I shall ring up or call round there first thing."

"I should," said Carla. "You'll find it was nothing at all. She probably wanted to draw attention to herself. Single girls with unrequited love affairs often get hysterical like that."

The acerbity in her tone, in vivid contrast to her sympathetic attitude in front of Gwen, struck Hillyard as rather odd.

"Don't you like Gwen?" he asked wonderingly. "A few minutes ago you seemed as worried over her as if she were your own sister."

"Did I? Oh, I was merely polite. I couldn't openly disbelieve her, could I? I knew there was nothing wrong with her really. I dare say she's a far better actress than I am when she wants to be," Carla replied. "All the same, if she is ill I hope she'll get over it quickly," she added.

There was a deadly double meaning to her words which Hillyard did not detect.

She gave him her hand, letting it lie in his.

"Good night," she murmured. "Dream of me! Dream—that you are no relation of Nick's for once! Dream true!"

"What is dreaming true?" he asked.

'My dear, I'm so relieved and pleased to see you better!" Said Carla, Stepping Suddenly From Behind a Tree.

"Oh, a sort of spell. You try it. You lie on your back with your hands behind your head and your feet crossed, and go to sleep thinking of a special person. That same person will come to you in your dreams!"

"I never dream at all. I sleep like a top," Hillyard told her. "Don't you?"

"Not very much. I sleep in the afternoon, like my cat. Leave your window open at the bottom," she said.

Again he was struck by the oddness of her direction.

"I always do. But why?"

She laughed.

"To let the lovely night air in, of course, silly! Good night again!"

When Hillyard had gone Carla did not wait up any longer. With her box of chocolates and a novel she returned to her black and white bedroom and disrobed.

And now she was all of a piece with the color scheme of her room, in a black chiffon nightgown, through which her limbs gleamed palely, like statuary seen through a dusky veil.

She brushed her wonderful hair, and read her book composedly until nearly midnight, when there was a knock at the door and Nick came in.

"I saw a light under your door," he said, "so I thought you might be waiting up to hear how I left Gwen. She's better—thank heaven!"

Carla closed her book. A very close observer might have seen a look of disappointment cross her face.

"What was the matter?" she said carelessly.

"Dr. Borden said it looked like an acute attack of gastritis. It had nearly passed off when he arrived because her mother had an idea she might have eaten something to disagree with her, and administered the old-fashioned remedy."

"What was that?" Carla spoke sharply.

"An emetic—salt and water."

"And she was better after that?"

"Much better. She had quite settled down when I left. Her pulse was normal, too, and the doctor said he was sure she will be more or less all right in the morning. All the same, I can't help wishing it hadn't happened after a meal here, because it must have been something she had tonight."

Suddenly Carla's eyes blazed.

"How dare you say that! What next will you dream of!" she flared up. "I cooked practically the whole of the dinner myself. We all had the same! We're quite all right. Everything was perfectly fresh. Even the peaches came out of a bottle and not a tin! I think you must be out of your senses to hint she was food-poisoned at our house! You'll be saying I did it on purpose next!"

Nick was surprised at the violence of her temper. He had never seen Carla so disturbed before.

"Don't be so utterly ridiculous," he answered temperately. "Of course I know you were bothered about her illness like we all were. I was only trying to think what could have set up the trouble. Did she eat anything else?"

"Salted almonds—in the dish by her side. She and Bertie were dipping into those all through dinner. And she had two chocolates afterwards—out of this very box. Here they are. There's only one left. I've eaten the rest, and I'm all alive! And Bertie took six! You'd better go and see if he's dead or dying tomorrow morning!"

Nick could smile now that he knew Gwen's illness was no longer of a serious nature. He was so relieved that he even lingered to tranquilize Carla.

"Don't be cross," he said peaceably. "You must have put too much pepper in your dishes, don't you think, judging by the way you flared up, all for nothing? Don't get temperamental, Carla. Calmness suits you best."

Calmness and inscrutability descended upon her again like a mask, like a veil.

"Oh, I didn't mean to be ratty," she said. "Go to bed now, Nick, please. I want to get to sleep. It's frightfully late."

Hillyard's last thoughts before he dropped into oblivion that night were not of Carla, but of Gwen. In spite of the former's expressed opinion that Gwen's indisposition was only transitory and hysterical in its origin, he himself thought otherwise. She had looked dreadfully ill, and he was most concerned because in his own way Hillyard was deeply fond of Gwen—fonder of her indeed than he had at first realized; for of late, and since Nick's marriage, a curious and closer friendship, entirely platonic on Gwen's side but not quite so with Hillyard, had sprung up between them. Indeed, Hillyard's affection for Gwen was the nearest thing to real love that had ever touched his somewhat careless life.

Ordinarily speaking, he would never have dreamt of or aspired to seek Gwen as a wife. Even now, in his thoughts of her there was an almost reverent tenderness, a great humility tinged with a certain wistfulness and a faint hope.

As he walked home through the darkness, consuming Carla's chocolates, he had made up his mind to a course of action he would never have dreamed of, say, a little over a month ago. When Gwen was better, and given the opportunity, he was going to ask her to marry him, to help him to make his life a more creditable affair and to give him the right as well to try and make her happy. The motives that prompted him were various and chaotic. He cared for her as much as it was possible for a man of his butterfly temperament to care for a girl.

Over and above that there was the feeling that if Gwen would have him he would be safe from all other temptations which might befall him—temptations varied and insidious, such as are constantly put in the way of men with the beguiling and entirely natural charm of looks and manners which he possessed and exercised, generally unconsciously, upon almost every woman he chanced to meet. Usually he did not resist the lure of bright eyes and smiling lips; but in Carla's eyes, although he had seen the invitation, he was in no mind to yield to it. Rather, he wanted to avoid her, to place himself definitely and avowedly out of her way, to cut himself off from her before she fastened upon him.

Nick's wife . . . why, the bare idea was unthinkable and made him feel ashamed . . .

He took no pleasure in dwelling upon the thought of Carla even in the most secret recesses of his mind; and thus resolving, he banished all thought of their recent encounter and so drifted into unconsciousness thinking of Gwen.

Thinking of Gwen, it was not surprising that he should dream of her, too. He dreamt that he was out riding with her across a wide expanse of heather and scrub in the hot sunshine, with the smell of gorse and moorland in their nostrils, and the clean fresh wind blowing in their faces. Suddenly Gwen's mount swerved violently, almost unseating her.

"Oh, look!" she cried. "There's a snake!"

In his dream, Hillyard dismounted just in time to see the reptile gliding off through the heather.

"It's an adder! I'd better kill it," he called back; but as he was about to strike at the head, he saw that the thing had the miniature and malignant head of a woman, and that the face was Carla's. He was so astonished that he let the creature go, and instantly the dream changed . . .

He was looking over the Dower House with Carla once more. She was showing him her macabre black and white bedroom, and again he was assailed—but in an intensified degree, as is the manner of dreams—by the conviction that there was a cat somewhere very close at hand.

"Is there a cat in the room?" he said, and felt his spine prickling as he spoke. . . .

The dream did not go on. Quite suddenly he awoke, with the eerie sensation of a feline creature's nearness full upon him, and groped for the matches on the candlestick besides his bed. His hand shot out past his pillow, and touched—fur.

Hillyard's hair almost stood on end. If this were a dream still, it was awful. Then mercifully he found the matches and lit the candle. There, sure enough, by his very pillow, making queer, rattling noises in its diabolic throat, indicative of feline love and contentment, was Carla's gigantic cat—or else a fellow to it. It was the dead image of Carla's cat, anyway—huge and black and baleful; or baleful, at least, in his eyes, because he had such a horror of the whole tribe.

He leaped out of bed.

"You—great brute! How on earth did you get in? By the window, I suppose. Then I wish you'd clear out the same way!"

He patted the sill invitingly.

"Come on! Out you go!"

Any man other than a confirmed cat-hater would have picked up the beast and put it out, but Hillyard was literally incapable of handling a cat. The bare idea made him creep and sweat. Especially that cat . . . purring and looking so pleased.

It was right in the middle of his bed now, in the warm open space where his body had been resting, kneading the mattress with its claws—"making bread," as some people have it—preparatory to settling down.

Evidently the brute expected to share his slumbers with him, or else it was indifferent as to whether he slumbered any more at all.

"Well, of all the cool cheek!" Hillyard ejaculated. "I suppose I'll have to throw something at you then!"

He picked up his slipper; but as he did so the cat paused in its kneading operation, and he became horribly afraid that, in an excess of affection, the creature might bound to his bare feet and wind itself in and about, purring and rubbing, seeking for caresses in the manner of its tribe.

Hillyard let the slipper fall and addressed the animal as though it had been human. He reached for his dressing gown and flung it on.

"Oh, very well! If you want the whole bed, you can have it!" he muttered. "It's a warm night. I'm going to sleep on the sofa downstairs!"

He left the room, quickly closing the door. He shut the door of the sitting room tight as well and closed the window, all but a tiny space sufficient to admit air but not a cat.

The sofa was hard and bumpy, but he slept after a while soundly, until the morning, and did not wake till his surprised landlady invaded the room with dustpan, brushes and broom.

"Oh, my gracious, Mr. Hillyard!" she exclaimed. "You did give me a turn, findin' a man on the sofa, and never dreamin' it was you! I thought I heard you come in last night and go up to bed like a Christian!"

Hillyard nodded and sat up. His hair was all rumpled and he looked sleepily handsome.

"So I did, Mrs. Bonham; but I woke in the middle of the night, and there was a cat in my room—a great brute on my pillow! It finished up in my bed. I've a horror of the creatures, so I came down here!"

"Well, I never, sir! And you been through the thick and thin of the war with all them crosses and medals for bravery and facin' the guns! Shall I go and see if the cat's still there, sir, and turn it out if I find it?"

"Yes, do, there's a good soul!" Hillyard entreated.

Mrs. Bonham departed, returning a moment or two later.

"The bed's quite empty, sir," she intimated, "and not a sign of the cat. I'll bring you your mornin' cup o' tea."

CHAPTER XXI.

A Proposal.

GWEN'S first caller that morning was Nick. He rode over before she was down, and, reassured by her mother that she was almost herself again, did not accept the former's invitation to remain to breakfast, and returned home. Carla, he was well aware, would have had some ribald remark to make had he stayed, and he preferred not to run the gauntlet of her satire at Gwen's expense.

Following upon Nick, Hillyard, too, put in an appearance, to inquire after the invalid shortly after eleven the same morning, and was immensely pleased to see his little friend looking almost normal again, although a trifle paler than usual.

"Come into the garden," Gwen invited him. "I was just going to pick some flowers for the house. Isn't it a beautiful day? Nick was round to inquire how I was while I was still asleep; and now you've come! I shall begin to think I'm a very important person and put on frills!"

"So you are important to all of us," Hillyard said. "I tell you, I felt positively windy about you last night when you were looking so frightfully seedy. I'm tremendously glad you're better."

He took her flower basket from her and followed her out into the rose garden.

"The doctor says I must have had an acute attack of indigestion," she told him. "Anyway, I'm perfectly fit today, and I hope it will never come again, whatever it was, because it was most unpleasant. I was frightfully thirsty the whole of the night, and I could still go on drinking today, but that's the only symptom I've got, except that I don't feel quite as energetic as usual. It all came on so suddenly. I wish it hadn't happened at Carla's," she added. "One feels such a nuisance and so stupid, getting ill like that at a dinner-party."

"I don't think it could have been anything you ate; do you?" debated Hillyard.

"I don't think so either. But I had two chocolates, and they had such a funny after-taste. They were made of almondy stuff inside, and it was a little bitter. Perhaps they didn't agree with me. Do you remember reading in the papers a long

Under water for thirty minutes

.... but the Watch Ticked on!

BREAKING through the underbrush, the bank president and his friend came to the water's edge. Sun on the lake dazzled their eyes, and their nostrils responded to the smell of the pungent pines. The financier adjusted rod and reel . . . cast . . . and felt his line pull taut. Lured by the impelling tug, he stepped right into the water. He waded deep, and deeper . . . till only shoulders and head remained dry. A tussle, and he emerged with a great black bass. In the next half-hour this was repeated five times, till his catch was six fish and his clothing so soaked it was ruined.

Weeks later Mr. ———* wrote us: "It was then I remembered my watch. Spots marred the face, but I shook it. To my utter amazement, it ticked—regularly, unfalteringly! Under water for thirty minutes, my Ingersoll was ready to tell me the time. And I want you to know that's just what it's doing. On all my sports excursions (far more frequent than they should be!) it is continuing to serve me as accurately and dependably as though it had never caught fish!"

Letters like Mr. ———'s come to us each day of the year. Thousands of testimonials as striking bulk in our files. From outposts in the frigid Arctic we have heard of Ingersoll Radiolites that record time unfailingly through the silent, frozen nights. From the sweltering heat of jungles has come word of Ingersolls that serve their owners faithfully under trying tropic conditions. People who live just ordinary lives write us, too, the very same thing: "Ingersoll stands up. It's the most serviceable watch to carry."

Doubtless you will not, like our banker, immerse your Ingersoll in water. We could not guarantee what would happen and we do not recommend it. Probably you will not ask of it what explorers and hunters ask of theirs. But it is nevertheless comforting to know that within its mechanism nestles the same degree of dependability that makes it the chosen watch for rigorous expeditions . . . that makes it stand up under hardy conditions and tests of unusual severity.

Because of Ingersoll Service you must have satisfaction

The keen sense of responsibility of the Ingersoll Company toward its product originated Ingersoll Service. Ingersoll watches are guaranteed to be absolutely free from mechanical defects. But should you damage your Ingersoll, send it direct to our Service Department, Waterbury, Conn. There at our factory we will find out what is wrong and either repair it for you, or send you a new watch of the same model, at unusually moderate cost.

Join the ranks of sensible people who have bought themselves Ingersolls—and in so doing, procured not merely a watch, but dependable time service.

VACATION DAYS

When happiness romps through Ingersoll hours

For sports and outdoor use, Ingersoll is the ideal watch to carry

A stance and a swing, and a long drive down toward the green. A perfect approach with the mashie, a putt—and a birdie in three. Yesterday's score vastly bettered, a new record yet to be smashed. Ingersoll golfers are legion. For men realize how suited to the links are these sturdy, dependable watches.

Sizzling, crisping bacon—keening the appetite—rising in aroma to the tips of the spreading trees. Quietly competent, this little Camp-Fire Girl browns it to a turn, as she keeps her eye on Ingersoll time to know when out of the wood-ash to pull those mealy potatoes.

White balls flying over the net. Slim figures covering the court with agility — anticipating each play to be made. A won set, a lost set—the third decisive. Young muscles are hardening, young bodies exulting. And time's slipping by—winging through Ingersoll hours.

Nosing up hills, swinging 'round curves, speeding down the straight white stretch. Through vacation lands the country over, women have their hands on the wheel and their foot on the gas. Sun shines, engines purr—and Ingersoll time marks minutes on the glad and blithesome way

Salt spray in the face, and fresh breeze blowing! Many a lithesome skipper depends on an Ingersoll wrist watch when she embarks on a nautical spree. Through sparkling afternoons, Ingersoll time is her guide till she cries, "Back to the harbor. Hard 'o lee!"

Scouts are trained to do things right. In woodlore, crafts and mechanics their standards are high. As to watches they are very exacting. And strapped to the wrist, or nestling in the pocket of many a keen Boy Scout is a friendly and dependable Ingersoll timepiece.

"I answaire to ze summons!" Said Leon, Drawing Himself Up. "Nevaire, nevaire has Leon gone back on his word!"

CHAPTER XXXII.

The Last Trick.

LEON, the gallant chef of the Barque Haven Arms, came striding through the door. This was no ordinary individual of white cap and jacket, brandishing a long-handled fork or a ladle, but a polished, talented French gentleman in a braided morning coat with boutonniere in his lapel and a superb pair of waxed mustaches.

He clicked his heels and made a bow worthy of a drawing-room.

"Monsieur Quarrendaire! Mademoiselle Smeeth! A votre service!"

"It was the young lady who called you and not myself, Leon. I haven't any idea what she wants but make yourself at home. We're all friends here."

Georgette sent one of her smiles at Leon who met it with another splendid bow. Whereupon he straightened and gave his moustache a magnificent twist. Confidence and pride seemed to radiate from him this morning.

"Mademoiselle Smeeth! I await at ze door as you ask! From ze quartaire of twelve to now! I make ze signal wiz ze handkerchief as we agree. I answaire to ze summons!" said Leon, drawing himself up. "Nevaire, nevaire has Leon gone back on his word!"

"I knew you'd be there," said the girl. "But the rest of it? It's finished, really?"

Leon's head went up and his eyes gleamed brightly. "It is accomplished! I am ze fortunate man since eleven o'clock!"

"Might I inquire," interrupted the frigid voice of Mr. Ethan Hulbert, "what this has to do with the business in hand? I do not wish to intrude upon a friendly visit but I fail to see its bearing upon this meeting."

"Everything!" cried the girl. "I've just declared that the Barque Haven Arms goes to Stephen Quarrendar and not to Mary Smith, of Denver, haven't I? And I have to prove it, don't I?"

"I should like you to do so."

"And so should I," said Quardendar swiftly. Mary Jane Devens Smith might be an astonishingly versatile adversary but all she could do now would be to delay a final settlement of affairs for a few moments by opposing wild declarations to the verdict of Mr. Ethan Hulbert. It would be pronounced again once this diversion was over and that would be the end. The Barque Haven Arms was hers.

"I have ze most important announcement to make! Ze announcement of ze world-shaking magnificence! Ze announcement zat has changed my life forevaire! Monsieur Quarrendaire!" The waxed moustaches rose as Leon expanded his chest and flung both arms out in the gesture of one about to embrace the roomful. "I have ze pleasiaire to announce zat I have contract an alliance ze most honorable wiz ze house-keepaire!"

"What's that?" burst from Quarrendar in amazement. "You say you've married the housekeeper?"

"Ze lady of ze New England familee! Her ancestaires zey pursue ze big fish—ze whales—for generations. Ze ancestaires of Leon zey are ze sailors, too. For two years have I admire her—oh, so nobly—from ze distance. Zen come ze love songs—tendaire, not to be resisted by ze beating heart—from ze orchestraire in ze dining-room. Luncheon and dinnaire zey sing to ze soul of Leon! Behold ze grandest passion of all arrive! It is fanned to ze flame! I burn! I die! I make ze proposal ze most honorable for ze hand of ze widow, Mrs. Grimes, la belle housekeepaire. And zen, and zen—"

Leon whirled about and flung his waving hand at Mary Jane Devens Smith.

"It is ze hat so chic from ze shop of Mademoiselle zat turn ze treeck. I present ze chapeau to ze lady and it melt her heart! She love Leon as he love her! Zis morning at 11 o'clock we are marry in ze little white church in ze village!"

Quarrendar held out his hand. "I congratulate you, Leon. That's great news."

"It is ze no news at all! Not yet! Non! Non! Non! I tell ze beautiful Mademoiselle Smeeth ze grand passion when I am buying ze chic hat. She has ze sympathetic eye. She too confide in me ze incredible tale. She inform Leon zat unless zere are three of ze love matches in ze hotel Monsieur Quarrandaire will go away and nevaire return—nevaire! He will lose ze magnificent establishment. Behold we plan, we plot togethaire!"

So Mary Jane Devens Smith had flung another romance into the struggle at the last moment. She was smiling now, a finger to the corner of her lips. Under the glove on that small hand there would be a thin gold band and probably a priceless solitaire. He didn't have to see them to know that they were there.

"It's good of you to tell me this, Leon. But one match—that is to say yours—won't make a difference at this stage. I've lost the hotel, and I'm leaving it today for good but you needn't worry about that. Not that I don't appreciate your trying to help me."

"Nevaire, nevaire have I known such an employaire!"

"Yes—I know—very kind—"

"Ze three affairs of love or Monsieur Quarrendaire—pouf!—he is depart! I work no more for him—my friend."

"Yes—oh, yes. But two more romances aren't here, Leon. We'll call it the will of fate."

"Ze will of fate! Bah! Zat for ze will of fate!" The short figure in the braided morning coat was beginning to bound about. "Monsieur Quarrendaire! Nevaire shall you leave ze Barque Haven Arms! Two ozzaire couples zey get married also zis morning!"

"Two other couples!" Quarrendar shouted. "They did what?"

"All Summaire has ze rascal Albert my assistant cast ze sheep's eyes at ze head chambermaid. Ze worthless Hyacinthe, ze bus boy, I catch him writing ze poetry to ze little waitress wiz ze red bow and ze small waist. Sacre milles des cordons bleus! I talk wiz Mademoiselle Smeeth! We plot, we plan! She give to Leon ze remarkable idea! I tell ze rascal Albert I ruin his life, I discharge him wizout ze reference if he do not marry ze chambermaid. I take ze worthless Hyacinthe by ze back of ze neck and I kick him into ze state of matrimony wiz ze petite. He is my nephew and I know what is good for him. Ze petite and ze worthless Hyacinthe zey are married wiz me an hour ago! It is ze ceremony of ze triple kind! Ze three romances are arrived! Leon has saved ze hotel for his employaire!"

"And you did this!" Wildly Quarrendar directed the words at Mary Jane Devens Smith, aloft on her up-ended trunk like a small queen.

"Yes, Stephen. All by myself just before I left the hotel. And I called up Leon on the telephone yesterday to make sure that the three of them were going to be married this morning."

A mirthful, delicious look came into her eyes.

"Now—now—now who wins, Stephen?"

"Ze Barque Haven Arms it belong to Monsieur Quarrendaire! Nevaire, nevaire have I seen such—"

"No!" shouted Quarrendar. He found himself actually pounding with his fist on the table under the nose of a startled man of law. "No! No! No! Mr. Hulbert, these matches can't count! They are not those of guests in the hotel!"

"There was nothing said in your Great-uncle Quarrendar's will about restricting the required romances to the guests," declared Mr. Hulbert stiffly. "In no way can its clauses be construed as barring these matches. The staff which your great-uncle has maintained here for years all come from the best old New England native stock. I know the background of Leon, which includes his nephew."

"And now I go—I go to ze happy bride! Monsieur Quarrendaire! Ze staff salute you! Nevaire, nevaire—"

The last words of the gallant Leon drifted in from the corridor outside, a trifle muffled by distance. Mr. Ethan Hulbert stirred, tapped the table and made his pronouncement with the note of irrevocable authority.

"I now declare the Barque Haven Arms to be yours, Mr. Quarrendar. This is final. You have won it fairly and well. The title deeds will be placed in your hands immediately."

"I'll break the will! I'll sue to have it set aside!

"I didn't want it for myself," muttered a haggard young man. "I wanted to give it to Mary Smith over yonder. She deserves it for the fight she put up, and—and for other reasons."

"A lawyer is always prepared to come into contact with the oddities of human nature," remarked Mr. Ethan Hulbert, eyeing Quarrendar as though he were some totally new specimen. "But this is the strangest case of a legatee which I have encountered in some time. You have been trying to lose the hotel yourself so that Miss Mary Smith might win it. To what end might I inquire?"

"I'm in love with her," fell from Quarrendar tiredly. Then he straightened in utter horror. He had never meant to say it aloud. He had betrayed himself utterly in the presence of her husband. Before witnesses he had declared himself forever the lover of another man's wife.

"I'm sorry," he said in a low voice. "You all heard me of course. I didn't mean it to come out but somehow it did. You must think me an absolute rotter. I've made an awful mess of things here anyhow. So I'll go."

He held out his hand to Georgette and found her smiling mistily in sympathy. He held out his hand to young Mr. Peter Van Dyckman, feeling that its offer should be scornfully refused, and found it in a friendly clasp. He was a sportsman. He nodded to Mr. Hulbert and took a few weary steps that brought him up to Mary Jane Devens Smith on the top of her trunk.

"I've been the complete idiot, Jane. You've beaten me in the end as you were bound to. I'll take the Barque Haven Arms as a gift from you."

"With thanks, Stephen?"

"With thanks. Even if it doesn't mean anything to me now. You know how much I wanted you to have it. Well—that's over and done with. You're happy. That's what counts, after all. I won't see you ever again. Good-by, Mary Jane Smith. Good-by and congratulations, Mrs. Peter Van Dyckman, Junior."

"Ha! ha! ha!" laughed that youthful millionaire. "This is good!"

Fiercely through a red haze Stephen Quarrendar glared at his tormentor. The red haze faded and black despair took its place. He took a slim gloved hand in his.

"Good-by, Jane."

The violet eyes were soft and infinitely tender. He would always think of her as she looked at this last moment.

"Good-by, Stephen."

"I'll carry a bit of you in my heart, Jane, wherever I go," he said softly. "There's nothing that can take away memories. I'll always remember your eyes and your smile and your lips and the way you did your hair. We've been enemies all the time we've known each other but that couldn't be helped."

"No," she murmured. Her face was aglow.

"So—well—that's all. It's the end for me and the beginning for you. Good-by, Jane. I'll never forget you."

"Good-by, Stephen," she said for the second time.

He faced about abruptly as another burst of laughter came from Peter Van Dyckman. It was unendurable.

"I ought to apologize to you, I suppose," he shot out, "for speaking to your wife in private in your presence but I don't intend to. What I said was strictly between ourselves. But you needn't worry that I shall see her again in this world."

"Ha! ha! ha!" roared the scion of wealth. "Blessed if I don't tell him myself. Somebody has to. That's not my wife."

"What do you mean?"

"That's not Mary Smith."

Through a reeling haze Stephen Quarrendar glimpsed only one subject that seemed substantial, the precise, calm countenance of Mr. Ethan Hulbert, pillar of the law.

"What did I hear?" he gasped at him. "What did this man just say?"

"He informed you, Mr. Quarrendar, that the young lady sitting on the trunk is not Mrs. Peter Van Dyckman, Jr. Also that she is not or ever has been Miss Mary Smith of Denver, Colorado. Both of his statements are correct."

"Then who—who—who is Mary Smith?"

"I am." The delightful Georgette spoke clearly. "I'm Mary Smith of Denver." She slipped her arm affectionately within that of young Mr. Van Dyckman. "But I've changed my name since Peter and I were married yesterday."

"And who—who—who is—"

The gayest, most thrilling voice he had ever heard or ever would hear answered that broken question.

"I'm Jane Devens. Just Jane Devens, Mary Smith's partner. She's Mary Anne Georgette Smith if you want all the information."

"I can vouch for the truth of Miss Devens' remarks." The incisive tones of Mr. Hulbert cut through the mad mental turmoil in which a young man felt himself struggling. "Miss Devens came to my office in New York last June only a few moments after you yourself, Mr. Quarrendar, had taken your leave. Miss Smith had had forwarded to her from Denver my notification regarding a mention of herself in the will of your Great-uncle Quarrendar and sent Miss Devens to me as her representative in order to be informed what it might be about."

"Georgette," murmured a delightful voice, "was sailing the next night for Paris. She had a million things to do that day."

"The following morning Miss Mary Smith appeared in person," went on Mr. Hulbert carefully. "Miss Devens had transmitted to her the nature of the bequest. Miss Mary Smith and myself had a brief talk. She declared that you had just invited her partner, Miss Jane Devens, to set up a shop in the Barque Haven Arms and inquired if there was any reason why Miss Devens should not act on her behalf as she saw fit during her stay. There was no reason why Miss Smith should not have an agent on the premises. The terms of the will did not forbid competition by the second legatee."

"I wanted a Summer hotel then," said Georgette. "Later—" she flashed a glance at Peter Van Dyckman—"I didn't."

"Miss Devens was allowed a free hand in all her actions. It is not my province to inquire into what she did or did not do at Barque Haven this Summer for the protection of Miss Mary Smith's interests. Nothing illegal was contemplated and Mr. Quarrendar, of course, was not notified. It is not customary for a lawyer to betray the confidence of a client. Especially—" he made a brief nod towards Georgette—"such a charming one. Mr. Quarrendar appears to have mistaken Miss Jane Devens for Miss Mary Smith, and so do other persons in this hotel. I do not propose to go into the causes underlying that matter, which is extraneous. Is the situation clear to you now, Mr. Quarrendar?"

"Absolutely," he muttered. "It's as clear as—as—an old-fashioned Cape fog after a week of rain."

Mr. Ethan Hulbert thrust his thin gold watch back into his pocket, picked up the last will and testament of Great-uncle Homer Quarrendar and proceeded sedately through the door. Already an eminent representative of the law had been kept from his luncheon for an appalling length of time.

"It's no place for us either," laughed Georgette. "Come along, Peter. Something tells me the air will be blue with Stephen's words in about a minute. It was a low trick we played on you, wasn't it? But I never dreamed Jane could be such a horrifyingly wicked little person."

"She is," acknowledged Quarrendar grimly. "She ought to get a life sentence.

"You're—you're taking Jane along with you?"

"Heavens, no!" remarked the bride. "She stays here to stand her punishment."

"Devil!" Jane flung at her.

"Angel darling," said young Mrs. Peter Van Dyckman and kissed her. "Good-by, people. See that she gets just what she deserves, Stephen."

"Georgette," called Jane, "you can put your rings back on now. I'm through acting."

They were alone. No words were spoken for a long time.

"Do I have to begin the argument, Stephen?" said an eloquent little voice presently. "You know I haven't any defense at all.

"I couldn't very well tell you I wasn't Mary Smith until the game was over and the hotel was yours, could I? Besides you were the most conceited, egotistical, stubborn, absurd, crazy, impulsive, scatter-brained . . ."

"That's quite enough. I'll do the talking."

. . . "Jumper at conclusions I ever saw. You needed a lesson. You asked me up here yourself. I met Georgette at luncheon that day after seeing Mr. Hulbert and she told me if I had the chance to run up to the Barque Haven Arms and see what it and you were like. Peter came in just as we were finishing and walked up to the shop with me. Then you appeared with your wild invitation and I couldn't resist."

The imp of mischief was dancing frankly now in her eyes. "I guess I'm made that way. Georgette and I talked it over that night and she went down to the lawyer's in the morning before she sailed. That cablegram you read meant that Peter had put over his engagement with Georgette and I heard from her the very next day, telling me she was through with the hotel. Peter was following her aboard to make up her mind for her when he got through with his business in London and Berlin. Was it my fault you went jumping at some more conclusions and thought he meant me? Stephen, how did you hurt your arm?"

It was the first time that Miss Jane Devens had mentioned the member in the silk sling.

"Never mind how I hurt it. Why did you keep up this Mary Smith Van Dyckman play-acting until Peter gave you away?"

"Because!"

"Because what?"

"Oh, just because. That's enough of a reason to satisfy anybody but a conceited, egotistical, stubborn—

"Stephen, I saw you go in the ditch with that car."

"Yes?"

"Then you stood up and waved at me."

"Well?"

"I heard what you called to me too just before you went over the last bit. So did the whole train!"

"It didn't mean anything to you. We're still enemies."

"And I heard what you said right out in front of everybody here in this room not so long ago."

"You've won, Jane. You've given me a hotel that's a goldmine. I'm telling you that for the last time. I suppose I h[illegible] you now."

WHEREVER you go, whatever you do on your vacation this summer, take a good flashlight with you to drive a big, safe lane of light through the dark. Get your Eveready now and be prepared to shut out gloom, to show up danger with a powerful, piercing beam whenever you venture into the night.

Keep an Eveready Flashlight near you when you sleep. Carry one along when you are about after sundown. And when you go boating this summer, be extra-certain there are a couple of good flashlights aboard. They are invaluable when there's engine-trouble, when you take on fuel at night, when you dock in the dark, if you go in for an evening swim.

Have an Eveready Flashlight among the things in your grip when you travel. Keep one in the side pocket of your car when you tour. Nothing clears up a dark, troublesome situation like a handful of handy daylight. Get the flashlight habit.

In addition to satiny black and glistening nickel, Eveready Flashlights are now furnished in special pearl-luster finishes—red, green, blue, old rose, baby blue. There are also exclusive new mechanical features, such as a shock-absorber to protect the lamp-filament. Last but not least, prices are down. Hold out for a genuine Eveready when you buy a flashlight. And keep it full of long-lasting light-power with the best of batteries —Eveready Batteries.

The Sorceress by Oliver Sandys

time back how there was a lot of chocolate supplied to shops that had to be confiscated because there was something wrong with it?"

"I think I do. But these were right, I'm sure. I ate eight altogether, and Carla was fairly tucking in."

"Well, anyway, it's not important." Gwen dismissed the whole matter lightly. "It was only a short attack and soon over. Shall I give you a rosebud for your buttonhole? Here's a darling pink one. Some men look such fops with a buttonhole, but a flower suits you somehow, just as it does a South Sea Islander, only you ought to tuck it behind your ear!"

Hillyard took the bud and thanked her, slipping it into his buttonhole.

"Rosebuds always remind me of you," he said. "This one's nearly a flower. That's like you, too. Absolutely fragrant and sweet, grown in an English garden. You're the sort of human flower that will never fade in a man's mind either, however many years go by." He gave her an affectionate, side-long glance. "Conversation's a queer thing, isn't it?" he switched off awkwardly. "When you're with a girl—I mean, when I'm with a girl or a woman I don't care two hoots about—witticisms fairly slip off my tongue; but when I'm with you, for instance, I want to express feelings that are really worth while, and I can't get anywhere near the mark at all."

Gwen patted his arm consolingly.

"Never mind, Bertie. I understand. It's a very sweet compliment you've paid me, anyway. Conversation is greatly overrated really. Look how perfectly our best friends, dogs, understand us without a single word, from the moment they belong to us till the sad day when they die. Could anything be more wonderful than that? Understanding isn't expressed in words. It speaks in silences very often."

Hillyard nodded.

"I believe you're right. Still, there are some things that one longs to be able to express, all the same," he said. "For instance I want to say something to you awfully badly, and it's a thing that must be put into words because you'd never guess it otherwise. Let's sit down, and I'll get it off my chest. Here, with our backs to the house under this tree. We can't be seen, can we?"

"No," said Gwen, slightly startled. "But why?"

"Because I'm hoping—I'd give anything in the world—to kiss you. Hold on! I've begun a bit too fast. Putting the cart before the horse, as usual. You see, it's this way, dear. I've played about a lot, fooling around; but I've never proposed to anyone before, and I don't know whether I ought to begin with a kiss or end up with it, or both. Most likely you'll never let me do either." Hillyard took possession of her hand. "Only hear me through, Gwen. I haven't got into my stride yet. Just lately we've been real pals, and, of course, I couldn't help having other thoughts—tender thoughts—about you, simply because you are so sweet and a dear! Originally I wouldn't have dreamt of anything like this, and even now I know I've no real right to aspire to you, because I'm such a harum-scarum chap, but I can promise you loyalty and love and friendship, and I believe we might make an awfully happy marriage—er—if you can ever get used to the idea."

Gwen was on the verge between laughter and tears. Tears were in her eyes, laughter on her lips. Then she turned to Hillyard and he saw the tears and smiles.

"Oh, Bertie dear! But you don't love really! I—I hope you don't, because you mustn't!"

Hillyard was the very soul of candor, even in the matter of this, his first—and very last—proposal.

"I love you just as much as it is possible for me to care for anyone," he said. "I don't say that's anything like as much as a serious-minded man would love you. I'm one of those people who's frittered my heart away, and when a person has gambled recklessly they can't expect to have as much cash in hand as when they started out. In other words, I've lost ideals. The bloom's off me, so to speak. I should have loved you better if I had been twenty-three or thereabouts.

"If you turn me down, I should be lying if I said it would devastate my life, or anything of that kind—it wouldn't please you either, because you're the kind of darling who would far rather I picked up the pieces of my heart and carried on—but if you decided to take me in hand, I do honestly believe I should love you more and more every day and in every way, and be capable of better and better things, simply because you stand to me for all that is loveliest and best. That's the sentimental side of it. There's the material to be thought of. At present I haven't a bean, I know; but I'm of the opinion that if Lord Ensbury could be convinced of my good intentions he'd bless-you-my-children and settle the financial side for us. What's your answer Gwen? Have I taken your breath away? I've nearly lost my own!"

For answer, Gwen slid her hand back into his, and her voice was tremulous.

"Bertie, you're a dear; but I can't. We're just good friends. We must leave it at that. You see . . . I'm not going to marry anybody . . . that's all."

Hillyard turned a discomfited face upon her.

"But is that fair?" he argued. "I mean, think of the race!"

Sheer merriment chased back Gwen's tears.

"Oh, Bertie, you are so funny!" she gurgled. "First you want to make me cry, and now—I'm laughing!"

He pressed her hand.

"I'd rather you laughed than cried, dear," he said genuinely. "Even at me. Won't you think it over and let me know?"

She shook her head.

"I can't, because I know already. My heart tells me it could never be. You see, Bertie, it's the old story. There's some one else."

He nodded. "You mean—Nick?"

He saw her eyes fill up. She nodded mutely.

"Yes. It's no use pretending to you. I've loved Nick ever since I was a little girl. He was my whole world. Well, now that part's over, and I'm not even—in pain about it all; but I've made up my mind that I will never marry a man unless I can care for him as much as Nick, and that's not ever likely—so there's nothing more to say!"

Hillyard sighed. He was not thinking of the race now so much as his own disappointment. And yet he had hardly expected anything else. He had taken his chance, and had not drawn the winning number after all. He was only lucky at cards. . . .

Gwen's hand was still in his, little and so soft.

"Still friends, Bertie?"

He cleared his throat.

"The very best, dear, of course."

There was a pause. Gwen was the first to break it.

"What made you ask me, Bertie?" she said gently. "I've a funny feeling you haven't told me—everything."

Hillyard hesitated.

"You're right about that, too. All I've said was true, but I wanted you for—safety as well. It's difficult to tell you everything, because you're just a girl, which is what makes you—so sweet. I had an idea, a feeling, a conviction, that if there was something between us I should be able to escape from my worst self—a self that is the very devil, dear."

Gwen's clear eyes met his own.

"That's not right either, Bertie. You haven't a worst self. I won't have it. Only a weaker self—and you can fight that if you want to."

For once, Hillyard's fine and careless eyes looked troubled. Then he said:

"I don't think you understand exactly what I'm up against, dear. Principalities and powers perhaps, in the guise of a certain woman. That's what I feel . . ."

Gwen did not follow him. She had no idea of Carla's machinations.

"We can all make ourselves strong—if we ask for strength," she said quietly. "In church or on a hill-top, in the green fields, or by the side of our beds like our mothers taught us."

Hillyard bit his lip. Gwen's allusion took him back to childhood.

He spoke more gravely than was his wont. "Thanks for your good counsel, dear. It hasn't fallen altogether on barren ground. And now, I suppose I'd better be going. I shall be half an hour late at the office, as it is, and I usually come on before scheduled time, because I'm seriously getting to grips with the typewriter these days and mastering the brute." He hesitated. "I say, Gwen, don't bother your head about me or anything I've said, will you? I mean, don't let it disturb you at all." He raised her hand to his lips. "I shan't worry you again. You needn't be afraid of that."

"You haven't worried me now." She smiled back at him reassuringly. "And I hope one day you will meet someone—a really nice girl who will love you altogether—and that you will be ever so happy always."

"Thanks," said Hillyard. "There are so many nice girls about," he added drearily, "all after the same infernal—I mean, eternal—pattern, with Eton crops and short skirts and different shades of silk stockings—three farthings a bunch, tres chic, as they say on the milliners' cards; but not for me. I think I shall remain a gay bachelor until the end of the chapter, after all. Cheerio, my little pal; and tomorrow I hope to see all the usual pink roses blooming in your cheeks. Will you come for a spin in my little bus one afternoon? She's close to the ground, but she can cover the ground all the same."

"Of course I'll come," Gwen accepted. "But I'm not going to keep you any longer now, or you'll be very, very late."

Half in earnest, masquerading as jest, Hillyard could not refrain from expressing his heart.

"I wish you'd keep me altogether," he said, "and preserve me from the Carlas of this world!"

And at that moment, within earshot but unobserved by either of them, because the copper beech they were standing beneath screened their view of the house, unheard because she was treading on soft turf, Carla, Gwen's third visitor, made her presence known by walking 'round the tree. If she had heard Hillyard's last words, she gave no outward indication of it, for she smiled upon him with honeyed sweetness and turned her attention to Gwen.

"Your mother said I should find you out here. My dear, I'm so relieved and pleased to see you're better!"

late will be called "Lady Betty," because she is still alive and has trouble enough. The lady part of it is correct, for she has that title. It was through this Lady Betty that Li met Billie Carleton. His first meeting with her ladyship was not far different from his introduction to me, and happened at the same restaurant. She, too, had begged him to show her the ropes and teach her to smoke opium.

My husband did not make a practice of such things, because usually only harm comes of it, and the Chinese who does the favor gets into hot water. He did it for Joan and me, because I interested him, but he was not personally attracted by Lady Betty. However, her title impressed him, and to refuse her seemed like refusing a Mandarin.

Against his better judgment he introduced Lady Betty to the chandu at his own house, and, just as he feared, she came back for more, and soon became a first-class nuisance. At last, to get rid of the titled pest, he pretended he could not get any more opium, and gave her the name of a Chinese who made it his business to peddle the gum to white people. He chose the most honest man he knew in that trade, which isn't saying much, and for some time was relieved of her.

Unfortunately Lady Betty quarrelled with this fellow and took up with another, a low-caste man, half Chinese and half Japanese, who sold her the gum somewhat cheaper but of poorer quality. Also he provided a tiny room and bed in Limehouse and the lady whose name is to be found in the Peerage was only too glad to dream away on his dirty cot.

While the Chinese rarely drinks to excess, this half-breed and half-caste did, and he had an English friend, Wellman, an out and out rascal, who had tried his hand at most every sort of crime and was always on the watch for a chance to blackmail someone. The half-caste mentioned to his friend Lady Betty's visits and the Englishman plied him with drinks until he learned what he wanted to know.

Next evening Lady Betty arrived at the half-caste's house. She was alone, mind you, which shows the grip that the pipe had got on her. For I must tell you that the half-caste's house was one of the most squalid in the district. It was in a street that ran off the Causeway and was one of a few places where the inside was as filthy and uninviting as the outside.

However, Lady Betty entered alone and she found herself received by the half-caste, who showed her into the room where she could smoke alone, except, of course, for the man who cooked the opium. There were other smokers in the house, but these were Lascars and other Asiatic sailors who gathered together, five or six of them, in one room to lie on the bare floor with only old sacks under them.

Lady Betty took off the frock she had come down in and put on a kimono which was hanging behind the door for her use. Then she clapped her hands and the "cook" came in with his lamp, bowl and pipe and began to prepare the opium.

By now, Lady Betty smoked the pipe far longer and deeper than ever I learned to do. She lay there and passed from one stage to another of the effects of the smoking, till at last she lay back, the pipe dropped from her hand, and she was fast asleep.

For about ten minutes the cook, a Chinese, sat there motionless, and then, very softly, he got up and went out of the room. Another five minutes passed, without a single sound breaking the death-like silence of the house. Then the door of the room where this daughter of a patrician family lay, like some jewel lost in a pigsty, in a complete stupor, opened very slowly.

Into the room stepped the Englishman friend of the half-caste. He tiptoed to the side of the bed and studied the girl for a moment.

By this time it was broad daylight and the intruder raised the shade, letting in the morning sun through the dirty panes. Then he pulled a camera from his pocket, focused carefully, took two pictures, pulled down the shade and silently withdrew.

In due time Lady Betty awoke. She sucked three oranges and then drank two cups of coffee before she got up and got herself ready to go home. Then, having bought the opium she wanted to take away, she left the house.

It was two or three days later when there called one morning at the house of Lord —— in —— Square a man who asked the footman if Lady Betty was at home.

When he was asked his name he said:

"She won't know my name. But tell her that I'm from the East End, and say it is very important."

The footman returned to say that Lady Betty was getting ready to go out, and that she was very busy. Would the man leave a message? The man said "No," but insisted that Lady Betty should see him at once, as she would find that the matter was really urgent. So at last Lady Betty came into the library, where the man was waiting.

"I'm a friend of ——'s," he said right away. Lady Betty started nervously, for he had mentioned the name of the half-caste. "I know about your visits down there and about your smoking the pipe. And as I'm out of a job and hard-up, I thought you might be kind enough to let me have a pound or two."

Lady Betty stared at him for a little. Then she looked contemptuously at him, although her voice was shaky.

"You mean you want to blackmail me?" she said. "Well, get on with it. There is only your word against mine, and I think I know which will be taken."

"That's quite right," said the man, "if it was an affair o' words. But it ain't. Have a look at these," he said, and he took two photos out of his pocket and handed them to her.

Lady Betty looked at them. She saw herself lying in negligee on a bed in what was obviously a room in a slum house, and on the coverlet there was what was unmistakably an opium pipe with its long, round, thick shape and tiny bowl three-quarters of the way down.

"How—where—where on earth did these come from?" she stammered.

"From my dark room," said the man. "Now do you think you would like to buy them off me. You can have the two negatives for a hundred pounds each. What about it?"

Lady Betty sat down, staggered.

"But I haven't got two hundred pounds in ready money," she said. "I'll have to think it over. I—I don't know what to say."

"That'll be all right," said the man. "I'll call back tomorrow. But you might let me have ten quid to carry on with. You see, I'm cleaned out. Was playing fan-tan in Pennyfields last night and they skinned me. Still, playing fan-tan ain't quite so bad as young ladies fiddling about with the gun alone in a half-caste's house at midnight. Now is it?"

"I'll give you ten pounds (fifty dollars)," Lady Betty said. "But you must not come here tomorrow. You must meet me somewhere else. Say at the tube station in Trafalgar Square at mid-day."

"That goes all right with me. Now then, what about the tenner?"

Lady Betty went upstairs, and in a few minutes the man from Limehouse had left the mansion in —— Square with ten pounds in his pocket. The appointment for next day was kept. Lady Betty was trembling with nervousness when she arrived, and she had stood there for a minute or so before the man from Limehouse stepped out of a telephone box where he had apparently been keeping watch to see if Lady Betty came alone.

"I have managed to get 200 pounds," she said. "Now then, give me those negatives and the prints you showed me."

She pulled out 40 five-pound notes and the man counted them. Then he produced the two prints and with them the two negatives and handed them over. Lady Betty took them with a big sigh of relief, and then she ran up the stairs and into the Strand.

Of course, nobody ever got rid of a blackmailer by paying him money, and in a month the same insinuating voice was on her telephone. He explained that he had just found another pair of those interesting prints, and as he had lost the last of that 200 pounds, perhaps Her Ladyship would like to buy them at the same price. Lady Betty realized that he would never sell her the last copy, and intended to tax her at this same ruinous rate the rest of her life. She made some sort of hysterical refusal, saying that she had no money. The blackmailer advised her to find it soon.

Like a hen with its head cut off, Lady Betty flew about London until she found Billie Carleton, who suggested appealing to Li. In hunting for him she encountered a mutual Chinese friend, who listened to the whole story with stolid face. The rambling tale ended with:

"What shall I do?"

"Do nothing," advised the imperturbable yellow man.

"Do nothing?" almost screamed the frantic woman, and repeated all over again what would happen if her family learned of her folly. The Chinaman listened patiently and repeated his counsel. Lady Betty followed it. Two days later she received in the mail a package of one dozen of the fatal prints, and the following news clipping:

"Early this morning, the Thames River Police took out of the water near the entrance to the Regent's Canal Docks the body of a man who had evidently been drowned. At the mortuary, later, the body was identified as that of James Wellman by a detective sergeant of 'K' Division, who knew the man as a convicted burglar and jewel thief. Wellman had been lately in the company of Asiatics, and it is thought by the police that he was thrown into the river after a quarrel with some of his associates over some spoil. The C. L. D. officers of 'K' Division are making further investigations."

He had not been thrown into the river, but dropped in through a trap door. He was fortunate, for there had been no torture or mutilation, because it was only a quarrel between two white persons. Wellman had been removed because his blackmailing activities against such a prominent personage threatened to make trouble for all Chinatown.

Let no woman who is playing with fire in Limehouse imagine from this that she will be relieved of blackmailers in any such convenient way. Lady Betty was lucky in that Wellman had no connections with any of the powerful Asiatic organizations. Had he, for instance, been one of Brilliant Chang's ruffians, no man would have dared to intervene.

The first real inside secret of Limehouse that I was permitted to know about was the vengeance dealt out to unfaithful wives. Perhaps they thought it might be a lesson that I would take to heart. It was. I will tell about it next week.

Romance By Request

By Steuart M. Emery

"Of course you do," she murmured. "That's all my fault too. I'm a fraud and a mischief-maker and not in the least the angel darling Georgette called me. I did do my best for you when I could. I'm a very, very modern girl, Stephen—"

"You certainly are."

"But I don't intend to propose to any man unless I absolutely have to."

"Jane!"

There was no mistaking now the message in the violet eyes. Barque Haven had brought to him a glorious girl for all his days.

"Stephen, do be careful! You hurt that arm to tell me how much you loved me! Don't hurt it to prove it all over again!"

"It's the other one around you, Jane!" His voice rang clear and triumphant. "The fight is finished! To the victors belong—"

Soft lips met his and a blissful silence fell in the sunny, white-walled room. Somewhere close at hand hummed and sang the life of a great Summer hotel but two young people had drifted away into a mystic realm of their own.

"Romance and adventure," he breathed. "Yes, Jane?"

"More than that, Stephen. Just peace. And it's come to stay."

The End.

Let's Have a Salad

By Mrs. Christine Frederick,
The Distinguished Authority on Household Efficiency.

THERE is no better way to secure the full value of vitamins or the refreshing succulence of crisp vegetables than to eat them in cooling salad form. Many fruits, too, which are monotonous if always eaten with sugar or in cooked form, gain new interest when chilled and covered with a sharp or piquant dressing.

The ingredients for a salad should always be clean, crisp and cool. In order that the pieces be in the most convenient form for eating, they should be cut neither too large nor too small. All the materials should be dry before the dressing is added, which should always be done the last moment before serving.

There are seven things to remember in making salads:

1. Contrasts in flavor are more pleasing to the taste.

2. Contrasts in texture are more agreeable to masticate.

3. Contrasts in color are more pleasing to the eye.

4. Usually not more than three ingredients and one additional garnish should be combined.

6. All cooked ingredients should be tender.

7. Portions should not appear overladen.

Also it is important to distinguish between salads which are used between courses and those which are used as main dishes.

Salads between other courses should be crisp and refreshing with simple dressing. But salad as a main dish may be richer and be made more substantial by the addition of one or more protein foods, such as cooked meat, fish, eggs, cheese, nuts or such starchy products as corn, potatoes or macaroni.

No matter what the fruit or vegetable combination, it is the dressing that gives the zest, the different flavor to each salad. Indeed, we may make two entirely different dishes from the same identical ingredients merely by varying the dressing. There are any number of individual varieties, yet when studied, we find that they practically all fall into two types: either the dressing of oil and acid, uncooked and variously seasoned; or the dressing of oil, acid and egg-yolks, uncooked, but beaten until it stands alone, which is called mayonnaise.

Any woman who can successfully follow a master recipe has hundreds of variations at her spoon's end simply by the trick of changing the seasonings and the accessories used. It is the dressing which binds the separate ingredients into a harmonious blended whole. Tarragon usually secured in vinegar gives a delightful tang. All the mustard family—of which cress and nasturtium are the prominent members—basil, coriander seed, chive, garlic, pepper and pimiento—these are the most popular seasonings to give spicy variety.

The accessories served with a salad—cheese balls or straws, crackers spread with tasty mixtures, dainty salad rolls and unique sandwiches—these have much to do with its success. Nor must we omit the garnish—parsley, gay-stuffed olives, sprinklings of nut-meats—or overlook the charm and originality with which the ingredients should be combined and made into a food picture.

The following outline will give suggestions for the all-occasion salad dish during the Summer season. The ingredients are listed in order of their importance in the salad:

Summer Salads as Courses.

Tomato, cabbage, green pepper.
Tomato, asparagus, beets.
Tomato, cucumber, cress.
Tomato, string-beans, onion.
Tomato, eggplant.
Tomato, peas, celery.
Cabbage, apple, celery.

Shrimp, asparagus, celery.
Crabmeat, cucumbers, celery.
Lobster, tomatoes, egg, onion.
Shrimp, mushrooms, celery.
Chicken, cucumber, pimiento.
Sweetbreads, veal, peas, celery.

Fruit-Salad Combinations.

Apricots, pineapple, marshmallows, nut-meats.
Pears, cherries, grapefruit.
Plums, pineapple, celery, nut-meats.
Cherries, celery, nut-meats.
Pears, dates, almonds.
White grapes, cherries, celery, nut-meats.
Pears, cheese, celery, nut-meats.

DRESSINGS.

Thousand Island Dressing.

Mix together a little paprika, salt, lemon juice and Worcestershire sauce and whip it lightly into ½ cup mayonnaise. Add very finely chopped white and yolk of small hard cooked egg, 1 pimiento and 1 tablespoon chives, or when they are not in season scallion tops, but be sure all are chopped very fine. Add 1 tablespoon chili sauce and 3 tablespoons whipped cream.

Sour Cream Dressing.

Beat ½ pint sour cream with an egg beater until is as stiff as for charlotte russe. Mix together 2 tablespoons vinegar, 1 scant tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon paprika and 1 teaspoon French mustard.

Gradually add this mixture to the cream and beat briskly as you pour it in.

Russian Dressing.

Russian dressing is a variation of mayonnaise, and many are the combinations that pass under this name.

A delightful touch is sometimes given by the addition of a little anchovy paste, olives, capers, chopped sweet pickles and whipped cream. In case these are used, omit the peppers, pimientos, chives and egg from the following recipe: ⅔ cup of mayonnaise, 2 teaspoons chopped green pepper, 2 teaspoons pimientos, 3 tablespoons chili sauce, 2 teaspoons chopped chives, yolk of hard-boiled egg, sifted, ½ teaspoon paprika.

ESTELLE TAYLOR'S skin is like velvet.

Lovely Skin Essential Says Movie Director

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.—James Cruze, well-known Hollywood director, agrees with 38 other foremost movie directors that a lovely skin is the first requisite of a girl's charm. "Few people can resist the spell of smooth lovely skin," he says.

"Every woman wants beautiful skin, but a star must have it!" Estelle Taylor, famous screen and stage star, says. And like 442 of the 451 important actresses in Hollywood, she recommends Lux Toilet Soap for keeping the skin charming. "This white fragrant soap is a boon to me in keeping my skin heavenly smooth," she says.

Nine out of ten screen stars depend on Lux Toilet Soap to guard their lovely skin, and it has been made the official soap in the dressing rooms of all the great Hollywood film studios.

Something a Little Different

By Mary Lee Swann.
The Well-Known Writer and Lecturer on Cooking.

Fried Pickled Pig's Feet.

DRAIN pickled pigs' feet and wipe with a dry cloth. Dip in well-seasoned batter and cook in hot deep fat until golden and garnish with crisp parsley.

Pimiento and Egg Timbales.

BUTTER 1 dozen small fluted timbale molds and line each with a well drained canned pimiento. Pour the following egg mixture into the molds, having it even with top of pimientoes. Place in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven until firm in center. Unmold on rounds of hot buttered toast. Serve with cream sauce.

Egg Timbales.

BEAT 6 eggs with 1 teaspoon salt, a few grains paprika, ½ teaspoon onion juice and 1½ cups milk. A little minced parsley may be added. Pour into molds lined with pimiento or plain buttered molds. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven until firm in center.

Creamed Cucumbers.

PEEL crisp green cucumbers, cut in quarters and remove seed. Cut in inch pieces. Let stand in ice water ½ hour. Then cook in boiling salted water until tender. Drain and to 1 pint of the cooked cucumbers add 1 pint of well seasoned Bechamel sauce. Let stand over hot water about 15 minutes. Just before serving add 2 egg yolks beaten with 1 teaspoon lemon juice and stir until egg is set.

Delicious Lima Beans.

COOK 1 quart fresh lima beans in boiling water until tender, adding 1 teaspoon salt the last half hour. When tender beat ¼ cup butter until smooth, add 2 egg yolks and continue beating, while adding 1 teaspoon minced parsley, a few grains pepper, 1½ tablespoons lemon juice and a little paprika. Pour 1½ or 2 cups liquid from the beans into the mixture and stir until smooth. Pour over the beans and shake or stir with a fork until egg is set.

HAIR LOVELINESS
—truly your own!
(Here's how to have it—always!)

Is your hair exactly the same shade and texture as that of your friends? Of course it isn't! Why, then, should you shampoo it exactly as they do?

Every shade of hair has its own peculiar needs—hence each requires its own special treatment. The problem is to find the shampoo that suits your hair; the one that will banish all dullness and drabness and bring out its own natural beauty.

That's why so many women prefer the new Golden Glint Shampoo. It is truly individual! Simple directions tell how to shampoo your own particular shade of hair to give it that fashionable "tiny-tint" and bring out those rich hidden undertones. Just one Golden Glint Shampoo will show you the way! 25c at your dealers'—or send for free sample.

A NEW DISCOVERY

Pyrol Soothes the Fire of Sunburn Instantly

OLD Man Sunshine is a practical joker. He bestows his warm caress on little cheeks and shoulders—then wheels away in his fiery chariot, leaving a red trail of blistering pain. Sunburn is the tragic aftermath of summer fun.

Play safe this summer. Let Pyrol be the family bodyguard. It will turn the usual fiery red into a coat of healthy tan. After exposure to burning sun, apply Pyrol liberally at once. Relief will come instantly. Soreness will soon be gone.

Inhibits bacteria, practically odorless, easy to use. Its cooling, soothing effect is immediate. Keep a tube always close at hand. Pyrol is indispensable in the treatment of all forms of skin irritation. At your druggist's in the big red tubes, 50 cents. Kip Corporation, Los Angeles.

NERVE!

...in a cigarette it's

TASTE!

MILD and yet
THEY SATISFY

WHEN it comes to taste, the really fine cigarette begins where the average cigarette leaves off. Something more than ordinary tobaccos and routine care are needed to produce the aroma and character that are Chesterfield's own.

Not ordinary tobaccos, but tobaccos chosen, one by one, in all the leaf markets of the world, for flavor, richness, mildness ...tobaccos matured and mellowed by ageing, in Nature's perfect way.

Not routine care, but tobaccos blended to scientific balance, to bring out the finer qualities that make a cigarette—and "cross-blended," the Chesterfield way, to round out and perfect the delicious flavor.

Chesterfield is much more than "something to smoke," just because each step is governed by taste, above everything. And long experience has taught us—and Chesterfield smokers as well—that a really fine cigarette can be made by no other rule.

SPIRIT OF '76—By A. M. Willard—This famous painting is perhaps the best known art work based on the American War of Independence. It was painted in 1876 by a New England artist, and now hangs in Abbott Hall, Marblehead, Mass. Its publication is peculiarly appropriate with the celebration this week of the 153rd anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

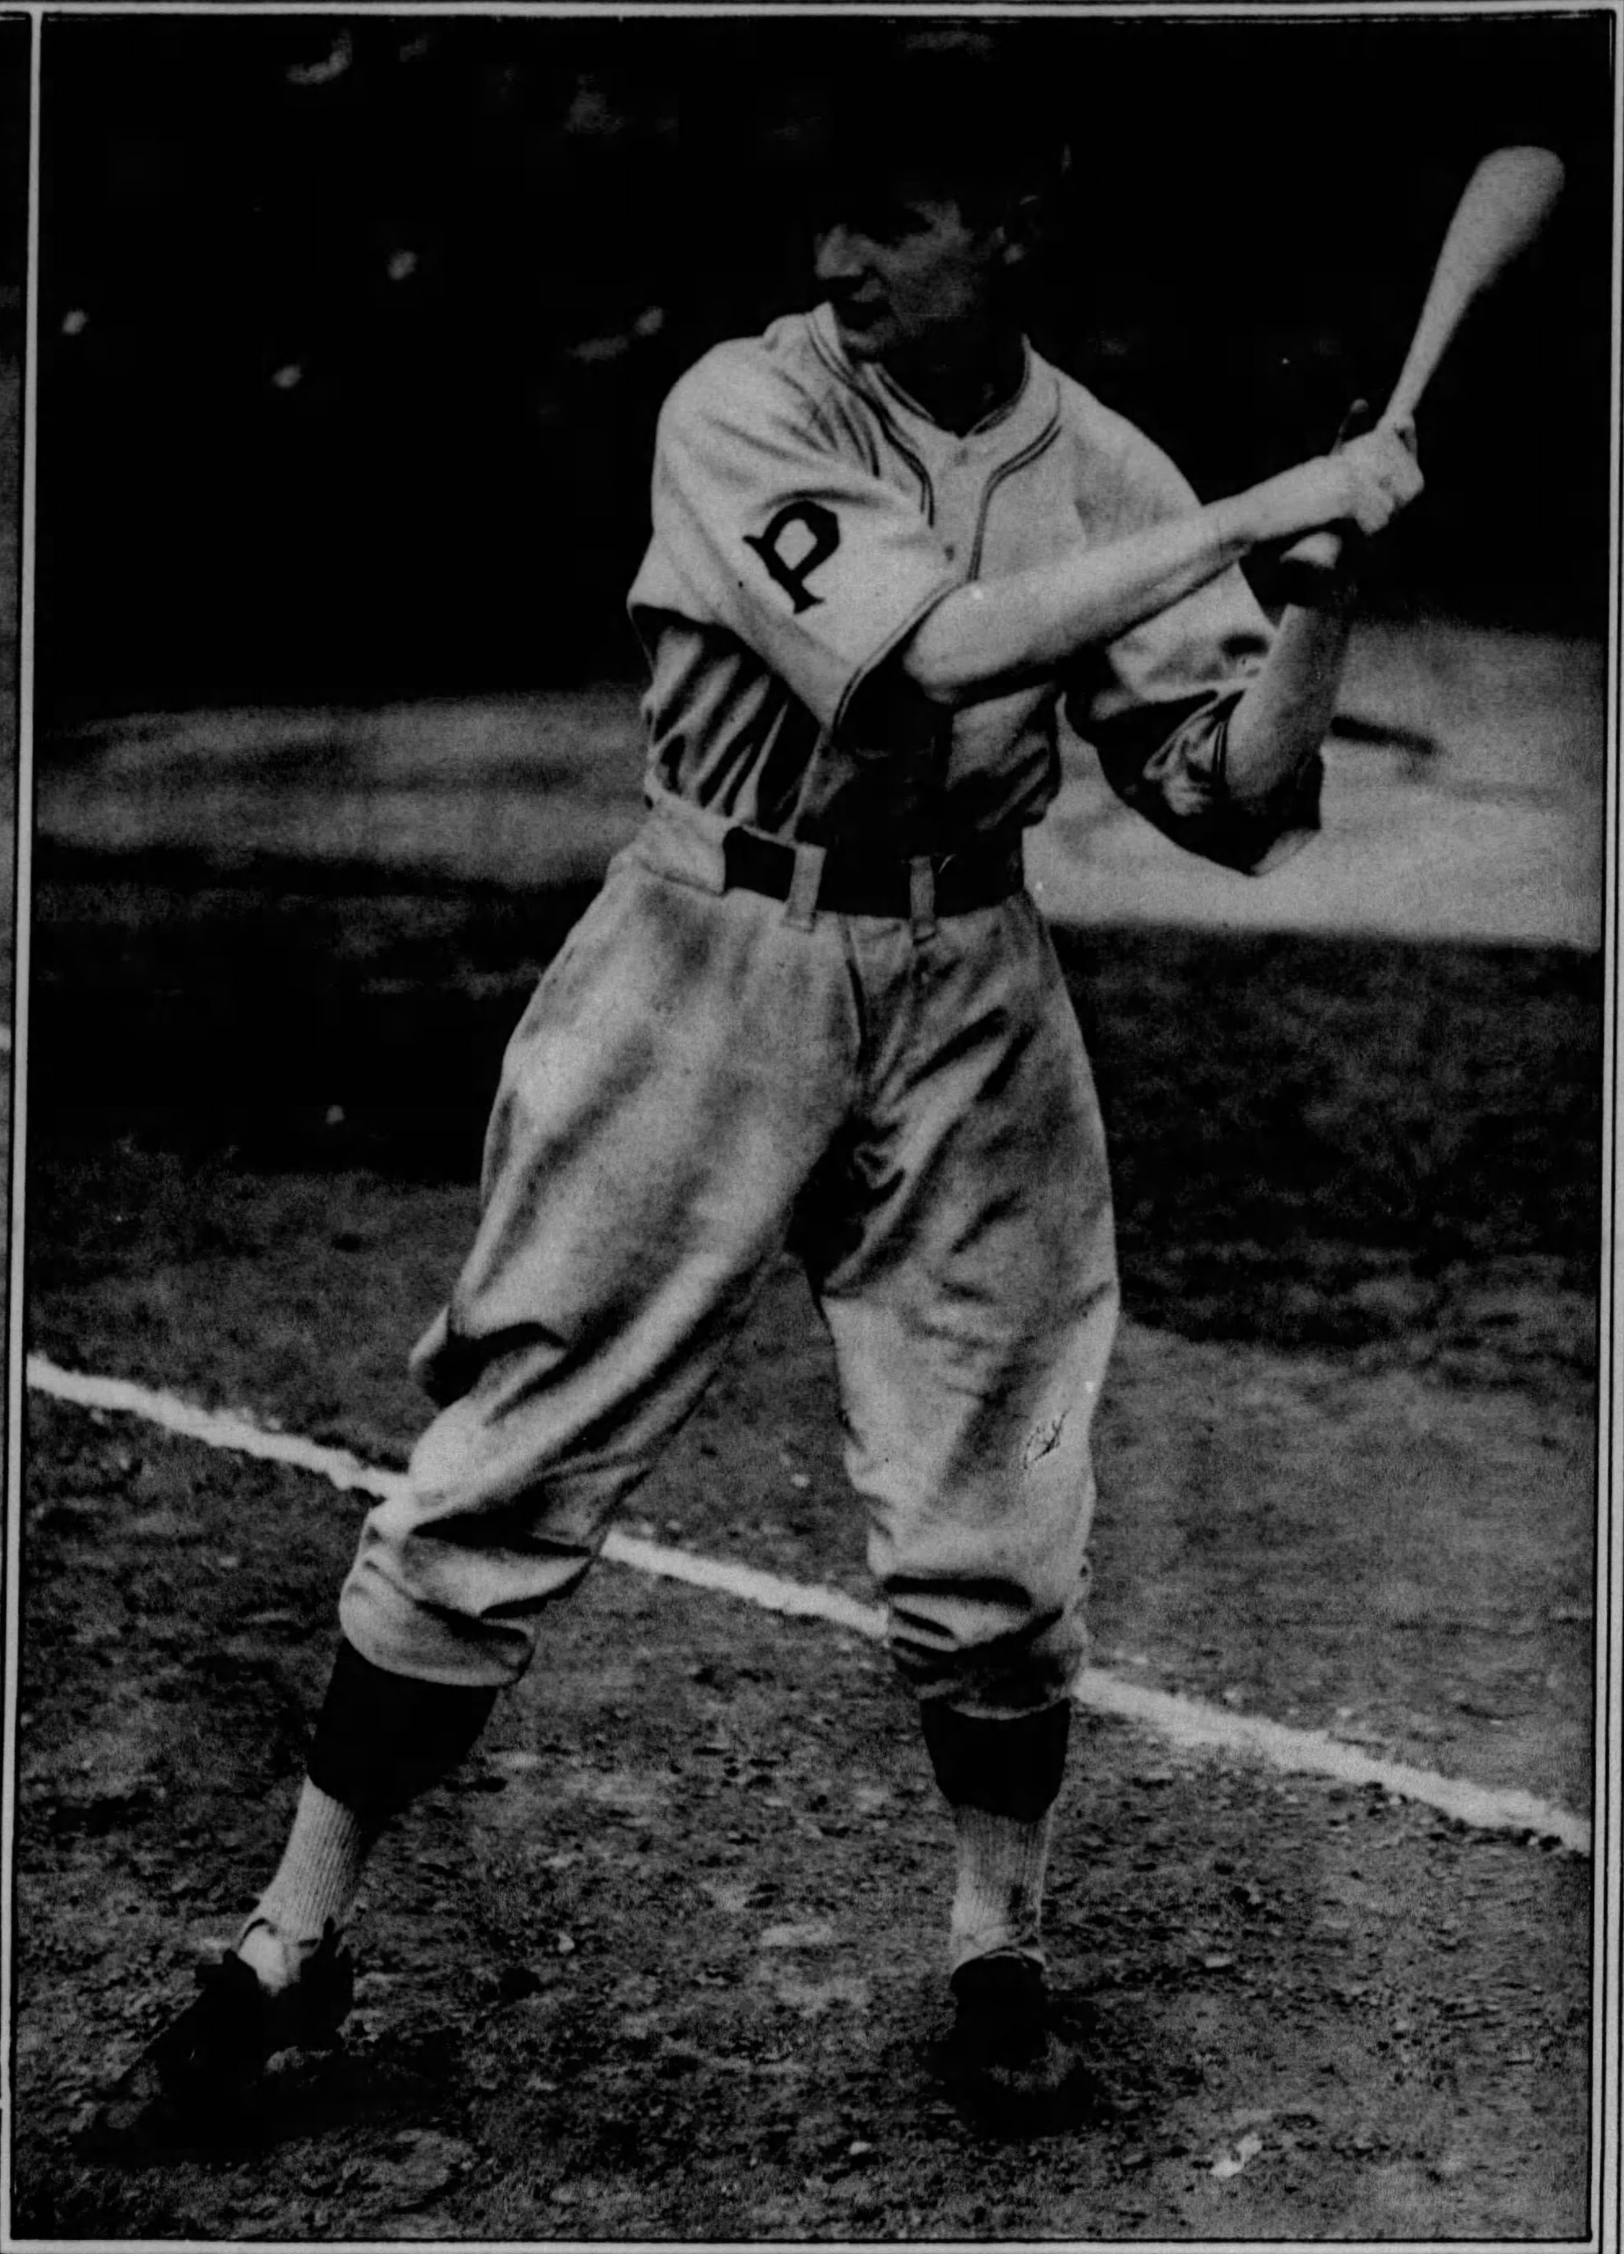
PAUL WANER



LLOYD WANER

BROTHERS AT THE BAT—Paul Waner, star rightfielder of the Pittsburgh Pirates and two years ago the most valuable performer in the National League, now is batting in his customary style. The season found him off to a slow start, but he has regained his batting eye and again is hitting the ball in commendable fashion. The other Waner brother, Lloyd, who plays center field, is fleet of foot and possesses an accurate eye for judging line drives and flies. He ranks as one of the best fly chasers in the National League. Lloyd's batting, since the season got under way, also has been consistent and timely.

WASHINGTON BOUND—Meet "Admiral Rodman" and "Lady Baranoff," two Kodiak bear cubs. They were captured on the Baranoff Island by Campbell Church, Jr., Seattle, Wash., and his wife, and are to be presented to the National Zoo at Washington, D. C.

JEAN—Daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. H. Henninger, of 715 Aiken Avenue, who has returned home after completing her senior year at Wellesley College.

(Photo by Bachrach)

BETTY—Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hector Griffith, of 3533 California avenue, Ben Avon, was prominent in the minstrel show given in the Allegheny High School recently. She was featured in several interpretations of the Terpsichorean art.

MOVIE FASHION—Tulle and ostrich join hands and achieve ravishing results in a gown worn by Evelyn Brent, screen star. The ostrich is used in a series of long plumes shading from pink to rose, creating the entire skirt, while a shower of tulle matches the paler shading of the feathers.

HISTORIC.

St. Luke's of Chartiers, Episcopal, at Woodville, is said to be the oldest church in Western Pennsylvania. It was established, as a stockaded place of worship, in 1765. Above is pictured the present edifice, which was dedicated in 1854. On the left is the historic organ of the church. The organ is said to be more than 100 years old. It was brought to Pittsburgh on pack horses. It was first installed in the Trinity Church, Sixth avenue, and later was presented to St. Luke's. Mrs. Sarah Cowan, aged 78, is seen before the organ. She first played it many years ago, when she was 16 years old. At the right is the Rev. Thomas Frederick Cooper, rector of St. Luke's, standing before the main entrance of the church.

NEVER FOR DINNER—Edward Gabell, who, with his brother, has lived in a house boat below the Manchester bridge, Ohio River, for 35 years, has 50 chickens. But he never serves any of them as food. They are his pets exclusively.

RIDE 'EM—Miss Betty K. Roth and her mount, Noble, are shown here cavorting in the ring of the Los Angeles Cal. Coliseum before visiting delegates attending the recent Shriners' convention in the California city. The show, put on for the edification of the Shriners, was called the "Circus Maximus." It was the most gigantic entertainment of its kind ever staged, it was said.

TALLYHO, TO THE RACES THEY GO—A picturesque vehicle arrives at the track at Brookline, R. I., for the annual races of the Brookline Country Club. Benjamin I. Cook is the man on the box. The coach is the property of Mrs. John Russell Gladding of Providence, who also is one of the passengers.

CHIC SILHOUETTE—Dark and slim is the chic silhouette of the season. Frances Kay, motion picture actress, hearkens to the dictates of fashion and wears an evening gown of black crepe and tulle that falls in subtle and lengthy folds to the ground.

SCULPTRESS — Helen Dailey, youthful Peabody High School student, who shows a talent for sculpturing, is seen on the left. She is one of the most accomplished members in the school's class of sculpture, which is under the tutelage of Prof. Vincent Roy.

HAPPY TRIO—Mrs. Roland A. McCrady of Maple Avenue, Edgewood, and her two children, Janice, aged 2, and Allen, aged six months. Mrs. McCrady is the former Ethel Dwyer, prominent actress. Four or so years ago she appeared in Pittsburgh as leading woman in "Abie's Irish Rose," then on an extended stage engagement here.

OUT WHERE THE PARK BEGINS—This is an interesting photographic study of the Highland Avenue entrance to Highland Park. Note the intriguing cloud effects—nature's artistic achievement. And note the monumental statues—man's artistic achievement—that stand alert and welcoming in sunshine or rain.

LOTS OF SUNSHINE HERE—An airplane view of the Lillian Fresh Air Home at Valencia, Pa. The home, operated by the Kingsley Association, affords a vacation for many mothers and children located in the congested districts of the city and in the surrounding industrial towns. It is located on a 90-acre estate. There are swimming pools, athletic fields and other recreational facilities. (Copyright, Aerial Surveys of Pittsburgh, Inc.)

UNDER ONE FLAG—These nine Pittsburgh youths, united under Old Glory, represent as many nationalities. They are Morris Cholski, Polish; Arthur Chalken, Russian; Dan O'Leary, Irish; Jack Robin, Czecho-Slovakian; Melvin Rosenfeld, Jewish; Leo Zader, Syrian; Lawrence Fedoba, Roumanian; Louis Frankard, German, and Sam Penali, Italian.

HIGH UP—The snow is, perhaps, a little softer—and that is to say a little wetter—but it is sufficiently compact to provide good sport and so summer ski meets continue 11,500 feet up on the famous Jungfrau in Switzerland.

STAR—Lacroix, Belgian tennis star, reaches for a high one during the match in which he defeated Mishn of Roumania during the Davis Cup trials in Brussels.

Oily Skin Physic

New skin physic quickly corrects oily skin, refines coarse pores, makes old-looking, poor-color skin youthfully clear, heals eruptions and dissolves blackheads

Physicing the skin corrects oily skin almost instantly

Oily skin, poor-color skin and blemishes are due to acid-skin impurities. And, everybody knows there is nothing like magnesia to neutralize acid. So, when the face is massaged with cremed magnesia the skin throws off even the most deep-set pore impurities. It physics the skin in the same easy way that milk of magnesia purifies the stomach. That's why magnesia is called the beauty miracle of modern science.

Physicing the skin rejuvenates the complexion so quickly that any face looks years younger in five minutes. It changes old-looking, poor-color skin to youthful clearness and fades out freckles better than a bushel of lemons. It's astringent; it reduces enlarged pores to the finest texture and smoothes out the tell-tale lines of age almost as if by magic.

It removes make-up better than soap or cleansing cream. And, because it's so mild, it's a blessing for fine, sensitive skin that soap so easily irritates and coarsens. That's why mothers use it to bathe infants. No wonder thousands of doctors urge their wives, patients and nurses to use nothing but magnesia to cleanse their faces.

No More Ugly Nose Pores

Thousands of delighted women send letters of praise and say they did not at first believe anything so simple could be so wonderful. But, they were convinced when they saw so many friends suddenly get lovely complexions.

To get genuine cremed magnesia, ask for Denton's Facial Magnesia. When you use it you will at once see why druggists find it hard to get enough to supply the tremendous demand.

NOTE: These facts about the amazing skin-beautifying virtues of magnesia were learned from the experience of the first hundred thousand women who bought it. Because of its superior skin-beautifying qualities, magnesia is rapidly replacing the use of soap and cleansing cream with millions of women who give intelligent care to their complexions.

MAYTAG LEADERSHIP is the Expression of Public Acceptance

WHEN a single product like THE MAYTAG gains world leadership, it is evidence of overwhelming advantages. The greatest number of people have agreed that the Maytag is the highest and most satisfactory expression of washday service.

This preference is due largely to features originated by Maytag—the seamless, cast-aluminum tub, the gyrafoam washing action and the Roller Water Remover. These advantages enhanced by silent, precision-cut steel gears and lifetime construction give the Maytag its dominant position in the washer industry.
